650 ii. ———.]—In order for a part payment of a debt to avoid the effect of Stat. Limitations it is not necessary that the payment should actually pass from the debtor to the creditor in the form of money. Therefore, where the debtor, the maker of a promissory note, performed work for the creditor for which he was entitled to a certain sum & they agreed that it should be applied on the note then overdue & the creditor so applied it:—Held: the arrangement took the debt out of the Statute.—WILSON v. BROWN, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 733.—CAN.

the debtors to pay interest on the loan, but he was told by them that they were unable at that time to do so, but that they hoped to pay it before long. In 1927 an arrangement was made whereby the debtors' obligation to pay interest was to be discharged or partly discharged by applt. living on one of the partnership farms rent & rates free & being provided with farm produce without charge. This continued until 1935. In Dec. 1935, the debtors entered into a deed of arrangement for the benefit of their creditors. Applt. sought to have his claim for £4,200 admitted to proof. The trustee of the deed of arrangement contended that the debt was statute-barred:—Held: the services rendered to applt. in pursuance of the arrangement in 1927 constituted a continuous acknowledgment of the debt, which was, therefore, not statute-barred & ought to be admitted to proof.—*Re WILSON, Ex p. 672a. —.]—An account stated may take the form only of a mere acknowledgment of a debt; in that case though it amounts to a promise from which the existence of a debt may be inferred that inference may be rebutted, & then there is no consideration & no binding promise. But there is another form in which the account stated includes items on both sides, & the parties have agreed that there shall be a set-off & that only the balance shall be paid; in that case there is a promise for good consideration to pay the balance even though some of the debts were barred by limitation. The account stated in the present case being in the latter form, it was unnecessary to decide whether the implied promise was "a promise made in writing" so as to be, by sect. 25 (3) of the India Contract Act, 1872 (which applied locally), an effective agreement to pay statute barred debts although it was made without consideration.—SIQUEIRA v. NORONHA, [1934] A. C. 332; 103 L. J. P. C. 63; 151 L. T. 6, P. C.

672b. Moneylending transactions.]—Applts., who carried on business as moneylenders in India, had for twenty-five years been lending money to resps. On the debit side of applts.' ledger was the entry: "Balance due to be received after adjusting the account up to Sept. 26, 1925, Rs.10,043," & an entry on the same page that that sum was due to be paid by them was signed by both resps. The last loan granted to resps. was in fact in Aug. 1921, & the date of the previous acknowledgment of the accounts by them was also in 1921. No payment having been made, after request, of the sum due on Sept. 26, 1925, applts., on Aug. 17, 1927, began the present proceedings for its recovery. Resps., relying on the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, pleaded that "within three years from the date of the institution of the suit" they had neither contracted any debt to applts. nor paid them any sum of money. The trial judge found that there was in fact a settlement of account between the parties on Sept. 26, 1925, so that the balance then struck became itself a debt which was to carry future interest, & he gave judgment for the moneylenders, holding that there was an "account stated" within sect. 64 of Indian Limitation Act, 1908. On appeal that judgment was reversed on the ground that the words "account stated" could not properly be applied to a moneylending transaction where the borrower was always the debtor of the lender; such transactions, it was held, were entirely unilateral & there could be no statement of a mutual account so as to satisfy the words in the Limitation Act, "accounts stated between them":—Held: the decision of the trial judge should be upheld. The closest parallel to the present case was that of accounts between banker & customer, & it had not been doubted that in law there could be a settled or stated account between banker & customer.—BISHUN CHAND FIRM v. SETH GIRDHARI LAL (1934), 50 T. L. R. 465; 78 Sol. Jo. 446, P. C.

864a. — Effect of statute—Loss of right of re-entry.—In 1912 freshhold land was conveyed to purchasers in consideration of & subject to a perpetual yearly rentcharge of £25 a year issuing out of the land & the buildings to be erected thereon, payable half-yearly in Mar. & Sept. The grantees entered into a covenant for payment, & the conveyance also contained a power of re-entry exercisable by the vendor, his heirs, executors, administrators & assigns, owner or owners for the time being of the said rentcharge if & whenever the rentcharge should be in arrear & unpaid for one year, but limited to take effect during the lives of the parties thereto & the lives of the issue then living of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria & the survivors & survivor of them, & twenty-one years after the death of the survivor, & such other period (if any) as should be lawful. No part of the yearly rentcharge of £25 was ever paid, & in 1931 the vendor sued to recover possession with mesne profits. Def't. pleaded that the rentcharge & all remedies to recover the same were statute barred:—Held: on the true construction of the deed, pl'tf. was not entitled to enforce the right of re-entry given him by that deed unless at the time when he sought to enforce that right he was in a position to assert that he was the owner of the rentcharge thereby created. It was conceded by pl'tf. that on Mar. 26, 1925, the rentcharge ceased to exist. At that time, therefore, his right to enforce or recover any arrears of rentcharge came to an end. That being so, it was impossible for pl'tf. to assert that at the date when he issued the writ in this action he was the owner of the rentcharge. On Apr. 30, 1924, the term became vested in deft., C. Neither on Dec. 25, 1914, nor thereafter to the date of the writ, did either

R. or C. pay to pltf. the rent due under the lease. In an action by pltf. for possession of the premises, begun on Jan. 28, 1928:—Held: (1) although pltf.'s right to re-enter upon the premises first accrued to him in respect of the non-payment of rent on Dec. 25, 1914, his claim to possession was not barred by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 1, & Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 27), s. 3, as not having been made within twelve years next after the time at which the right to make such entry had first accrued, but his right to re-enter accrued afresh in respect of each subsequent quarter day whenever any part of the rent reserved under the lease was in arrear for twenty-one days, & he was, therefore, entitled to rely on the last non-payment of rent before writ issued or any previous non-payment up to twelve years before writ; (2) the case was governed by s. 3 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 3, which provides that all actions for debt for rent there mentioned shall be commenced & sued within twenty years after the cause of such action, but not after, & not by Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27), s. 42, which provides that no arrears of rent shall be recovered by any action but within six years next after the same shall have become due, & that, therefore, deft., C., would have to pay or tender to pltf. all, & not merely six years of, the arrears of rent owing under the lease in order to defeat pltf.'s claim by recourse to Common Law Procedure Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 212, & to obtain relief under Supreme Ct. of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 46.—*BARRATT v. L. received dividends to clear the interest up to 1908, when they ceased & the shares became of practically no value, L. retaining them, but without foreclosing. In 1916 & thereafter the value of the shares increased enormously, & such large dividends were paid that by 1921 L. had received sufficient to pay off the capital of the loan & all interest in arrear. ### PART VII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

1704 i. — Unless inequitable to do so.—Though the Stat. of Limitations by its terms does not operate directly upon equitable remedies, such remedies are barred in pts. of equity by analogy to the Statute. The analogy is found in the case of constructive trusts, where the equity is fastened upon the trustee not because he intended to become the fiduciary of property, but because of the character of his dealings & in spite of his intention to take the property for himself. But pts. of equity have refused to see any analogy when a person, intending to act in a capacity which is fiduciary, has received as & for the beneficial property of another, something which he is to hold, apply, or account for specifically for his benefit. Such a person is either an express trustee or, if that name does not in strictness belong to him, he stands in the same position as a direct or express trustee. Therefore, where pltf. entrusted the sale of her furniture to deft. & authorised him to receive the proceeds on her behalf, & where deft. received money from an insurance co. on account of a loss sustained by pltf.:—Held: deft. was under an obligation to account specifically for the money, the receipt of which was not intended to create a mere debt; &, therefore, the

Stat. of Limitations did not apply to an action to recover such sums; but where pltf. was entitled to payment of a sum of money from a person in Germany & authorised deft. to obtain such money & pay it to her, the transaction which the parties performed to enable deft. to acquire such money showed that he was not expected to account specifically for the money he received or the goods into which it was transformed or the proceeds of these goods, & this cause of action was subject to the Stat. of Limitations.—*COHEN v. Deft. had told pltf. that he had not previously been married, & in the pre-nuptial contract & marriage certificate he was described as a bachelor. In 1924 deft. denied a suggestion that he was a married man. In 1932 he answered a further suggestion by admitting a Gretna Green marriage which he said had not been legal. Deft. had, in fact, been legally married in 1900, but he had not seen his wife, nor heard from or of her for about 22 years before he met pltf. In an action for breach of promise & for fraud, deft. contended that in 1922 he thought that his wife was dead & that he was free to marry, & he denied that he had fraudulently concealed the fact that he had been previously married. As regards the breach of promise, he relied on Stat. Limitations. The jury were directed that if deft. had fraudulently concealed the fact that he was married & they were satisfied that pltf. did not know the true facts till within six years of the issue of the writ, they should find for pltf. 1894a. —. —Pltt., on Aug. 12, 1935, was injured in a collision between his bicycle & a tramcar. On Oct. 15, 1935, he issued a writ claiming damages for personal injuries & consequential loss sustained by reason of the negligence of defts., their servants or agents. The case was remitted to the county ct. & on Nov. 22, 1935, particulars of claim were delivered to which were added particulars of negligence setting up a case of negligent driving. On May 1, 1936, further particulars were by leave of the registrar added which set up a case of neglect to keep the tram track & highway in repair, describing the neglect as a breach of statutory duty. On appeal the county ct. judge reversed the decision of the registrar & disallowed the amendment:—Held: the amendment introduced a new case which if set up in an action commenced at the date of the amendment would have been barred by lapse of time, & the amendment must be disallowed; the indorsement of the writ did not contain sufficient particulars of the nature of the claim as it did not specify what duty the deft. had failed to perform. This defect had, however, been remedied by the statement of claim; the indorsement of the writ being in too general terms, the amendment could not be supported as being within the claim there made.—*MARSHALL v. Its agent, C., obtained from pltf. an application, on deft.'s printed form, for an "instalment savings certificate," & deft. issued to pltf. a certificate for "instalment shares." It had no power to issue an "instalment savings certificate." Pltf., after ascertaining his rights & obligations under the certificate issued to him, sued for cancellation of the application & certificate & for return of moneys paid, on the grounds, (a) that the application was a nullity;

(b) that it was for a savings certificate, & in view of the kind of certificate issued, was not accepted; & (c) misrepresentation by C.:—Held: the application should be declared null & void unless it was clearly established that by "instalment savings certificate" both pltf. & C. meant a certificate for a certain specific kind of share which deft. could issue; & the onus of establishing that their minds were ad idem as to this rested on deft.—*BAKER v. County Council, on a main road in the A. urban district. He was elected a member of the A. Urban District Council in 1928. When the Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), came into force the A. Urban District Council claimed to exercise the functions of maintenance & repair in respect of county roads in the district, & D. was employed as before, his wages being now paid by the urban district council, which was entitled to be reimbursed by the county council.—Held: D. was disqualified for being elected or being a member of the A. 15 l. Being concerned in any contract with authority.—Deft. had been elected reeve of a township corpn. in Jan. 1918, & again in Jan. 1919, by acclamation, & continued to act as reeve until June 23, 1919, when he disclaimed the office, owing to proceedings having been taken to unseat him. A new election took place on July 14, 1919, when deft. was again elected reeve. At a meeting of the township council held on June 25, 1919, all claims which deft. had against the township corpn. were settled; & on July 3, 1919, deft. signed a receipt for $48, "being in payment of . . . all accounts, claims & demands of every nature & kind against the said municipality".—Held: this release removed all possible disqualification of deft. in respect of any claims that he had against corpn., & he was not disqualified by Municipal Act, R. S. O., 1914, s. 53 (p), as a person having an interest in a contract with corpn.—R. (DART) v. CURRY (1919), 46 O. L. R. 297.—CAN.

15 ll. —.]—Resp.'s father was the agent of an insurance co. & employed resp. at a salary, but not on commission, as a canvasser. The father asked the city council to take a renewal of a policy, & resp. supported him in his request. The council decided to take the renewal, & a policy was issued & was in force at the time of the municipal election in Jan. 1923, at which resp. was a successful candidate for the office of alderman.—Held: resp. had no interest in any contract with the city corpn., & so was not ineligible as a candidate within sect. 53 (1) (p) of Consolidated Municipal Act, 1922.—R. (GARDINER) v. KETCHUMSON (1923), 53 O. L. R. 525.—CAN.

d l. —.]—In the year 1931, applt. held the office of alderman of the city of Montreal & was re-elected in 1932. Previous to his election he owned lots on Allard street, & in 1931, he built a three-storey house thereon. Sometime in the early part of 1931 applt. suggested to the chief of police that this house would be suitable for a police sub-station, alleged to be needed; & after examination of the premises & reports by officials of the city, on Apr. 23, 1931, the city's notary received instructions to prepare a lease of the property at $125 per month. On Apr. 27 applt. transferred his property to his daughter for a sum of $9,500, payable in five years, nothing being paid on account, applt. reserving his privilege de bailleur de fonds & an hypothec on the property for the full amount. On June 6, 1931, a lease was signed between the city & applt.'s daughter for a term of ten years at $125 for the first five years & $150 for the other five years.—Held: applt. was disqualified as alderman of the city of Montreal, as, according to the facts of the case, he was "directly or indirectly interested" in the lease to which, by its terms, his daughter & the city were the parties.—*ANGRIGNON v. In Oct. 1929, resp. agreed to convey the land to D. upon certain terms, one of which was that she should assume payment of the unpaid taxes.—Held: resp.'s taxes being at the time of the election in 1930 overdue & unpaid, he was not eligible to be elected a member of the township council or to sit or vote therein.—R. v. SMUCK, [1930] 3 D. L. R. 714; 65 O. L. R. 213.—CAN.

sz. —.] Town Act, R.S.S., 1930, provides, by sect. 19, that every person shall be eligible for election as mayor or councillor who is a British subject, etc., & not subject to any disqualification under said Act or Controverted Municipal Elections Act. Sect. 20 provides that no person indebted to the town shall be qualified to be a member of the council.—Held: the fact that at the times of his nomination & election a person elected mayor had not paid the taxes levied against him did not disqualify him, taxes not being a debt unless expressly declared so by statute, & there being no such declaration in said Act.—R. (ISMAN) v. TRAN, [1936] 1 W. W. R. 405.—CAN.

sb. —.]—The Calgary Charter provides that any person having "any unsettled or disputed account with or claim against the city" shall not be capable of being elected or serving as mayor or alderman. At the time of the election of resp. as an alderman in 1935 for a two-year term expiring on Dec. 31, 1937, the business taxes imposed against her for 1934 & 1935 were unpaid & at the time of the commencement of the quo warranto proceedings herein said tax for 1936 was also unpaid.—Held: taxes are not contracts & "unsettled" does not necessarily mean "unpaid," & therefore, the non-payment of said tax did not constitute an "unsettled or disputed account" within said provision.—*R. 26a. Conviction—Local Government Act, 1933 (c. 51), s. 59 (1) (e).—On July 6, 1932, deft. was convicted of perjury & sentenced to be imprisoned for a period exceeding three months without the option of a fine. In an action under Local Government Act, 1933 (c. 51), s. 84, aforesaid for a declaration that deft., who was acting as a duly elected member of a local authority, was disqualified from so acting on the ground of her conviction and sentence within five years before her election:—Held: (1) upon the proper construction of Local Government Act, 1933 (c. 51), s. 59, deft., notwithstanding that she was, on the ground of that conviction & sentence, disqualified for election, was not thereby disqualified from acting as a member of the local authority to which she had been duly elected; (2) upon the true construction of the proviso to sect. 84 (1) of that Act, the "date on which he so acted" meant the earliest date after election on which he so acted & the period of limitation began to run from that date; accordingly, deft. having first acted as a member more than six months before the issue of the writ, the action did not lie.—*BISHOP v. Deft. proved that he was qualified in the particular manner specified by the Act, but did not prove that he had taken & subscribed the oath:—Held: a verdict was properly found for deft., since he was sued as acting as a comr. without being qualified, & not for acting as a comr. without having taken & subscribed the oath.—*TUPPER v. of the employment, or continuance in employment, of any person that he should or should not be a member of a trade union; & that any such condition should be void. Shortly after the passing of above Act instructions were given by a committee that only men belonging to a specified trade union should be employed in respect of certain casual labour; & an employee, who was dismissed accordingly, obtained a declaration in the county court that his dismissal was illegal. A member of the council thereupon brought forward a motion having for its object that instructions should be given that the resolutions of the committees should cease to be operative; but the motion was defeated:—Held: in the circumstances the ct. should declare that it was not lawful for the local authority to require any person, as a condition of employment or continuance in employment, to become or to be a member of a trade union; Semle: it was not obligatory on the local authority upon the passing of the Act, to resolve that the resolutions of the committees were no longer to have effect.—*A.-G. v. o l. — Right to investigate payments made prior to period under audit.—A clerk of a rural district council received, during the period from Mar. 1, 1920, to Sept. 30, 1925, a bonus in addition to his salary, & this bonus, he contended, had been duly granted to him. During that period the payments made to him were entered in the expenditure book & submitted to various inspectors of the Local Govt. Department, who passed them as correct, & such payments up to Oct. 1924, were audited by auditors of the said Department & certified as correct. In Nov. 1925, B., an auditor of the said Department, commenced his audit of the council's accounts for the two half-years ending respectively Mar. 31, & Sept. 30, 1925. (1) of sect. 107 to limit the town's authority to the terms of the estimates, & sub-sect. (2) seems to show that there was not intended to be any binding restriction upon a local authority such as the deft. until a second order had been made after failure to comply with the terms of a programme approved by the Board.—*STEWART v. effects of audit. At the time the local Act was passed these provisions were contained in the Local Govt. Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 94. Later, the 1894 Act was repealed, & in 1933 a Local Govt. Act was passed, of which sect. 283 (4) provided that the accounts of a local authority, & the auditor's report thereon, should be open to the inspection of any local govt. elector. Appct., as a local govt. elector, contended that he was entitled to such inspection, on the ground that the repeal of the 1894 Act did not affect the provision of the 1894 Act incorporated in the local Act, which had not been repealed, & that the provisions of sect. 283 (4) of the Act of 1933 were now incorporated in the local Act:—Held: (1) appct. was entitled to the inspection claimed; (2) in the circumstances, whether or not the board was a local authority, the inspection of the accounts of the board was governed by the Act of 1933, which was now the enactment relating to the audit of accounts & the incidental & consequential effects of audit.—*R. v. - 86a. — Unauthorised allowance to county accountant—Relief under Audit (Local Authorities) Act, 1927 (c. 31), s. 2 (2).—In view of the increased duties imposed in consequence of Finance Act, 1920 (c. 18), & the Roads Act, 1920 (c. 72), upon local authorities in the levying & collection of Road Fund licences as from Jan. 1, 1921, the Minister of Transport, in 1920, issued a circular to local authorities that he would be prepared to give the fullest consideration to any representation made to him as to increasing the salaries of their officers. Nothing was then done by the Durham County Council in the matter, but in 1925 that council resolved that the county accountant, upon whom the new duties had been imposed, should be paid an additional sum of £100 per annum as from Feb. 1, 1925. Nothing was then said with regard to the preceding years—1921 to 1925—during which the same duties had been performed. In 1931 the county council adopted a report of their committee recommending that as £1,575 had been received from the Minister for the supervision & control of the department by the county accountant, & as £800 only had so far been granted to that officer, he should be paid the sum of £700 out of the money so received, & accordingly that amount was paid to him. That payment was disallowed by the district auditor & the councillors who had voted for the recommendation were surcharged. On appeal from that decision it was sought by affidavits of members of the county council to show that the increase of salary granted to the county accountant in 1925 was provisional only, & that in respect of the period 1921–1925 the matter of his remuneration was still open to review:—Held: (1) there being nothing in the records of the county council to show that the grant of additional salary made in 1925 was provisional only, it was not open to the council to make the further payment in 1931 in respect of the years 1921–1925, & therefore the auditor was right in disallowing it as being retrospective & made without consideration; (2) in the circumstances relief from the surcharge should be granted; (3) certain ratepayers who had appeared, as they were entitled to do under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 247 (6), before the auditor in support of their objection to the payment, were entitled, by implication, to appear on the hearing of the appeal to protect the disallowance they had obtained.—Re MAGRATH, [1934] 2 K. - 86b. — Members voting for resolution—Warning by clerk of illegality.—By a resolution dated Sept. 9, 1936, an urban district council resolved to make a contribution of £30 out of the rate fund in support of a march of unemployed persons to London to protest against the unemployment assistance regulations. The resolution was passed, although the clerk to the council advised that such a payment would be illegal & that the members of the council responsible therefor would be liable to be surcharged. On Sept. 23, the present applt. obtained an interim injunction in the High Ct. restraining the council from making the proposed contribution from the rate fund. On Sept. 28, the matter was further considered at a special meeting of the council when counsel's opinion was submitted to the meeting & a resolution was passed rescinding the minute of Sept. 9 authorising the contribution of £30, & agreeing to abide by the injunction. The council also authorised the clerk to instruct counsel to appear in ct. & consent to the injunction being made perpetual, but to object to the payment by the council of the costs incurred. The ct., however, ordered the council to pay the costs of the proceedings which had been brought about by the council's resolution of Sept. 9. The amount of the taxed costs was £65 5s. 8d., & in addition the costs of the London agents of the clerk to the council amounted to £19 16s. 4d. The bills of costs were presented to the next council meeting on Dec. 9, when it was resolved that the total costs of £85 2s. should be paid. Later, the district auditor was asked to surcharge that amount upon the members of the council responsible for the resolution of Sept. 9, & also on the members of the council who on Dec. 9 authorised payment of the costs. After consideration, the auditor found that the members of the council who passed the resolution of Dec. 9 had acted legally & properly, as the said costs consisted of debts legally & properly due by the council, & that the action of the members who voted in support of the resolution of Sept. 9 was not an act which called for surcharge under Local Govt. Act, 1933 (c. 51), s. 228 (1) (d), which imposed a duty on the district auditor "to surcharge the amount of any loss or deficiency upon any person by whose negligence or misconduct the loss or deficiency has been incurred." Thereupon this appeal was brought, & it was now contended that the members of the council who voted for the resolution of Sept. 9 were persons guilty of negligence or misconduct, & that the said sum of £85 2s. paid by the council was a loss or deficiency incurred by reason of that negligence or misconduct:—Held: as members of the council who passed the resolution of Sept. 9 did so notwithstanding the advice of the clerk to the council that the proposed contribution was illegal, & without disputing the correctness of such advice, they were guilty of misconduct within Local Govt. Act, 1933 (c. 51), s. 228 (1) (d), & as the costs incurred amounted to a loss or deficiency caused by such misconduct, the said sum of £85 2s. should be surcharged upon those members who voted for the resolution of Sept. 9.—DAVIES v. COWPERTHWAITHE, [1938] 2 All E. R. 685; 159 L. T. 43; 102 J. P. 405; 36 L. G. R. 459.

Defts., as contractors, offered to execute the contract, but refused to pay pltf. his charges for drawing it up, on the ground that they were unreasonable. By the local Act the contract, on the part of the comrs., was required to be signed by five or more of them, which was not done, & by the metropolitan general paving Act, the comrs. are entitled to sue or be sued in the name of their clerk:—Held: pltf. could not sue defts. for refusing to execute the contract in his capacity of clerk, as the contract on the part of the comrs. had not been signed by five or more of them, when tendered to defts., as required by the local Act, & as the charges made by pltf. on defts. for preparing the contract were due to him in his individual character, & not as clerk to the comrs.—*CURLING v. In Aug., 1933, the Minister wrote to the county council saying (inter alia) that he could not resist the conclusion on the present evidence that Hampton should be included in a larger area & going on to suggest that the proposals made should be modified by the formation of one large borough. The letter then confirmed certain alterations of the boundaries of Hampton. In Feb. 1934, an order was made in respect of the alteration of boundaries. In Nov. 1935, the Minister gave notice that he intended to make an order amalgamating Hampton with certain other areas:—Held: in the circumstances the Minister had made no previous decision or order in respect of the proposals made under Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 46, & he was not barred from making an order now by the provisions of sect. 47 (1) of that Act.—*R. v. 112a. Reference back by Minister for supplementary proposals—Validity.]—A county council, in discharge of their duties under Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 46, convened a conference with representatives of the councils of the districts within their county preliminary to a review by the county council of the circumstances of the districts within the county & a consideration whether it was desirable to effect any of the changes referred to in the sect. On June 24, 1932, the county council sent to the Minister of Health a report with certain proposals for altering the boundaries & for uniting some of the parishes & districts. Objections to those proposals having been made by local authorities affected, a local inquiry was held. On May 10, 1933, the Minister wrote to the county council a letter containing his decisions with regard to the county council's proposals, & invited them to submit supplementary proposals with regard to one area which comprised a number of urban & rural districts, including the urban district of Purfleet. The county council submitted supplementary proposals which were different from those suggested by the Minister, & those proposals, after a further local inquiry, were approved, with slight modifications, by the Minister, who made a draft order accordingly on Jan. 16, 1934. The Purfleet Urban District Council obtained a rule nisi for prohibition calling on the Minister to show cause why he should not be prohibited from making the above order. The council also obtained rules nisi for certiorari & mandamus:—Held: (1) there was nothing in the Act to prevent the Minister, before he reached a decision, from asking the county council to reconsider their original proposals & to submit such modified or altered proposals as they thought more suitable in all the circumstances; (2) the provision in sect. 46 (1) that the proposals were to be completed "before the 1st day of April, 1932, or such later date as the Minister may in any case allow," could not be construed as meaning that there must be a formal order by the Minister extending the time before any proposals could be submitted after that date. In such a case it was within the Minister's discretion to extend the time or to refuse to do so.

117a. — Loss due to local Act.—The Oxford Extension Act, 1928, which came into operation on Apr. 1, 1929, transferred from the county of Oxford to the city of Oxford parts of certain rural districts & parts of certain poor law districts, & directed that there should be an equitable adjustment of financial relations as between the county & the city in respect thereof. By virtue of Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), which came into operation on Apr. 1, 1930, one year after the first-mentioned Act, the county council of the said county became responsible for the maintenance of the district roads in these & other rural districts in the county, & for the administration of public assistance in these & other poor law districts in the county:—Held: (1) although the burden of the maintenance of district roads & of public assistance would not have been thrown upon the ratepayers of the county at all unless the Act of

1929 had come into force, yet such increase of that burden as might be attributable to the transfer of the above-mentioned areas from the county to the city was a consequence not of that Act but of the Oxford Extension Act, 1928, & that provision for it should, therefore, be made by an arbitrator appointed under the last-mentioned Act to determine what sum should be paid by way of financial adjustment by the city to the county in respect of the transfer of these areas; (2) regard being had to the maximum amounts payable by way of compensation under the Rules contained in Local Govt. (Adjustments) Act 1913 (c. 19), Sched., Part II., as amended by Local Govt. (County Boroughs & Adjustments) Act, 1926 (c. 38), s. 5, & to the fact that during the year intervening between the dates on which the Acts of 1928 & 1929 respectively came into force the county did not incur any liability in respect of these matters, that the sum payable by the city to the county as compensation should comprise in respect of roads the average annual increase of burden for twenty years, & in respect of public assistance the average annual increase of burden for fourteen years.—*OXFORDSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. 129a. — Statutory relief from liability for road repair.—In 1928 the parish of A., rural district of G., was on the extension of the boundaries of the county borough of C., transferred to that county borough. The burden thrown on the ratepayers of the rural district in meeting the cost of the maintenance of roads in their district in consequence of the transfer of the parish of A. was £1,150 per annum. The parish of A. had been, in the matter of roads, a beneficial parish to the rural district of G. In arbn. proceedings as to the amount of compensation to be paid:—Held: (1) the arbitrator was entitled & bound to take into account, in ascertaining the payment to be made by C. to G. the fact G. had been relieved of the cost of maintaining the roads in its district by reason of the statutory provisions in Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17); & (2) the arbitrator could not award anything in respect of the period after Apr. 1, 1930, when Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), came into operation.—*GODSTONE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. The officers of the council permitted the accountant to inspect all the books & accounts to which Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), s. 60 (which expressly authorises inspection by an agent of the ratepayer), applied, but they declined to permit him to inspect the general books & accounts of the council, on the ground that he was not himself a "person interested," & that Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 247, did not authorise a person interested to inspect by an agent. The books & accounts were produced to the ratepayers themselves :—Held : (1) a person interested was entitled under sect. 247 (4) to inspect by an agent, & (2) a rule for mandamus commanding the council to permit the accountant to inspect the books, must be made absolute. By another bye-law passed on Feb. 3, 1927, a successor to pltf. was appointed; but no notice of dismissal was given pltf., & he sued for the salary for the month of Feb. 1927:—Held: the meaning of the bye-law appointing pltf. was that his hiring was for the whole of the year 1926 & thereafter until his successor was appointed; & therefore, his contract came to an end on the appointment of his successor, & he was entitled to be paid, with respect

An action was brought by the A.-G. at the relation of a ratepayer claiming a declaration that it was unlawful & ultra vires the corpn. & contrary to the provisions of Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), to expend any part of the general rate fund of the borough for the purpose of establishing or carrying on a printing, bookbinding, or stationery works & an injunction to restrain them from so doing:—Held: (1) the formation of a

An employee who was subsequently dismissed by a departmental head brought an action against the council for wrongful dismissal:—Held: the council had power to delegate its authority to discharge employee; the power given to departmental heads in that respect was revocable, & the council had not denuded itself of its authority & the dismissal was lawful.—*BAYLY v. centage amount of his salary or wages according to the scale laid down by this Act, such amount to be from time to time deducted from the wages or salary payable to him & to be carried to & form part of the superannuation fund" established by the Act. From 1915 onwards the Tees Comrs. paid a bonus to their employees, but, not considering the bonus as wages or salary for the purpose of the superannuation fund, made no deductions from it for the fund. In 1933 the Ct. of Appeal held that such bonus was wages or salary & that the superannuation allowances payable under the Act were to be calculated on that footing:—Held: there was nothing in sect. 4 of the Act which imposed on the employees an obligation to pay contributions to the fund otherwise than by permitting the Comrs. to make the authorised deductions from wages or salary. Accordingly, in the case of their superannuated employees, the Comrs. had no power to recover from them the amount of the deductions from bonus which they had failed to make, or to deduct such amount from the superannuation allowances payable. In the case of employees still employed the Comrs. were only entitled to make in each year the deductions from wages or salary (including bonus) authorised for that year, & could not recover the amount which they had failed to deduct in earlier years; further, the claim of the employees for unpaid superannuation allowance was subject to the limitation of six years under Limitation Act, 1623 (c. 16), because the claim was against a common fund, enforceable by action on the case & not by action for debt on the statute.—*TEES CONSERVANCY COMRS. v. 717a. Who may vote—Education Act, 1921 (c. 51), s. 9.]—Under sect. 9 of Education Act, 1921 (c. 51), the county councillors elected for an electoral division consisting wholly of a borough or urban district whose council are a local education authority for the purpose of elementary education, or of some part of such a borough or district, are prohibited from voting in respect of any question arising before the county council which relates to elementary education. Under sect. 75 of Local Govt. Act, 1933 (c. 51), a county councillor elected for an electoral division consisting wholly of a county district or of some part of a county district shall not vote on any matter involving only expenditure for which the county district is not for the time being liable to be charged :—Held : both these prohibitions applied to voting not only at meetings of the county council but also at meetings of the education committee of the council & any sub-committee thereof, & the second prohibition under Local Govt. Act, 1933 (c. 51), applied to voting both at meetings of the council itself & at meetings of the public health & housing committee & of the maternity & child welfare sub-committee of that committee on all questions of maternity & child welfare.

Pltf. as a member of the Essex County Council for an electoral division of Colchester, a borough the council of which was the local education authority for the purposes of elementary education, & a separate district for the purposes of the Maternity & Child Welfare Act, 1918 (c. 29), was therefore within the above prohibitions, & could not vote at any meetings of these committees or sub-committees on any matters delegated or referred to them.—ALDERTON v. By the operation of Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), the grants were discontinued, but the proceeds of the local taxation licences remained distributable. The question was raised by special case whether upon the proper construction of Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 85 (5), the order ceased to have effect altogether or only so far as it related to the discontinued grants :—Held : the proper construction of the sub-section was that it required a new agreement to be entered into in the manner therein prescribed.—LIVERPOOL CORPN. v. The county council refused to allow the agent to inspect the minutes, whereupon a rule nisi was obtained for a writ of set forth in Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929, s. 17 (1), & Sched. IV. :—Held : (1) school management committees, district councils, & joint committees are committees of the county council; (2) on the terms of the council's resolution adopting sect. 17, which bore that the rates were to be the "maximum rates," the members of the county council & of its committees & sub-committees were entitled in all cases to payment of the allowances authorised by sect. 17 (1) at the maximum rates fixed by Sched. IV.; (3) the words "time necessarily lost from ordinary employment" in sect. 17 (1) & Pt. III. of Sched. IV., imported a contract of service &, accordingly, the right to the allowances prescribed by Pt. III. was limited to persons whose attendance at meetings would involve loss of wages; (4) railway service in the sense of Pt. I. of Sched. ## Part VI.—Jurisdiction in Lunacy.

529a. Jurisdiction to direct settlement of lunatic's property—Change of circumstances—Causing party to "suffer an injustice"—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171 (1).—A lunatic not so found had been of unsound mind since 1882. She was a spinster aged eighty-one, & was possessed of personal property of the value of £2,000. From the time when she became of unsound mind she had lived under the care of an uncle & aunt, who had provided £2,076 towards her maintenance. The uncle died in 1885 & the aunt in 1907. By the will of the latter an annuity of £300 was bequeathed for the support of the lunatic. Upon the death of the aunt a sister of the lunatic was appointed receiver of her estate & acted until 1920, when she was relieved & a sister of appcts. was appointed in her place. On her death in 1925 one of appcts. was appointed & was receiver of the lunatic's estate. In 1880 before her reason left her the lunatic made a will, by which she bequeathed her property to her three sisters, all of whom were dead. On an application by appcts., the residuary legatees under the aunt's will & second cousins of the lunatic, to the ct. to exercise the powers vested in it by sect. 171 of the above Act, & to direct a settlement to be made of the property of the lunatic:—Held: (1) the phrase "suffer an injustice" in sect. 171 (1) (c) must not be rigidly confined to a deprivation of a strict legal right, since that would stultify the operation of the sect. altogether, but it must in its context include the destruction of a clear moral claim, or even the disappointment of a thoroughly legitimate & well founded expectation, & in the circumstances appcts. would "suffer an injustice" if the recent change in the law of intestacy were allowed to defeat the moral claim which they had to succeed to the estate of the lunatic, particularly in view of the continuous recognition, pecuniary & otherwise, which their side of the family had throughout shown of the obligations imposed on them by their kinship to the lunatic; (2) there had been "a change of circumstances" within the sub-sect. since the execution by the lunatic of her will, by reason of the deaths of her three sisters to whom she had left her property; (3) the case was one in which the ct. ought to exercise the discretion vested in it by sect. 171, by directing the receiver to execute a settlement of the property of the lunatic, to be approved by the judge in lunacy, which must be subject during the life of the lunatic to her right to be maintained out of the income, & if & so far as might be necessary out of the capital thereof, & subject also to any effective disposition by will or deed which the lunatic might make should she recover.—Re FREEMAN, [1927] 1 Ch. 479; 96 L. J. Ch. 225; 136 L. T. 657; 71 Sol. Jo. 272, C. A.

husband in 1915, the wife was entitled to the income for life with a power of appointment by deed or will among the issue of the marriage, & in default of appointment the funds were settled in trust for the two surviving children, now aged forty-six & forty-four years, who by inquisitions in 1902 & 1910 had been certified to be of unsound mind. In default of children who attained twenty-one or being daughters married, the wife's fund would have passed to the wife absolutely & the husband's fund to the husband, who had given all his property to his wife. By his will the wife's father, who died in 1885, gave his residuary real & personal estate upon trusts under which, in the events which had happened, his daughter, the wife, received the income for her life with a power of appointment by deed or will amongst her issue. In default of appointment the residue was settled on trusts under which the wife's two children were the only beneficiaries. Neither of the children had made a will &, apart from their mother & an aunt aged eighty-two, who was a spinster of unsound mind, their next of kin were second cousins, so that if they survived their mother & aunt, the Crown would take on their deaths under an intestacy. In these circumstances the wife took out summonses under the above sect., asking the ct. to direct settlements of the children's personal property under the marriage settlement & her father's will, which should include trusts in her favour absolutely after the death of each child or, alternatively, a general power of appointment by will so as to enable her to benefit friends & charities in which the family had always been interested. Before the applications were heard an arrangement was come to between the wife & the Crown by which, subject to the approval of the ct., the Crown consented to the wife's having a general power of appointment over the whole of the marriage settlement funds & over the father's residuary personal estate to the extent of £21,140, being the amount provided by the wife out of her own money as a maintenance fund for the children, upon the wife's abandoning all claim to the rest of her father's residuary estate, valued at about £285,000, & agreeing to supplement the income of the maintenance fund for the benefit of the children as theretofore:—Held: there was no ground justifying the ct. in making a settlement in respect of the wife's father's residuary estate, for no injustice would be suffered by the wife within sect. 171 (1) (c), if each child's share of the property was allowed to devolve as on an intestacy on his or her death, nor ought the trusts to be altered under sect. 171 (1) (b); but as the Crown did not oppose a settlement of the marriage settlement funds, orders would be made for settlements of the two children's shares so as to give the wife a general power of disposal over the funds. The provision of the maintenance fund of £21,400 did not afford a ground for directing settlements under sect. 171, but the wife would remain free to apply for recoupment under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 117, if so advised.

An application for a settlement was made by a widow, aged eighty-one years, & first cousin of the patient, who was sixty-two years of age. The only other near relatives of the patient were two first cousins, who were born in 1847 & 1850 respectively & who were & always had been resident in South America. Appct. stated that by reason of her own great age & that of her two cousins in South America any settlement which the ct. might be pleased to direct would not be of any material benefit to the patient's next of kin, unless its scope were extended to include children of any deceased first cousins of the patient's mother:—Held: there was no sufficient ground shown for directing a settlement to be made.

A patient had made a will in 1887, by which he had disposed of his residuary estate equally between his wife & children as a class. The wife had since died, as had also one of patient's sons, leaving issue. The patient's family were desirous that the deceased son's issue should be in no worse position than they would have been if their father had survived the patient:—Held: the case was a proper one for the exercise by the ct. of its discretion under sect. 171, by directing a settlement.

The property of a patient was derived under the will of his maternal grandfather. It had been settled by the patient's mother on her marriage with his father, whom she had divorced in 1877, & who had not since been heard of. The object of an application for a settlement was to exclude any claim by the father or his family:—Held: a settlement ought to be directed.

A patient had made a will in 1922, leaving the whole of his property to his wife, & in 1925 became of unsound mind. The will had been lost. On an application by the wife for a settlement, evidence was produced which satisfied the ct. as to the fact of the loss & as to the contents of the will:—Held: a settlement carrying out the terms of the will ought to be directed.—Re GREENE, Re WHITWORTH, Re E. 1378a. —.]—On May 26, 1927, the receiver of a lunatic's estate, who had been authorised to continue the lunatic's business, obtained an order from the master directing him to distribute £1,800 amongst certain scheduled creditors of the business whose debts had been incurred subsequently to the date of the receivership order. The scheduled creditors were not parties to the order. On May 29, three days after the order was pronounced & before it was completed, the lunatic died. The order was subsequently completed on June 14. In July the exors. of the lunatic's will applied for an order for payment out of ct. to them of the fund representing the lunatic's residuary estate, & on July 28 the master refused to make the order except upon the terms of effect being given to the order of May 26. Subsequently to the making of this order an order was made for the administration of the lunatic's estate:—Held: (1) the order of May 26 was a mere direction to the receiver to make the payments in question which might have been varied or rescinded at any time by the master before it was finally completed, & it gave the creditors no equitable charge on the £1,800 thereby ordered to be distributed among them; (2) the jurisdiction in lunacy ceased on the death of the lunatic, & the master had no jurisdiction to direct that effect should be given to the order of May 26; (3) the exors. were entitled to the fund in ct. without regard to the order of May 26, but inasmuch as an order had since been made for the administration of the lunatic's estate, the fund must be paid to the credit of the administration action.—Re WHEATER, [1928] Ch. 223; 97 L. 1419a. Claim for increased percentage after death of patient.]—(1) The percentage payable in lunacy under the Rules in Lunacy, 1892, r. 127, on the annual income of property of a patient (being a person mentioned in Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116 (1) (d)), which is "dealt with or made available" by any order in lunacy may be increased by a claim to percentage on additional income made after the death of the patient.

(2) Under the will of a testator who died in 1900, trustees were directed at their discretion to pay or apply the whole or any part of the income of residuary estate for the maintenance, clothing, comfort & benefit of a person in respect of whose property a receiver was appointed in 1925 under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 116 (1) (d), & to accumulate the surplus income. Owing to the statutory period for accumulations having come to an end in 1921 the patient as sole next of kin of testator was thereafter entitled to the surplus income; but the trustees invested & retained it until they were ordered by the order appointing the receiver to lodge the investments with the Paymaster-General. After the date of the order the trustees continued to apply part of the income of the residuary estate for the benefit of the patient under the discretionary trust, but paid the balance of the income to the receiver, who had been authorised by the order appointing him to give a discharge for all dividends, interest, & income of the patient, the patient having died on Feb. 2, 1933:—Held: a percentage was payable under rule 127 of the Rules in Lunacy, 1892, in respect of (a) the investments so lodged with the Paymaster-General, & (b) the sums applied by the trustees under the discretionary trust after the date of the order.—Re W. 1419d. Lunatic brought to England from foreign country—Whether "resident" in England.]—In 1934 the patient, who was domiciled in a British dominion & temporarily resident in England for educational purposes, left for a short visit to America. Whilst there he became mentally deranged & was declared mentally & legally insane. He was sent back to this country as being a British subject, where on Oct. 26, 1934, he was certified as a person of unsound mind. On June 21, 1935, a receiver of his property was appointed for a period of twelve months. At the expiration of that period the patient left the mental home where he had been residing & in July, 1936, he was formally discharged. In Dec. 1936, the receiver was discharged. In June, 1936, whilst the receiver was administering the affairs of the patient an account was sent in by him & on that account the percentage payable under the Lunacy Acts & Rules was assessed at £1,000 based on the patient's total income from his dominion property, which amounted to over £33,000 a year. The receiver appealed from the assessment, but the Master in Lunacy affirmed it. On appeal from the Master the receiver contended that the patient, having been brought back to this country from U.S.A. without being able to exercise any volition on the matter of his residence, must be deemed not to be resident in England within the proviso to sub-sect. (3) of sect. 27 of Lunacy Act, 1891 (c. 65):—Held: "residence" was a term which could be applied to a lunatic & it could not be said that he was incapable of residing because he was incapable of the necessary volition, & the patient did not therefore come within the proviso to sub-sect. (3) of sect. 27 of the Act of 1891 as being "a person residing out of England." Therefore the case fell within rule 148 (2) of Patients' Estates Rules, 1934, & the appropriate percentage fee had been charged.—Re X. Y., [1937] Ch. 337; 106 L. J. Ch. 258, C. A.

1688c. ——— Decision of Minister of Health—Whether certiorari lies.]—W. commenced his employment as a shoemaker in a county mental hospital in 1915 during the War. His employment was at first considered temporary, but, in fact, it was continued until 1934. He was never considered by the committee as a permanent employee, & they at all times refused to accept from him subscriptions in respect of the superannuation allowance. After the termination of his employment, his application for a superannuation allowance was refused by the committee, but granted by the Minister on appeal. Asylums Officers' Superannuation Act, 1909 (c. 48), s. 15, provides that the decision of the Minister shall be final. The difference between the view taken by the Minister & that taken by the committee was, shortly, whether, upon the proper construction of the Act, an officer who had served less than twenty years could be entitled to an allowance. A rule nisi for certiorari was granted for the decision of the Minister to be quashed, on the ground that the Minister had acted without jurisdiction :—Held : the Minister had not acted without jurisdiction, &, although his decision was in effect the construction of the provisions of the Act of 1909, it could not be questioned by the grant of a writ of certiorari.—R. v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, Ex p. GLAMORGAN COUNTY MENTAL HOSPITAL (COMMITTEE OF VISITORS), [1938] 4 All E. R. 32; 159 L. T. 508; 102 J. P. 497; 55 T. L. R. 4; 82 Sol. Jo. 869, C. A.

1688d. ——— Dismissal—Powers of visiting committee.]—In 1923 a doctor was appointed by the visiting committee of an asylum as assistant medical officer in the asylum. On Oct. 21, 1927, the doctor was dismissed by the committee with three months' notice. He was at the same time suspended from his duties & given three months' salary. The doctor put forward a claim for a superannuation allowance under Asylums Officers' Superannuation Act, 1909 (c. 48), s. 10. On Nov. 9, 1930, the Minister of Health, to whom the matter was referred under sect. 15, gave a decision adverse to the doctor's claim.

that deft. had been committed to & received at the hospital & was still detained there & that he was when received & still was a lunatic within the Mental Diseases Act, R. S. S., 1930.—WHITING v. WHITING & WATSON, 1937 2 W. W. R. 135.—CAN.

On Oct. 20, 1933, the doctor brought an action, against (inter alia) the visiting committee, for wrongful dismissal & for return of his superannuation allowance contributions:—Held: (1) pltf.'s claim both for wrongful dismissal & also for the return of his contributions was barred by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), as the dismissal was an act done, & the neglect to pay the contributions was the neglect of an act done, "in pursuance, or execution . . . of any Act of Parliament" & the action was not brought within six months of such act or neglect; (2) the power given by Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 276, to the visiting committee to remove any officer appointed under that sect. must be construed as a power to remove at pleasure, & any limitation of that power contained in any agreement made with an individual officer would, to that extent, be ultra vires.

Per GREER, L.J.: Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 276, gave the visiting committee of an asylum power to make agreements with the officers & servants whom they appointed upon such terms as were necessary in order to obtain the services of such officers &

1768a. Old age pension.—Receiver appointed during lunatic's life.—A patient in a rate-aided institution attained the age of seventy years, & became entitled to an old age pension. The master in lunacy made the usual order appointing the appropriate public assistance officer, in effect, to be receiver of the pension & to accumulate the same. The order gave a charge to the county council for any sum then due, & future sums becoming due, to them, but this charge was not to be enforceable without the leave of the master until the death of the patient. It was contended, on behalf of the county council, that the order should have made the pension immediately available:—Held: the order was not only one which the master had jurisdiction to make, but was also a wise & just one in the circumstances, & there was no reason for interfering with it.—*Re T. 1886a. Lunatic out on licence—Negligence.]—L., a defective, had been convicted many times for various forms of assault, some of a serious character, & was finally sentenced to be detained during His Majesty's pleasure. After some time in a criminal lunatic institution he was transferred to the Calderstone Institution in Lancashire. His brother made an application for him to be let out on licence, stating that he would take a holiday & so be at home to look after him. This application was refused because L. had not been in the institution for a year. A later application was granted for a fortnight's absence, & no inquiry was then made as to whether the brother's former undertaking was renewed, & in fact, the brother was neither seen nor questioned by any one. At the end of the fortnight the licence was extended for another fortnight without further inquiry, & then for another month. The licence was signed by the deputy superintendent. During the period of the extended licence L. visited the pltf.'s house when the female pltf. was there alone & savagely assaulted her. The jury were directed that they should not find an officer negligent if he had merely committed an error of judgment; but should only do so if they found that he had failed to exercise that care & control necessary having regard to the character & past history of the patient. The jury found all three defts., the hospital board, the superintendent & the deputy superintendent, negligent.—HOLGATE v. LANCASHIRE MENTAL HOSPITALS BOARD, GILL & ROBERTSON, [1937] 4 All E. 1896b. Application for leave to bring action—Mental Treatment Act, 1930 (c. 27), s. 16 (2)—When granted.]—Pltf., aged 75, on Aug. 24, 1935, having attended his wife's funeral, became highly excitable & commenced drinking heavily. Upon the request of his daughter, a doctor in a letter recommended him for hospital treatment & to be kept under observation. The local authority then sent an ambulance to his home in which he was removed to an institution. He was there examined by the assistant medical officer & put into a mental ward. The medical officer later issued a certificate for his detention, although he had not personally examined him. After four days' detention in the mental ward the pltf. was moved to the ordinary male medical ward. On Sept. 9 his daughter asked for his removal home & he was allowed to return home on the following day:—Held: in acting upon the doctor's letter, which was not a certificate within the statutory requirements, the local authority had acted without reasonable care, & leave under Mental Treatment Act, 1930 (c. 27), s. 16 (2), ought to be given to pltf. to bring an action in respect thereof against the local authority. The claim must be restricted to the first four days.—Re FROST, [1936] 2 All E. R. 182; 80 Sol. Jo. 464, C. A.

tinuance orders were made on June 29, 1931 (expiring June 24, 1936), & on July 6, 1936. With regard to the order dated June 29, 1931, the special report & certificate of the medical officer was referred back to the medical officer by a Comr. on June 23, 1931, for amendment. They were returned on July 4, 1931, & were submitted to another Comr., who directed their acceptance on July 7, 1931. On an application for habeas corpus on the ground that the order of July 6, 1936, was invalid (a) as being made out of time & (b) as purporting to continue the order of 1931, which was itself invalid because it was made out of time, the Div. able strictness, &, as the statutory consideration of the reports had taken place at the proper time, the actual sealing of the order might, in the absence of mala fides, take place within a reasonable time thereafter:—Held: the continuation order dated June 29, 1931, was invalid, as it was not made until after the expiration of the previous order on June 24, 1931, & further that the continuation order of June 29, 1931, was on its face a nullity, because it contained a statement that the Board of Control having considered the requisite reports & certificates & the means of care & supervision were satisfied that the continuance of the order of June 23, 1930, was required, whereas the satisfaction of the Comr. was not in fact arrived at until July 7, 1931. 1902b. — — —.]—A mental defective was convicted of larceny at Cambridge & was ordered to be sent to a certified institution. He was born in 1913, & had lived in London until he was eighteen years of age. He then left home & wandered about the country, being employed on occasional work at different places. He had on occasions stayed in casual wards in different parts of the country. He had no settled residence for any length of time at any particular place. In May, 1935, he came into Cambridge, & committed the offence of which he was ultimately convicted:—Held: as it was not proved that the mental defective resided in some place other than the place where the offence was committed, Mental Deficiency Act, 1913 (c. 28), s. 44 (1), of the Act applied, & he was presumed for the purposes of sect. 43 (1) to have resided in the place where the offence was or was alleged to have been committed. Therefore, the local authority responsible for providing for his accommodation was the Cambridgeshire County Council. Also, no case of doubt had arisen with regard to his place of residence, & therefore no question of poor law settlement within sect. 44 (4) had to be considered.—*LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. The justices dismissed the summons. The wife appealed, & submitted that as one of the sitting justices was a member of the same trade union as the husband, that justice must be regarded as an interested person, & therefore the decision was null & void:—Held: it would be stretching the law to say that a magistrate could not sit if one of the parties happened to be a member of the same trade union as he in a matter in which no trade dispute was involved.—*STEVENS v. When the complaint came up for hearing & before the acting police magistrate had dealt with it in any way, the police magistrate had resumed his duties & he tried the case & convicted the accused:—Held: the fact that the acting police magistrate did not formally request the police magistrate to adjudicate did not prevent the latter from having jurisdiction. Moreover the waiver of priority by the justice of the peace to the named acting police magistrate was not to be taken as a waiver to the latter personally but to the acting police magistrate & ipso facto, to the police magistrate.—*R. v. ## Part VII.—Indictable and Summary Offences.

331a. Duty of justices.]—Under Criminal Justice Act, 1925 (c. 86), s. 24 (1), justices are required, as a preliminary to any decision as to dealing summarily with an indictable offence, to take into consideration the character & antecedents of the accused.—*R. v. 334a. ———— “Before charge gone into.”]—Deft., who was represented by a solr., was charged before a ct. of summary jurisdiction with an offence for which, if convicted, he would be liable to imprisonment for a term exceeding three months. He was not informed of his right to trial by a jury on appearing before the ct., before the charge was gone into, but he was so informed afterwards, when all the evidence had been heard, but before the ct. had announced their decision. Deft. protested twice by his solr. that he could not at that stage be put to this election, but on being informed by the chairman that if he did not elect, the case would be sent for trial, he stated by his solr. that he would be dealt with summarily. Deft. was then convicted & fined:—Held: the proceedings were a nullity as the giving of that information to the person charged on his appearing before the ct., “before the charge is gone into,” in accordance with above sect. is a condition precedent to the validity of the subsequent proceedings. Accordingly the conviction was quashed.—R. v. DIXON, SOUTHAMPTON JUSTICES, Ex p. PORTEOUS (1929), 142 L. T. 597; sub nom. R. v. HAMPSHIRE JUSTICES, Ex p. PORTEOUS, 94 J. P. 70; 46 T. L. ### PART VI. SECT. 7.

sm. Discretion to order trial before regular court.]—While under Juvenile Delinquents Act, 1929, the Juvenile Ct. has jurisdiction to conduct the trial of any offence committed by a child within the statutory age limit, yet, since sect. 9 of the Act provides that he may in his discretion order the child to be proceeded against by indictment in the ordinary course, it would seem that the better course for him to pursue is to make such an order where the alleged offence is a very grave one, such as arson.—*R. v. A., 1924, & amendments, for the maintenance of a neglected child:—Held: since it was within the jurisdiction of the Juvenile Ct. judge to make the findings he made, on the evidence, as to the date of the apprehension & the place of residence of the child, & there was a right of appeal given by the Act, these findings could not be questioned on certiorari.—*Re KOWALUK, CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY OF WINNIPEG v. so. Expenses—How payable.]—The effect of Children & Young Persons (Scotland) Act, 1932, is to make the juvenile cts. set up thereby part of the justice of the peace ct.; the justices' fiscal & clerk are the proper persons to act respectively as prosecutor & clerk; & the consequent expense falls to be defrayed by the county council out of the rates.—*BOASE v. sp. Disagreement of justices—Right to lay second information.—(1) Where on the hearing by two justices of the peace of an information laid under Excise Act, R. S. O., 1927, they are divided in opinion &, therefore, fail to reach a decision, sect. 129 of said Act does not prohibit the laying of a new information before two other justices.

(2) Scmble: it is not open to the judge on an appeal from a conviction on the new information to find lack of jurisdiction. The better, if not the only, course for the accused to take is to raise the question of jurisdiction by certiorari.

(3) Notwithstanding sect. 1122 of the Criminal Code, the taking of the appeal is not a waiver of objection to the jurisdiction.—LANE v. KREKEWICH, [1933] 1 W. W. R. 522.—CAN.

st. Summons issued after information sworn—Right to elect whether to proceed on summons or information.—The prosecutor was arrested on Aug. 26, 1933, & charged with being unlawfully & knowingly concerned in the illegal importation of cattle, contrary to Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36). He was remanded on bail until Sept. 11, 1933. An order was made on Sept. 11, 1933, adjourning the trial until Oct. 9. An information was sworn on Oct. 4, 1933, by an officer of Customs & Excise in which it was charged that the prosecutor was knowingly concerned in an attempted evasion of Customs duty on cattle imported from the Irish Free State into Northern Ireland with intent to defraud the Revenue. A summons, dated Oct. 4, 1933, to attend on Oct. 9, 1933, was issued against the prosecutor in pursuance of the information. The prosecutor attended at the petty sessions ct. to answer the charge for which he had been arrested, when it was stated by the solr. who appeared for His Majesty's Customs & Excise that he would withdraw the original charge & proceed on foot of the summons. The solr. for the prosecutor then withdrew from the case & the ct. heard the summons & convicted the prosecutor of the offence charged & adjudged that he should pay the sum of £269 6s. 6d. or in default be imprisoned for six months:—Held: the procedure adopted was perfectly regular, & the ct. had power to elect, right up to the time of conviction, whether to proceed on information or on summons.—*R. 362 v. —.]—District Ct. Rules, r. 8, which was made applicable to proceedings under Customs Acts by r. 58, provides that where it is intended that a summons only shall issue to bring a deft. before the ct., the information or complaint may be made either in writing or orally, as the district justice of the peace shall see fit:—Held: therefore, an information in writing required by Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1879, was no longer a necessary preliminary to the issue of a summons charging an offence under Customs Acts.—A.-G. v. HEALY, [1928] I. R. 460.—IR.

S. C. 1927. The conviction followed the terms of the information:—Held: the information was bad for uncertainty in that it charged two offences in the alternative, but since said defect was one of substance within sect. 753 of Criminal Code & the proof required by that sect. as a condition precedent to applt.'s objection being allowed, viz. proof that the objection had been raised before the justice, had not been made, judgment could not be given in its favour; but the ct. had power to require the prosecution to elect on which charge it would proceed.—*R. v. 435a. ———.—[A summons by a wife for arrears of maintenance had been twice adjourned by reason of a statement by the husband that he intended to take counter-proceedings for the discharge of the order on the ground of the wife's adultery. Upon the summons coming on again the husband took out his counter-summons returnable on that same day & the case was then heard. The wife was offered an adjournment, which she refused. The summons merely charged adultery by the wife in general terms, not specifying with whom the adultery was committed, or any time or place; but a letter was handed to the wife with the summons stating that she was accused of committing adultery with a named person & had been living with him for 4 years.—Held: there is no specified length of time for a return to a summons issued by a ct. of summary jurisdiction, & it is a common practice when a party is before the ct. to issue a supplemental summons returnable on that day; it is very desirable that a summons should state particulars of adultery, but it is not bad in law if it does not do so; any irregularity there might have been had been waived by the party continuing the case before the justices; in all the circumstances & in view of the serious charge made against the wife & the alleged adulterer, an order should be made for a further hearing, but the wife should have no costs of the appeal.—*OLDING v. make a bye-law prohibiting the playing of mechanical organs anywhere in the borough. In 1892 the corpn. made such a bye-law. The applt. was summoned for playing such an organ in the borough in breach of that bye-law on Apr. 7, 1928. He claimed a right so to play the organ by virtue of a licence which had been given to him by the lord of the manor, & contended that the jurisdiction of the justices was thereby ousted. The justices convicted him, & stated a case:—Held: the appeal must be allowed & the conviction quashed, because (a) the local Act expressly saved "all rights of a profitable or beneficial nature in, over or affecting the commons" that had been exercised before the passing of the Act; (b) the lord of the manor had, before 1890 & continuously until these proceedings, licensed the playing of such organs on the commons & had received between £300 & £400 annually in respect of such licence; (c) the applt. had played his organ on a part of the commons in pursuance of such a licence; & (d) the claim was not "possible

631a. Improper consideration of previous convictions—Inquiry into previous convictions not in open court.—At a ct. of summary jurisdiction the three appts. were charged for that they then being in a certain fishing district under the control of a board of conservators, unlawfully did fish for salmon or trout otherwise than by means of an instrument which they were duly licensed to use contrary to sect. 63 (1) of the Salmon & Fresh Water Fisheries Act, 1923 (c. 16), s. 63 (1).

The charges related to alleged offences on July 6 & 20, 1929. At the conclusion of the hearing as to the charges relating to July 6, the justices retired to their ante-room, & after they had decided to convict each of appts., sent for information as to any convictions for previous fishing offences by appts. for the purpose of considering the appropriate penalty for each appt. They were informed that two of appts. had been twice previously convicted, & one of them once previously convicted of such offences. They obtained this information from their clerk & did not see the police reports of appts. nor obtain information with regard to anything but these alleged convictions for fishing offences. The justices then returned into ct. & announced that appts. were convicted & each of them fined £5.

Thereupon the charges relating to July 20 were commenced. In opening the case against appts., the solr. for the prosecution referred to the convictions which had just been recorded against each of appts. Objection was taken to this by appts.' solr., but the justices proceeded with the case & again convicted appts. & fined each of them £5:—Held: all the convictions must be quashed. On the charges first heard, the justices, having decided to convict, should have returned into ct. & then publicly & openly in the presence of appts. made inquiries into any previous convictions there might be against them, in which case appts. would have had the opportunity of dealing with the matter. As to the charges subsequently heard the prosecuting solr. not only referred to the convictions that had just been recorded against appts., but to convictions which had been vitiated as already stated. The question was not whether substantial injustice had been done, but whether the rules had been observed. They had not been observed.—HASTINGS v. OSTLE (1930), 143 L. T. 707; 94 J. P. 209; 94 J. 631d. — Decision to convict before previous convictions heard.]—Applt. was charged with having (i) been guilty of conduct which might lead to breaches of the peace, contrary to the common law, (ii) obstructed a police inspector while in the execution of his duty. Having heard the evidence, the justices retired to consider their decision, & having decided to convict on both charges, they returned into ct. without announcing their decision to convict, but asked if there was anything previously known against applt. Thereupon his previous convictions were supplied to the justices in ct., & admitted by applt. The justices then retired a second time to consider what penalty, if any, they should impose on applt., after which they returned into ct. & announced their decision to impose a fine of £5 & £5 5s. costs on the first charge, & to order him to pay costs in respect of the second charge. Applt.'s solr. objected to the justices' procedure, in not announcing in ct. their decision to convict before hearing the previous convictions, as irregular, but they informed him that they had come to a decision during their first retirement, before they were informed of applt.'s previous convictions:—Held: (1) the only course open to the justices as regards the first charge was, if they thought fit, to bind applt. over to keep the peace, & perhaps to find sureties, & they therefore erred in point of law by fining applt. on the basis that he had committed a substantive offence to which a penalty might apply; (2) as regards the second charge, the procedure of the justices was not sufficient to invalidate the conviction, although it would have been better if the justices had

the peace to make the necessary alteration in the record, & the record was altered accordingly. There was no evidence before the ct. that the sessions had been adjourned to any specified date. The purported alteration of sentence had taken place in the absence of the prisoner:—Held: it being at least doubtful whether the Chairman had any power to make the purported alteration, the original sentence of three years' penal servitude must be regarded as the sentence actually passed, & as that sentence was not warranted in law, it must be reduced.—*R. v. On a preliminary objection at the hearing of the appeal, that the recognisance should have been entered into by the clerk on behalf of the council, so as to render their goods liable, for the reason that the council had by resolution authorised the clerk to lay the original information & if unsuccessful, to carry the proceedings further, & that the clerk "duly authorised" had sworn the information, & entered into the recognisance "as principal":—Held: the recognisance was good, in that in fact the clerk as informant was applt., being at liberty by virtue of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 259 to institute & carry on any proceedings which the local authority was authorised to institute, & the above words of authorisation were surplusage.—*LAWRENCE v. 1461a. Justices must be sitting in judicial capacity.]

—A county council delegated, under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), s. 5, to justices sitting in petty sessions the council's powers under sect. 2 of the Act to "grant licences to such persons as they think fit to use the premises specified in the licence for the purposes" of a cinematograph theatre.

Owing to the absence of any provision in the statute for the granting of provisional licences in respect of buildings not yet erected, a practice grew up of applying to justices to approve plans of a proposed building, it being understood that if the plans were approved—all opposition, if any, being heard on that application—a subsequent application for a licence would be granted as a matter of course when the building was completed in accordance with the plans:—Held: since no power was given by the Act to the county council or to justices to approve plans, the justices in so doing, or in refusing to do so, were engaging in an extra-judicial proceeding which the ct. could not control by certiorari or mandamus.—*R. v. 100a. ——— Omission to pass money through court.]—An order was made against pltf. in a county ct. committing him to prison, but was suspended so long as he paid £1 a month into court. Deft., the judgment creditor, asked him to pay him the £1 direct, & promised to pass it through the ct. Pltf. paid the deft. the money, but deft. did not pass it through the ct. Pltf. having been imprisoned was held entitled to damages.—CHAPMANN v. MORLEY (1891), 7 T. L. R. 257.

101a. No 'detention—Bail given.]—In an action for a malicious arrest, pltf., in order to support an averment in his declaration, that he had been arrested, proved the writ ; the warrant ; that the officer sent a messenger to him, informing him that he had such a warrant, the messenger not having it then with him, & desiring him to give bail ; that he sent word that he would on the following day ; & that he accordingly did so, giving a bail-bond at the officer's house ; but never being actually detained :—Held : these facts did not amount to an arrest ; & therefore, the averment was not proved.—BERRY v. 20 i. General rule.]—The definition of "prosecution" is not confined to proceedings before a magistrate or a criminal ct. The proceedings relating to the granting of sanction to prosecute, though they may not lead to imposition of fine or imprisonment, render the person charged liable to fine or imprisonment, & therefore, come within the meaning of the term "prosecution."—RABINDRA NATH DAS v. JOGENDRA NATH DEB (1928), 1 L. R. 56 Calo. 432.—IND.

33 ii. ———.]—A suit for damages for malicious prosecution cannot proceed when the proceeding alleged to give rise to the cause of action had ended in the dismissal of the complaint under Code of Criminal Proceedings, 1898, s. 203, & no process had been issued against pltf., & the mere fact that pltf. had cross-examined the witnesses for complainant cannot alter the character of the proceedings.—SULHAG CHAMAR v. NAND LAL SARHU (1928), 1 L. R. 8 Pat. 285.—IND.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

40 iii. ———.]—In any country where, as in India, the prosecution is not private, an action for malicious prosecution, in the most literal sense of the word, cannot be raised against any private individual. ab. 'Divorce proceedings.]—Deft. petitioned for the dissolution of her marriage upon the ground that her husband had committed adultery with pltf. Pltf. obtained leave to intervene in the suit to answer the charge, whereupon deft. abandoned the charge, & was granted leave to amend her petition by striking out the charge of adultery. Pltf. then brought this action to recover damages. The declaration contained two counts, one for defamation, the other for malicious prosecution on the ground that the charge of adultery was made maliciously & without reasonable & probable cause. The first count was abandoned :—Held : the declaration did not disclose a cause of action, as the bringing of civil proceedings, however maliciously, will not support a subsequent action for malicious prosecution, except in the case of the presentation of a bkpoy. petition against a trader or the presentation of a petition for winding up a trading co.—FENN v. Deft. admitted that he was not justified in swearing that she was wandering at large, but he said that he had acted in good faith & in order to prevent her, in her own interests, from disposing of her property. The judge, in directing the jury, told them that on that admission the proceedings must be deemed to have been taken without reasonable or probable cause, but that in determining whether they were taken maliciously they should consider whether the deft. was actuated by an honest desire to protect pltf.'s property in her own interest or by some indirect or improper motive.—Held: they were properly directed.—*RAPLEY v. 455a. ———.—]—In an action for malicious prosecution, the function of the jury is to find what are the relevant facts, if these are in dispute. When the facts operating on the mind of the prosecutor are ascertained, it is for the judge to decide whether they afford reasonable & probable cause for prosecuting the accused person.

It is not required of any prosecutor that he must have tested every possible relevant fact before he takes action. His duty is not to ascertain whether there is a defence, but whether there is reasonable & probable cause for a prosecution. Circumstances may exist in which it is right, before charging a man with misconduct, to ask him for an explanation; but no general rule can be laid down, & where a person is satisfied, or has apparently sufficient evidence, that he has in fact been cheated, there is no obligation to call on the cheat & ask for an explanation, inasmuch as to ask for this may only have the effect of causing material evidence to disappear or be manufactured.—*HERNIMAN v. - 59a. — To sell—On payment of tolls.—A trader has the same right on paying the proper tolls to sell by auction in a market the marketable goods of others as he has to use the market for selling his own goods by private treaty, & there is the same obligation on the market owner to provide him with accommodation. Where, therefore, the owners of a market refused for reasons other than lack of room to allow a trader to use the market for sales by auction of the marketable goods of others, they could not maintain an action to restrain the trader from carrying on auctions in premises close to but outside the market, in a manner which did not amount to the setting up of a rival market, on the ground that he was causing a disturbance of the market.—LONDON CORPN. v. 55b. Servant lent to contractor—No request by contractor.—Defts. were occupiers of paper mills on which an independent contractor, the E. Co., was installing an electrical power plant. Defts. instructed M., one of their own electrical apprentices, to work with the E. Co.'s men under the E. Co.'s foreman, J. This instruction was not given in response to any request from or agreement with the E. Co. for the loan to them of M.'s services, but was merely a part of M.'s training in his trade. By J.'s orders, M. erected a platform to enable pltf., one of the E. Co.'s men, to reach his work. M. used a defective plank (not supplied by defts.) which broke, causing injury to pltf.:—Held: (1) defts. were not liable as occupiers of the premises; but (2) since M. was not working with the E. Co.'s men in response to any request from or under any agreement with the E. Co., he remained the servant of defts., who were therefore liable to pltf. for his tortious act.—*CLELLAND v. 75a. Salesman driving own car.—The driver of a motor car negligently knocked down & injured a pedestrian. The driver was the owner of the car, but he used it to carry samples of the goods of B. & A. G., Ltd., which he received each morning & returned or accounted for each evening. In order to sell such goods he visited such places & persons as he thought fit without being subject to any direction by B. & A. G., Ltd., & he was not prohibited from acting as agent or servant of any other person or co., & indeed, was at liberty to refuse to call on any person B. & A. G., Ltd., might suggest. He was remunerated by a commission on sales & was paid £1 per week towards the cost of his petrol. It was not, however, a term of the agreement between the driver & B. & A. G., Ltd., that he should use the said or any car. There was no binding agreement upon the driver to work at all, but upon his failure to procure orders, B. & A. G., Ltd. would have terminated the payment for petrol:—Held: in the circumstances the driver was not the employee or agent of B. & A. G., Ltd., & pltf. was not entitled to recover damages for negligence against B. & A. G., Ltd.—EGGINTON v. READER, [1936] 1 All E. R. 7; 52 T. L. R. 212; 80 Sol. Jo. 168.

so. Insurance agent.—The duties of an agent of a life insurance society were stated in his contract to be to obtain proposals for the society, to collect the required premiums, & to arrange for proponents to be medically examined. He was paid no salary, but only commission which was to include his expenses & was allowed to undertake any other work provided it was not insurance business. The society had no right of supervision or control over the methods employed by the agent who was free to obtain proposals or not as he pleased:—Held: he was not a servant of the society, but an independent contractor for whose negligent acts the society was not liable.—*COLONIAL MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD. v. sa. Mining operations.—Resp. had charge of the mining operations in applt.'s mine. Applt. supplied the dynamite, the tools & accessories. Resp. hired the men, paid them, controlled them, & discharged them. He was allowed to do the work as he pleased, except that he was indicated where the mining should take place. He was not in any way the subordinate of the co., his whole obligation towards the latter consisting in supplying a sufficient quantity of mineral rock of a given size for the run of the mill. He was responsible in damages if he failed in this respect. He was paid twenty cents per wagon; & in addition, applt. paid the insurance premiums required by the Workmen's Compensation Board to cover accidents to resps.' employees; but this was done as the result of an express condition of the agreement between resp. & applt. Resp. had to deliver rock of the required size. The rock was loaded into small wagons & carried to the mill. The loading was done by means of a steam shovel operated by one of the employees of applt. co. When the rock was found too large, it was laid aside & it became resp.'s duty to reduce it to the required size. Resp., while performing the latter operation, & while engaged in drilling a hole in one of the rocks, was seriously injured by an explosion of dynamite:—Held: resp. was an independent contractor.—*QUEBEC ASBESTOS CORPN. v. Under the partnership agreement each of the partners was to be paid for the work done by his truck in the partnership business, as if he were an independent truck driver & owner. Pltf. sued for the wages owing to him for driving B.'s truck. The partnership had a contract with the city of W., & the work done by pltf. with the truck was done in the performance of that contract. B. had made an assignment of the moneys due to him from the partnership on that work & it was found that pltf. had acquiesced in that assignment. The assignee had been paid

A licence was duly granted & renewed for a further year on Mar. 1, 1933. A copy of the rules was supplied to pltf. at the time of his application, & reg. 20, para. 16, provided that the boxer's money might be stopped only when he was disqualified "for committing a deliberate foul, for not trying, or retiring without sufficient cause, or if the referee gives a no contest decision." This paragraph was altered on June 17, 1932, to read: "Boxers in case of disqualification are only entitled to receive bare travelling expenses, pending the decision of the board . . . when the board . . . may deal with the money as it thinks fit." No notice of the altered rules was given to pltf.
- On July 12, 1933, pltf. agreed to box at the White City Stadium on the terms that he should receive £3,000 win, lose or draw. At the contest pltf. was disqualified for hitting below the belt. The promoters of the contest paid the sum of £3,000 to the Board of Control at their request, & after holding an inquiry the Board withheld the money from pltf. on the ground that he had been disqualified. Pltf. brought proceedings to recover the amount against White City Stadium, Ltd., & the Board of Control:—Held: (1) the contract with the Board of Control was too closely connected with a contract as to employment that it was binding on the infant pltf., having regard to the fact that the contract as a whole was for his benefit; (2) notice of the altered rules was unnecessary in order to make them binding on pltf. in view of the terms of his application for a licence.—*DOYLE v. Pltf. continued in D.'s employment until he was given notice of dismissal, on Nov. 19, 1935, to take effect on Dec. 31, 1935. Pltf. alleged that deft. had made to D. certain statements defamatory of pltf., & he also alleged that deft. wrongfully & maliciously induced D. to commit a breach of contract by dismissing pltf. from his employment without proper notice. In an action for damages, the jury found, inter alia, that the expression "[the pltf.] is a Jew-hater" was defamatory, & that the words referred to pltf. in relation to his business, but that no special damage had been proved. The jury also found that D. had committed a breach of his contract with the pltf., & that deft. had wrongfully & maliciously induced such breach. Deft. & D. were both of the Jewish faith, & the diamond business is largely carried on by persons of that faith:—Held: (1) to call a person a Jew-hater is defamatory; (2) the words complained of were spoken of pltf. in relation to his business, & so were actionable without proof of special damage; (3) the contract was not a yearly hiring, & pltf. was entitled to reasonable notice. 470a. — — — Order relating to place of work.—An order by a master to his servant to remain in a place within the area of his employment is a lawful order unless it involves immediately threatening danger by violence or disease to the person of the servant.

Applt., a Christian Turkish subject in the employment of resp. bank, was ordered by them to be transferred from their Stamboul branch to their branch at Mersina, a distant place in Turkish Asia Minor. He refused to go on the grounds: (a) that Mersina was not within the area of his employment; (b) that the order was unreasonable in the view of his ignorance of Turkish, & the hostile attitude of the Turkish civil authorities to him. He was thereupon dismissed without notice, & brought an action for wrongful dismissal:—Held: (1) on the facts, Mersina was within the area of applt.'s employment, & (2) as he did not suggest that compliance with the order would involve him in personal danger, the order was lawful & his disobedience to it a faute grave which under the contract justified his dismissal.—*BOUZOUROU v. Constantinople. He was dismissed without notice, & brought an action for wrongful dismissal:—Held: as the evidence established that resp.'s personal safety was in real danger in Constantinople, his flight was not a faute grave entitling applt. under the contract to dismiss him; & as his disability to perform his contract, whether in Constantinople or elsewhere, could not at the date of his dismissal be regarded as permanent, his offer to serve outside Turkey entitled him to maintain the action.—*OTTOMAN BANK v. He was thereupon dismissed, being given his current month's salary & a month's salary in lieu of notice:—Held: (1) upon the facts the manager was entitled to more than one month's notice, & the dismissal must be treated as a summary dismissal; (2) the one act of misconduct of the manager justified a summary dismissal.

Pltf. was convicted of driving the car to the common danger & was fined, & his driving licence was suspended for three months. Defts. terminated pltf.'s employment, on the ground that these facts constituted misconduct justifying dismissal. In an action for wrongful dismissal defts. also pleaded that, before the agreement was made, pltf. ought to have informed them that he had previously been convicted of being drunk when in charge of a motor car & been sentenced to imprisonment for driving it in a manner dangerous to the public:—Held: (1) there was no obligation on pltf. to disclose his previous conviction for a motoring offence; (2) the conviction during the currency of the agreement, even although pltf.'s licence was suspended, was not a ground for terminating the agreement, as pltf. could have got someone to drive the car.—*HANDS v. - 565c. —.]—It is said that there is a contractual duty of the servant to disclose his past faults. I agree that the duty in the servant to protect his master's property may involve the duty to report a fellow-servant whom he knows to be wrongfully dealing with that property. The servant owes a duty not to steal, but when he has stolen is there superadded a duty to confess that he has stolen? I am satisfied that to imply such a duty would be a departure from the well-established usage of mankind & would be to create obligations entirely outside the normal contemplation of the parties concerned. If a man agrees to raise his butler's wages, must the butler disclose that two years previously he received a secret commission from the wine merchant; & if the master discovers it, can he, without dismissal or after the servant has left, avoid the agreement for the increase in salary & recover back the extra wages paid? If he gives his cook a month's wages in lieu of notice can he, on discovering that the cook has been pilfering the tea & sugar, claim the return of the month's wages? I think not. He takes the risk; if he wishes to protect himself he can question his servant, & will then be protected by the truth or untruth of the answer (LORD ATKIN).—BELL v. LEVER Bros., Ltd., [1932] A. Under said contract the hospital agreed to pay pltf. "in consideration of the services duly & properly executed in accordance with this contract & to the satisfaction of the Superior of the Hospital." Applt. claimed damages & other relief, on the ground that resp. had broken the agreement, in that he failed to give to applt. a share in respect of certain concessions obtained by applt., the profits on the sale whereof amounted to about £1,000,000. Applt. also contended that, if he was entitled to be paid by resp. only upon quantum meruit, the ct., in ascertaining the amount to be paid, was entitled, & bound, to have regard to such matters as the parties themselves considered reasonable & usual, namely, what profit was in fact made on the sale, & was not limited to fixing a fee. Resp. contended that there was no evidence of any contract, that there was no agreement sufficiently certain or definite to be enforceable, & that the amount of profit made on the re-sale was not a proper basis for assessing the amount due:—Held: (1) there was no concluded contract between the parties as to the amount of the share or interest that the applt. was to receive, & it was impossible for the ct. to complete the contract for them; (2) there was, however, a contract of employment between the parties, which clearly indicated that the work was not to be done gratuitously, & applt. was therefore entitled to a reasonable remuneration on the implied contract to pay him a quantum meruit; (3) on the evidence of the parties themselves, the basis of remuneration by fee should be rejected; (4) in fixing remuneration for services, the ct. was entitled to pay regard to the previous conversation of the parties, & in the circumstances, applt. was entitled to the sum of £5,000 as a reasonable remuneration, calculated on the basis of some reasonable participation.—*WAY v. n i. — Whether Wages Agreement part of contract.—Appl. was verbally engaged in 1920 by resp., a railway co., as a machinist in their shops at the “going rate” of wages. In 1927 he received notice of dismissal on the ground of reduction of staff. He sued for wrongful dismissal, contending that a written agreement, entered into by resp. with a labour organisation & called Wages Agreement No. 4, formed part of his contract of employment, and that under it resps. could not dismiss him upon a reduction of staff, as they had retained men junior to him. The agreement had been applied to applt., who was not a member of the organisation, as to the amount of his wages, the notice given him, & in other respects; resps. stated at the trial that they had applied the agreement to all the men employed in their shops:—Held: Wage Agreement No. 4 did not form part of the contract for the employment of applt., the fact that resps. had applied it to him being equally consistent with the view that they had done so as a matter of policy. Further, that having regard to the terms & nature of the agreement it did not by itself constitute a contract between any individual employee & his employer; observance of its terms by an employer could not be enforced by action even by the organisation, but only by calling a strike.—*YOUNG v. 744a. Hindering performance of work—Employment of efficiency expert.—The second defts. advised industrial firms on means to obtain increase of output & reduction of the cost of production by a system of "human power measurement" which involved timing men at their work. The system was introduced into the works of the first deft. Pltfs., workmen who were engaged at the works on a piece-rate system of wages, complained that the method of "time-studying" produced in them a state of nervous tension, distracting their attention, & preventing concentration on work, & that this resulted in reduced output & loss of wages. They claimed a declaration that it was an implied term of their contracts of employment that the first defts. would not do or cause anything to be done to prevent or hinder them from performing their contracts of employment, & they sought to recover the amounts alleged to have been lost:—Held: assuming that such a term was to be implied, it could not be so wide as to prevent the employers, the first defts., by themselves or their agents, seeing that workmen were properly performing their work, or observing them at work so as to suggest improvements, or substituting other work, or enabling savings to be made in the conduct of the work; what the employers had done was within their rights; there was no breach of contract by the first defts., & no procuring of any breach by the second defts.; & the action was wholly misconceived.—*DAVIES v. 769a. —.— Meaning of "year to year."—Applt. was by an agreement of service appointed by the resps. as a London manager for a period of six months from Dec. 1, 1928, at a named salary subject to renewal, & by clause 6 of the agreement it was provided that if at the expiration of six calendar months the governing director on behalf of the co. should in his sole & absolute discretion think fit the engagement of applt. should continue from year to year, & by sub-clause (c) it was provided that in the event of the agreement being extended the co. should as soon as practicable appoint applt. to be a director of the co. The six months from Dec. 1, 1928, would expire on May 31, 1929. Applt. was not appointed a director, & at the end of a year from the time when the six months expired the co., by their letter dated May 29, 1930, gave him six months' notice to terminate the agreement, whereupon applt. brought an action claiming damages, & the matter went to arbn.:—Held: (1) the "year to year" period began at the end of the trial period, i.e. at the end of the six months, when the governing director exercised his option & that the applt. was therefore entitled to one year's loss of salary; & there were no materials on which any damages could be awarded for loss of salary as a director; (2) applt. was not entitled to recover damages for loss of prestige &/or publicity.—Re GOLOMB & PORTER (WILLIAM) & CO., LTD.'S ARBITRATION (1931), 144 L. His contract of service provided (inter alia) that he would “do all in his power to promote, extend & develop the interests of the co.” The managing director gave pltf. certain unlawful orders, which orders pltf. carried out. The matter came to the notice of the chairman of the board of directors, who, in an interview with pltf., told pltf. that if he gave conclusive proof of the managing director’s dishonesty, he would not be dismissed. Pltf. duly supplied the information required. Pltf. was then dismissed, defts. alleging fraud & dishonesty. Pltf. did not deny the allegations, but he brought an action for breach of con-

- tract & wrongful dismissal on the grounds that, under the terms of the verbal agreement between pltf. and the chairman, it was not open to defts. to rely upon information given by pltf. relating to his own fraud & dishonesty:—Held: (1) it was pltf.’s duty, as part of his contract of service, to report to the board of directors any acts which were not in the interests of the co.; (2) there was therefore no consideration for the alleged verbal agreement, & deft. co. was not prevented from relying upon the information received from pltf.—*SWAIN v. Falling ill, he was treated in the company's hospital by physicians & surgeons employed by the co. He asserted breach of contract in that he had not been skillfully & properly treated:—Held: the co. having exercised due care & skill in selecting its medical

—The first of the two clauses upon which this action is brought is a covenant not to communicate or divulge information as to the customers or affairs of plffs. acquired by deft. whilst in their employment; that is, it is a covenant against certain definite overt acts. The statement of claim, however, asked for an injunction not merely against such acts as were expressly mentioned in the first clause, but further against using such information acquired by deft., & so on, which would include, I suppose, making use even in deft.'s own mind, possibly unconsciously, without divulging any fact to another person. No such injunction as this against using information could or ought to be granted unless there were an express agreement in terms to that effect, that is, against using such information, which there is not here, even if such an injunction could then be granted (JOYCE, J.).—HERBERT MORRIS, LTD. v. duced by a secret process. They sought to restrain deft., who had been in their service for some years & ultimately as works manager, from using or disclosing information obtained in their service. In particular plffs. alleged that deft. was only enabled to make & sell a product "Descalit" by the wrongful use of information. Plffs. also alleged that deft. had made & taken away copies or had wrongfully carried in his memory extracts from a secret formulæ book. Deft. denied that there was any secret process & that he had wrongfully taken & used any information:—Held: deft. had not made or taken away copies of formulæ from the book, which in fact was a costings book, & deft. was not warned as to secrecy when he entered employment in which he learned the processes without difficulty; an injunction would not be granted to prevent using knowledge that had thus become his own; dishonest or surreptitious obtaining of knowledge would have been upon a different footing, but no obligation could be implied not to use knowledge honestly acquired.—UNITED INDIGO CHEMICAL CO., LTD. v. 1026 I. General rule—Master not liable—Act outside scope of authority.—Where a servant, acting on the assumption, not reasonably founded, that property of his master & also property of another were in common peril, took upon himself to interfere, with a view to saving his master's property, with the result that the other owner's property was destroyed:—Held: the servant having no express authority so to act, no authority was to be implied.—BROKEN HILL ASSOCIATED SMELTERS PTY. v. MONAGHAN, [1928] S. A. S. R. 400.—AUS.

1027 I. General rule—Master not liable—Act without direction or assent of master.—A master is not liable in trespass for the wilful act of his servant, as by driving his master's carriage against another, done without the direction or assent of the master.—*MCCORQUODALE v. • 1. — Relationship of master & servant must exist.—Deft. co. hired to M. a derrick & one of its employees, F., who was to take part in the erection of the derrick. After the derrick had been erected upon M.'s premises, a test as to its efficiency was attempted to be made, in the course of which a cable broke, the derrick fell to the ground, & the mast struck & killed M. In an action by the widow & child of M. against the co. to recover damages for his death, it was found that F. was guilty of negligence which caused M.'s death; but as deft. co. did not contract to erect the derrick itself but placed F. under M.'s control for the purpose of the work, he became the servant of M. & his negligence was not the negligence of deft. co.—MUIR v. G. was the superintendent of deft. irrigation co. In an action based on an automobile accident which occurred while he was driving a car belonging to the co. it was found that the accident was due to his negligence & he & the co. were held liable. The co. appealed, on the ground that he was not engaged on its business at the time of the accident. Owing to friction between the co. & water users in an area over which it had no control, the co. had obtained G.'s appointment by the Minister of Lands as a water bailiff with jurisdiction in that area. His work as such was subject to the direction of the Minister & the govt. water engineer, but the co. relieved the govt. of the payment of the bailiff's statutory remuneration. The co. made this arrangement with the idea that its interests would be advanced thereby. It was while he was performing his duties as bailiff in said area that the accident occurred:—Held: the appeal should be allowed, on the ground that G. was not engaged on the co.'s business at the time of the accident.—OFFERDAHL v. He had no specified hours for work, but had a roving commission to sell the co.'s products in a wide area tributary to New Westminster. He was on a salary & used his own car, but the cost of its operation was borne by the co. whether it was being used for co. or private purposes. Under his contract he was obliged to attend upon business, including salesmen's lectures, at the co.'s head office. He had no office, in the ordinary meaning of the word, in his district. The co.'s head office was not his headquarters or his working office, except that he attended there for said lectures & to receive memos of instructions, etc. He worked from his home & picked up telephone or mail orders at a gasoline station in New Westminster. It was his duty to solicit orders from customers on his road home & he might on arriving home go out again that evening to solicit business:—Held: H.'s home was his business headquarters & the co.'s sales headquarters in his district, & therefore, & because of the terms of his employment, the accident occurred in the course of his employment.—DALLAS v. HINTON & HOME OIL DISTRIBUTORS, LTD., [1937] 1 W. W. R. 350; 51 B. C. R. 327; on appeal, [1937] 3 W. W. R. 145; 4 D. L. R. 260; 7 F. L. J. (Can.) 195.—CAN.

By arrangement with pltf. defts. sent the car to the manufacturers' works for repair, & when the repairs were completed their service manager at the garage went to fetch it back. He signed a delivery book at the works & drove the car away, but, instead of driving it to defts.' garage, drove it off elsewhere & the same night collided with an omnibus, with the result that the car was wrecked beyond repair & the service manager himself killed. Pltfs. claimed damages from defts. for loss of the car :—Held : (1) although it was no part of his ordinary duties, the service manager had actual authority to take delivery of cars belonging to defts., if he thought fit to do so, provided it did not interfere with the performance of his duties at the garage; (2) it was in the course of the service manager's employment to fetch the car from the works, & defts. were answerable for the manner in which he conducted himself in performing that service. Pltf. was, accordingly, entitled to recover, despite the fact that it was a breach of duty on the part of the manager to use the car as he did for a private purpose unconnected with defts.' business.—*AITCHISON v. They closed their premises at 1 p.m. on Saturday & they remained closed until Monday morning, when they were found to be flooded by water from the defts.' upstairs shop. The water had run from an open tap which was at the base of a hot-water tank. On Saturday afternoon & evening city officials had cut off the water supply from the building for several hours. During the time the water was off some person turned the tap on the hot-water tank & left it open. Saturday afternoon was a holiday for defts.' general staff, but two of their employees had returned to do some unpacking of stock. They were alone except for a few minutes when the caretaker of the building came in & spoke to them. The judge came to the conclusion that finding no water available in the wash-basin for washing their hands they tried to draw it from the hot-water tank & that one of them had left the tap of it open :—Held : the employees' leaving of the tap open was negligence within the scope of their employment & defts. were liable.—*BISHOP PRINTING CO., LTD. v. 1278a. Alteration to upper floor—Nuisance to tenant of lower floor.—In 1925 the whole of certain premises were demised to deft. bank with a restriction against alteration without the consent of the lessor. In 1933 the bank demised the second & third floors of the premises to pltf. with the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment & to perform & observe the covenants in the head lease. In 1934 defts., the Elevenist Syndicate, wished to take the first floor of the building & for this purpose extensive alterations were necessary. The bank obtained the consent of the head lessor to the alterations subject to the consent being obtained of all the sub-lessees, & the bank subsequently gave a similar consent subject to the same terms & conditions. Pltf.'s consent was never obtained. The Elevenist Syndicate, however, proceeded to instruct contractors to carry out the alterations, & no proper precautions being taken, pltf. suffered damage by reason of the dust & noise caused by such building operations. Pltf. brought an action for damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, nuisance & trespass:—Held: as the consent to the alterations being carried out was subject to pltf.'s consent being obtained, & this was never obtained, the position was that there was no proper consent to the alterations being effected; the bank's consent being subject to the consent of pltf., which was not obtained by the Elevenist Syndicate, there was no breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment & no derogation from the grant; although the Elevenist Syndicate had employed independent contractors, they were liable in damages for nuisance since the work to be done in its very nature involved a risk of damage being done to pltf.; as the bank had covenanted with pltf. that it would observe all the covenants of the head lease & were in default upon this covenant, the appeal must be allowed without costs.—*MATANIA v. 1378a. — Father & mother unmarried.—The foundation of an action for seduction is not the relationship of parent & child but that of master & servant, & the right of a putative father to sue for damages for the seduction of his daughter is not affected by the fact that he is not married to the girl's mother, if at the time of the seduction the girl is living, & performing services to him, in the household which he maintains & of which he is the head & master.—*BEETHAM v. 1456a. — Action by Crown.—As the result of a collision between a motor lorry belonging to deft. & a motor cycle, which was caused by the negligence of deft.'s driver, two aircraftsmen of the Royal Air Force who were riding on the motor cycle sustained injuries which rendered them for a time incapable of service. The men recovered damages against deft. in which no sum was included for loss of wages or rations or for medical expenses, because their wages & rations had been continued during their incapacity & they had received treatment in a Royal Air Force hospital. On a Crown information against the deft. in that behalf:—Held: the Crown was entitled to maintain a claim against deft. for loss of service of the men by the tortious act of his driver, & to recover any damage which it had thereby suffered; the measure of that damage was the amount of the wages & rations of the men during their incapacity & of the expenses of their hospital treatment, the amount of which payments, allowances & expenses, if they had not been borne by the Crown, could have been recovered by the men from deft. as damages.—*A.-G. v. 1344 viii. —. —In Jan. 1924, pltf.'s daughter, who was then 16 years of age, went into the service of O'L. The terms of the hiring were not proved, but appeared to be for about 11 months, from Jan. till Christmas, as she continued in O'L.'s service till the end of 1924, & re-entered it in Jan. 1925. During the year 1925 she made the acquaintance of deft., & became on friendly terms with him. About Christmas, 1925, she told deft. that she was not going back to O'L. the following year, but would look for another place. Deft. induced her to re-engage with O'L. During the year 1926 immoral relations took place between her & deft. Towards the end of 1926 she told deft. that she was not going back to O'L. the following year; but again, at the request of deft., she re-engaged with O'L. in Jan. 1927, for that year. Misconduct took place between them again in that year, 1927, & she became pregnant in Nov. 1927. She remained in O'L.'s employment until Jan. 1928, & then took service with other people. She subsequently went into the Union Hospital, where she gave birth to a child on Aug. 5, 1928. Pltf. brought a civil bill against

deft., claiming damages for his daughter's seduction by deft., & also for fraudulently inducing her to enter into the service of O'L. In the years 1926 & 1927 for the purpose of seducing her, with allegations of consequent pregnancy & loss of service. The Circuit Ct. judge dismissed the civil bill. Pltf. appealed to the High Ct.:—Held: by the High Ct., & on appeal, by the Supreme Ct., that the decision of the Circuit Ct. judge was correct, as at the time of the seduction pltf.'s daughter was in the service of O'L. & not that of pltf., & the fact that she was under age was immaterial. Deft. was not estopped from relying upon the existence of the contract of service made between pltf.'s daughter & O'L., although he, deft., had induced her to enter into it in order that he might carry on the illicit intercourse which had commenced in the previous year.—*SHINE v. - 1729a. ———. ]—Pltf., a cattleman employed to tend cattle on a steamship of defts. on a voyage from Canada to England, was injured by falling off a ladder leading to the cattle-men's quarters on the steamship. He brought this action against defts. for damages, on the ground that the accident had occurred through the ladder being in an unsafe condition & that its unsafe condition was due to negligence on the part of some member of the crew employed by defts. It appeared that ptf. was employed by the owner of the cattle to look after them on the voyage, but he had also signed the ship's articles & was receiving a nominal wage & his food & passage from defts. The judge found as a fact that the ladder at the time of the accident was in an unsafe condition owing to the negligence of some member of the crew of the ship & ptf.'s injuries were due to that negligence, but he also found that, besides being in the employment of the owner of the cattle, pltf. was also in the employment of defts. Pltf.'s injuries were therefore caused by the negligence of a fellow-servant with whom he was in common employment, & the claim must fail.—HOLLOWAY v. DONALDSON LINE, LTD. (1935), 41 Com. Cas. 47.

- 1753a. Drivers of different coaches.]—In every contract of service there is implied by law an undertaking by every employee that he accepts the risk of injury by the negligence of his fellow employees engaged in common employment with him. In order to bring a case within the exemption from liability by reason of common employment it is not sufficient merely to show that the negligent employee & the one who is claiming damages based on that negligence were servants of a common master; it must be shown that the men were engaged in the same common work under a common employment. But two men may be in common employment, within the doctrine relating to common employment, even though they are working in different departments of duty. Two employees together carrying out the same or similar orders of their employer in close juxtaposition to one another are engaged in common employment.

six motor-coaches to take three parties from Liverpool to New Brighton. The coaches picked up the excursionists at the same place & at the same time, took them to the Cathedral & waited until the three parties of excursionists had resumed their seats. The six coaches then went as a team through the Mersey Tunnel to New Brighton, where they discharged their passengers. The drivers' instructions were to return direct to the garage, but each driver could go by any route he chose. The coaches started to come back as a team; but there was some disorganisation at the Mersey Tunnel. The deceased man R., after passing through the Tunnel, proceeded to take his coach back to the garage by a certain route, & he was followed by J., who was driving another coach, & by another driver. R.'s coach stopped, & R. got down to see what was wrong. J., who was behind R., endeavoured to get in front of R. & then to stop & go to R.'s assistance. J., however, did not see R., who was standing on the off-side of his coach, & unfortunately R. was crushed & received injuries from which he died. The trial judge found that the accident was due to the negligence of J. In an action brought by R.'s widow against his employers under the Fatal Accidents Acts:—Held: J. & R. were, at the time of the accident, not only in the employ of the same master, but were engaged in the same common work, & were therefore in common employment, & their employers were therefore exempt from liability.—*RADCLIFFE v. Against this contention, it was argued that, as the crews of two ships belonging to the same co. were not in common employment, the doctrine was not applicable to these circumstances. Pltf. had been in the service of the London General Omnibus Co. before that co. was absorbed in the London Passenger Transport Board:—Held: the doctrine of common employment applied, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—METCALFE

1819a. —.]—Pltf. was the widow of a man employed by deft. co. as a derrick. Deceased had left the barge on which he was employed & volunteered to act temporarily as tipper on a second barge in order to relieve a fellow-workman. The fellow-workman was in fact a director of the co., but at the time he was acting merely as a foreman over the job, & was not there as representing the board of directors. While engaged as a tipper in these circumstances he stumbled & fell into the hold, sustaining minor injuries. He was removed to hospital & given an anæsthetic under which he collapsed & died. The post-mortem examination showed that he had a diseased heart, but neither the history of the man's activities nor the use of a stethoscope did or would have disclosed the man's condition. At the trial it was held that the death was due to the negligence of defts., who were ordered to pay to pltf. £785, of which sum £300 was not to be recoverable in any event. On appeal:—Held: (1) on the facts there was no negligence on the part of defts.; (2) the fact that the fellow-worker was a member of the board of directors did not in a case where he was in fact acting as a foreman bar the defence of common employment; (3) on the work upon which deceased was engaged at the time he was merely a volunteer & the defence of volenti non fit injuria applied; (4) the administration of the anæsthetic was not a wrongful act intervening between the accident & the death, & could not be relied on as a case of novus actus interveniens; (5) where there is an appealable matter, the ct. should not, as a condition of granting a stay of execution, order to be paid to pltf. & to be irrecoverable in any event any sum to which it is possible that it may ultimately be decided that pltf. has no title.—*BLOOR v. 1824b. Fellow-servant supplying unsafe system of working.—The provision of a safe system of working in a mine is an obligation of the owner, who, if he appoints an agent to perform it, remains vicariously responsible for the agent's negligence.

An agent in performing the owner's duty of providing a safe system of working in the mine is not engaged in common employment with an ordinary workman in the mine; he is performing the duty of the owner, not the duty of an employee, & consequently the defence of common employment is not available to the mine owner, where injury has been caused to a workman through the negligence of the agent.—WILSONS & CLYDE COAL CO., LTD. v. ENGLISH, [1938] A. C. 57; [1937] 3 All E. R. 628; 106 L. J. P. C. 117; 157 L. T. 406; 53 T. L. R. 944; 81 Sol. Jo. 700, H. L.

employee B. to hand him a plank to put across. This B. did, & T. placed it across the support, & upon T.'s walking upon it, the plank snapped & T. fell to the ground & was injured. The plank had a knot in it running transversely, at which point it broke. The Crown claimed T. was warned, & that being an expert carpenter he should have noticed the defect, & failing to do so, he was the victim of his own negligence:—Held: the injury to T. resulted from the negligence of an officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment on a public work, & T. was entitled to recover from the Crown for the damage he had suffered. The question of responsibility is to be decided according to the law of the province where the cause of action arose. The Crown was in law held to see that only competent & prudent foremen were engaged to see to the safety of the men, & the fact of the foreman furnishing the defective plank in question & stating the used ones were good, coupled with the act of a co-employee in handing it to him, was negligence for which the Crown was responsible.—THIBOUTOT v. R., [1932] Ex. C. R. 189.—CAN.

Owing to the unsuspected existence of an old drain near one side of the trench, that side fell in & the labourer was fatally injured. In an action founded (inter alia) upon Employers' Liability Act, 1880 :—Held : (1) the trench was not a part of the "ways," but it was a part of the "works" of deft. co. within Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (c. 42), s. 1 (1); (2) there was no negligence in failing to board the trench nor in failing to discover the old drain.—*HUNT v. 1892a. Defect in good working condition.—Under Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (c. 42), s. 1 (1), an employee injured by an accident can claim compensation if he establishes that the accident was due to a defect in the condition of the ways & works in a mine when from any cause they are unfit for the uses for which they were designed & to which they were intended to be put, & by sect. 2 (1) the liability is limited to a case where the defect has arisen from or has not been remedied owing to the negligence of the employer or some person in his service & entrusted by him with the duty of seeing that the ways or works are in proper condition :—Held : (1) the defect in condition referred to is a defect in good working condition, & it is not confined to the presence of the physical parts of machinery or plant; (2) it is not necessary that the person under sect. 2 (1) entrusted with the duty should be a person superintending, & therefore the failure of an employee whose duty it was to adjust a clip on a running hutch, with the result that it ran away & killed another employee, was the failure of a person entrusted with a duty within the sub-section which rendered the deceased man's employers liable for the accident.—ROBERTSON v. KINNEIL CANNEL & COKING COAL CO. (1931), 101 L. J. P. C. 44; 146 L. T. 312, H. L.

2021a. Proceedings by widow but not by children.—In respect of an accident, in which four workmen in the employment of resp. railway co. were killed, proceedings were brought against the co. by each of the respective widows claiming damages under Fatal Accidents Acts, 1846 (c. 93) and 1864 (c. 95), & Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (c. 42), & proceedings claiming compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), were brought by the children of each of the four workmen. The county ct. judge awarded damages under the Acts of 1846 & 1864 to each of the four widows, without taking into account any loss suffered by the children; & similarly, in awarding compensation to the children as dependants he disregarded the fact that the widows had recovered damages :—Held : in assessing the damages recoverable by the widows in the actions brought by them the county ct. judge was right to ignore the fact that the children were claiming compensation in respect of the same accident under the Workmen's Compensation Act; & similarly, in respect of the claims by the children to compensation he was right to ignore the fact that the widows were claiming damages.—*EVERY v. without swinging, by a winch operating through a derrick, & as part of this duty, to stop the winch, when necessary, by signalling to the winchman. He failed to discharge this duty of stopping the winch, with the result that two bales struck the hatch & fell from the derrick & injured the dock labourer. In an action of damages brought by the dock labourer against the stevedore, it was proved that the foreman's duties, in addition to his foregoing duty as hatchmouthman, were to engage & dismiss the gang; to allocate to them their work, which they carried out under his orders & supervision; & to assist in guiding the load, when it was raised, towards, & arranging it on, a barrow, on which it was wheeled to the quayside. He was made a higher wage than the rest of the gang :—Held : (1) the foreman's principal duty was that of superintendence, & since any manual labour he performed was subsidiary to that duty, he could not be regarded as "ordinarily engaged in manual labour" within Employers' Liability Act, 1880, s. 8; (2) as the accident had happened through the foreman's negligence while in the exercise of his duty of superintendence, defender was liable in reparation to pursuer.—*RONALD v. for their servants.—M'LACHLAN v. THE PEVERILL S.S. CO., LTD. & MACGREGOR & FERGUSON (1896), 23 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 753; 33 Sc. L. R. 634; 4 S. L. T. 19.—SCOT.

2054a. ———.]—A workman was employed at tree-felling, hedge-cutting, & tree-planting at irregular intervals, & was paid at the end of each job. After he had completed one of these jobs & been paid for it, he inquired of the man for whom he had been working the price of a load of firewood. On being told he said that he could not afford to pay but would do odd jobs for it. He came to work for the firewood by loading timber, but while doing so he was injured by an accident. He claimed compensation for the injury. The county ct. judge held that the applicant was not working under a contract of service at the time of the accident. He further held that, if he were working under a contract of service, it was illegal under Truck Act, 1831, & he refused to exercise his discretion under sect. 3 (3) in favour of the injured man. Appt. appealed:—Held: the matter was a question of fact for the county ct. judge, & there was evidence to support the conclusion to which he came.—*HARDCASTLE v. ii. ———.]—Workgang collected & paid by foreman.—A steamship co. employed a number of dock labourers, without the intervention of a stevedore or other independent contractor, to unload their vessel at a rate of remuneration which depended, not on the days or hours worked by each man, but on the number of tons of grain taken off the vessel. The rate of remuneration for the work to be done was a fixed sum per ton, & the aggregate amount was paid by the co. to certain representatives of the men, who divided it equally amongst those who had done the work. There were 56 men, divided into 8 gangs of 7

each. One member of each gang was called a "foreman," but he did the same work & received the same remuneration as the other men. While unloading the vessel one of these men was fatally injured, & his dependants claimed compensation. Resp. contended that they had no control, & in fact, exercised no control or supervision over the men's work, & that, in view of all the facts, the deceased was not a workman in their employment within the meaning of the Act. The judge found as a fact that he was a workman in their employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of the judge.—*SCANLON v. c vi. ———.]—Jockey.—A jockey, while riding for fee or reward in a hurdle race run under the management of the Australian Jockey Club at Randwick, received personal injury when his horse fell & broke its neck. The jockey's earnings were £2 10s. per week & he was entitled to claim compensation from the Club in pursuance of sect. 6 (10). He, however, claimed compensation from resp., a race-horse trainer & owner, alleging that he (appt.) was working under a contract of service with resp.; that he was a "casual" worker who had worked under successive contracts of service with two or more employers in the "horse racing industry"; & that his average weekly earnings should be deemed to be not less than the living wage of £3 8s. 6d. in terms of sect. 14 (e). The Commission found that (1) appt. jockey did not work under a "contract of service" with resp., who neither exercised nor retained control over the manner in which appt. rode as a hurdle jockey in a measure sufficient to constitute the relationship of employer & employee; & (2) on the facts the claim under sect. 14 (e) failed.—*CARTER v. The county ct. judge found that she had not entered into a contract of service, but was only employed to render certain services, & therefore held that she was not a "workman" within the Act. The appct. appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—ARMOUR v. BRITISH INTERNATIONAL PICTURES (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 367, C. A.

2057c. — Representative of firm payable by commission.—Manufacturers appointed a man under a written agreement as their representative for a certain area, payment to be made by commission. By the terms of this agreement the manufacturers had the right in their discretion to refuse any order sent to them by the man or by customers obtained by him; he was not during the continuance of the agreement to sell or deal in any other goods of the same class as those supplied by them except as their representative; the price lists supplied to him were to remain the property of the manufacturers & were to be returned to them on the termination of the agreement; he was to report "at least three times each week (preferably daily) on the forms provided" & "to well & properly call upon all buyers in his territory." The agreement was subject to one month's notice on either side, unless the representative committed a breach of it, in which case dismissal might be immediate. If there was any dispute regarding overlapping of territory, the matter was to be settled by arbitration, the arbitrator being the managing director for the time being of the manufacturing co., whose decision should be final:—Held: such an agreement constituted the relationship of principal & agent & was not a contract of service. The representative was not therefore a "workman" within the meaning of the Act. Appeal dismissed.—PETRIE v. RED BANK MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 423, C. A.

2057d. — Salvation Army officer.—Applt., who was an officer in the Salvation Army, when working at the Army's Hall fell over a bucket, & sustained injuries. She claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act:—Held: upon the construction of the "orders & regulations for officers of the Salvation Army" & of the form which set out applt.'s rights & duties, & which was signed by applt. when she became an officer of the Salvation Army, the relationship between applt. & the General of the Salvation Army was a purely spiritual, & not a contractual, one, & the fact that applt. received money for her maintenance according to a scale & that deductions had been made therefrom for a pension fund did not affect that relationship. Applt. was therefore not a "workman" within 1925 Act, s. 3, & was not entitled to compensation under that Act.—ROGERS v. BOOTH, [1937] 2 All E. R. 751; 156 L. T. 487; 53 T. L. R. 741; 81 Sol. 2057e. Hospital nurse.—Appct., who was a fully qualified hospital nurse, was employed as a temporary nurse in a hospital owned & controlled by resps. Appct. had been instructed by the sister in charge of the ward in which she was working to prepare & apply to a patient an antiphlogistine poultice. While applt. was heating the preparation it exploded & caused injuries to applt. in respect of which she claimed compensation. It appeared from the evidence that applt. was subject to the rules & regulations of the hospital as to the times of sleeping, meals & recreation, & was generally under the control of the matron. When in the ward applt. was subject to the control of the sister in charge of the ward, & she was carrying out the instructions of the sister when the accident happened. The matron said that the sister would give the nurse instructions as to what was to be done during her absence. In case of disagreement as to the method of carrying out the sister's orders the nurse would be obliged to obey the sister's instructions. In a claim for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act the county ct. judge sitting as arbitrator made an award in favour of resps. on the ground that applt. was not a "workman" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, the contract between her & resps. being one for services & not of service. Upon appeal to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: applt. was a "workman" within the Workmen's Compensation Act, as she was working under a contract of service with resps., & therefore was entitled to compensation in respect of vant & master between him & the person by whom he is employed.—CASSIDY v. BLAINE LAKE RURAL TELEPHONE CO., LTD., [1933] 3 W. W. R. 641.—CAN.

sp. Valid contract of service.—Work in breach of Sunday Observance Act.—Appct. was a commercial traveller who on a Sunday afternoon journeyed from M. to U., a distance of 27 miles, in his employer's motor car, for the purpose of there soliciting an order for goods for his employer. On the return journey, owing to a defect in the steering gear of the motor car which applt. was driving, he sustained personal injury causing him incapacity for work, & claimed compensation. Liability was denied by resp., its defence being based, inter alia, on the Sunday Observance Act, 1877. The Commission found that applt. was a "workman," & at the time of the happening of the injury was in the course of his employment "doing worldly labour, business or work" of his "ordinary calling" on a Sunday afternoon. The work in question could lawfully have been performed on some day or night other than Sunday. It was performed on a Sunday for business convenience. He was committing a breach of the Sunday Observance Act, 1877, by performing work on a Sunday, but was doing what he was employed by resp. to do, notwithstanding the illegality of such work. The Commission exercised its judicial discretion under sect. 40 of Workers' Compensation Act, 1926–1929, in favour of applt., & dealt with the matter as if applt. had at the time of the injury been "a worker under a valid contract of service." The injury having arisen out of & in the course of applt. worker's employment with resp., an award of compensation was made.—SAWYER v. AMALGAMATED ELECTRICAL & BATTERY ENGINEERS, LTD., [1935] W. C. 2067a. Termination of employment by wreck.]—A deck hand signed on under a running agreement for a voyage to the Iceland fishing grounds in Nov. After encountering bad weather the vessel ran aground in the early morning on a desolate section of the coast of Iceland. The crew remained on board for four & a half hours exposed to strong, cold winds & rain before the master ordered the abandoning of the vessel at 9 a.m. They waded fifteen to twenty yards through the surf, which was between knee & waist deep, & then set out to obtain aid. The deck hand was in good health, & one of the best of the party. They were without food, & had to cross several deep streams, encountering heavy sandstorms on the way. At 1.30 p.m. the deck hand stumbled in one of these streams & was completely submerged, after which he lost heart & strength, & by 2.15 p.m. was losing consciousness & unable to walk. He was carried by his companions until dark, when the party huddled together for warmth under a sandbank. At dawn the deck hand was found to be dead. To a claim by his widow for compensation the employers answered that he was no longer in their employment at the time of the accident. The county ct. judge found that death was due to personal injury by accident arising out of & in the course of the employment, & made an award in favour of the dependants. The employers appealed, & argued that by Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 158, & Merchant Shipping (International Labour Conventions) Act, 1925 (c. 42), s. 1 (1), the employment terminated when the vessel was wrecked:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & such finding did not run counter to the argument put forward by the employers founded on the Merchant Shipping Acts.—MAVER v. 2113a. Validity of marriage—Onus of proof.—A workman was killed leaving dependent upon his earnings a woman who claimed to be his wife & a daughter of the woman by a former marriage. On a claim for compensation made by these two persons the employer disputed liability on the ground that they were not members of the deceased's family within 1925 Act, sect. 4 (3). He put forward as the lawful wife of the deceased one A., who had gone through a form of marriage with the deceased in 1895. To this the applicants answered that such marriage was invalid, A. being herself a married woman at the time. At the hearing A. was called as a witness, & it was proved that A. had married D. in 1882, but that in 1887 D. deserted her & had never been heard of since. The county ct. judge held that in order to succeed appts. must displace the validity of the 1895 marriage, & in order to displace the validity of that marriage they must prove that D. was alive in 1895. He found that they had failed to prove that D. was alive in 1895, & made his award in favour of the employer. Appts. appealed:—Held: it was a question of fact for the judge & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—MONCKTON v. TARR (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 504, C. A.

2113b. Right of arbitrator to use knowledge of local conditions.—Appls. were the father & mother & two sisters of a coal-cutter who was fatally injured by an accident arising out of, & in the course of, his employment in resps.' collieries. The family lived together, & appls. claimed to be partial dependants of the deceased, whose earnings were £3 2s. 4d. a week. The father received 26s. unemployment benefit, & the two sisters earned respectively 21s. 8d. & 19s. 3d. a week. The total sum of £6 9s. 3d. a week was handed to the mother, who spent it on maintaining the family, but by the workman's death it was reduced to £3 6s. 11d. On an application by appls. for compensation the arbitrator found that 17s. per week per person in a family in the class & position of appls. was sufficient for the provision of ordinary necessities of life, & in arriving at this conclusion he took into consideration the evidence & his judicial knowledge of local conditions & of the wages of miners in the district. In the result the arbitrator awarded a lump sum to the mother, who was admitted by resps. to be a partial dependant, but he awarded no compensation to the other appls. on the ground that they were not to any extent dependent on the deceased:—Held: within reasonable limits the arbitrator was entitled to use his own judicial knowledge properly applied, & he was entitled to come to the decision at which he had arrived.—*KEANE v. 2127a. Probability of future support.]—A cab-driver was regularly employed at £2 5s. per week but, on the death of that employer, remained out of work for eighteen months. At the end of that time he obtained occasional employment driving to funerals, but his wages at this form of work only averaged 5s. a week. On returning from driving to a funeral he fell from the seat of his cab, & died from a fracture of the skull. At the time of his death he was wholly, & his widow mainly, dependent on a son's assistance. On a claim for compensation brought by the widow, as a dependant, the county ct. judge, in making an award in favour of the employer, said that he must be satisfied that there was a partial dependency at the time of death before he could speculate as to what the future might or might not bring forth. The dependant appealed:—Held: the probability of the workman, if he had lived, regaining full employment, & once more supporting the dependant being a factor to be considered in deciding whether there was dependency, & it being doubtful whether this factor had been taken into account, the case must go back to the county ct. judge to consider such a probability.—LEE v. MUNRO (1928), 98 L. J. K. B. 49; 140 L. T. 129; 72 Sol. Jo. 779; 21 B. W. C. C. 401, C. A.

2137a. Wife in asylum.—On the death of a workman, who was a labourer, killed by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, a claim was made for compensation under the Act on behalf of the widow as dependent on the earnings of the deceased workman. The widow, for two years before the accident, had been in an asylum suffering mentally from the after effects of childbirth. On the hearing of the arbn. in the county ct. no medical evidence was given as to the condition then of the widow, or of the probability or possibility of her future recovery. The county ct. judge held that there was no intention shown by deceased of bringing the legal relation of a husband to a dependent wife to an end, & he said that it was common knowledge that in many cases women whose mental condition had been deranged by childbirth did recover. The asylum authorities, after consideration of the circumstances that the workman was only earning £2 7s. 1d. a week & was helping to support his mother & had a child to whose maintenance he was contributing, made no claim during his lifetime or after his death, but on an application the county ct. judge ordered an arbn. in which the widow was to be represented. The employers appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge, without medical evidence, could not find a probability of the widow's recovery, or that there was any evidence upon which a finding of dependency could be based.—*BACON v. 2143a. —.]—A workman, in 1931, deserted his wife & family, who had to be maintained by the Poor Law Authorities. He was subsequently killed by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment when working under an assumed name. The widow, after learning the facts in 1934, brought a claim on behalf of herself & her children for compensation as dependants. The county ct. judge held on the facts that there was no dependency or any reasonable probability of dependency & made his award for the employers. The widow appealed:—Held: the question of dependency was one of fact & could not be presumed from the legal obligation to support. There was evidence to support the finding of fact & no misdirection.—PETERS v. OVERHEAD, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 190, C. A.

2143b. Motive of marriage immaterial—Marriage while in dying condition.—In 1913, the sister of the wife of a workman came to live with both of them. In 1915 the wife died & the sister-in-law stayed on as the workman's housekeeper, becoming entirely dependent on him for her support. In Dec. 1925, the workman was operated on for scrotal epithelioma, but resumed work in June, 1926. In Mar. 1928, he was certified as suffering from an industrial disease & underwent another operation. In Apr. he went to hospital, but was discharged after four days on the ground that his case was incurable, & it was then thought that he was in a dying condition. On June 7, he married his sister-in-law with the view of making her a dependant within the Act. On July 21, 1928, he died. At the time of his death he was in receipt of a weekly payment of compensation from his employers. The widow claimed compensation on the ground of total dependency. The county ct. judge found that the widow would not have been a dependant at the time of his death but for the accident, & therefore, refused compensation. The widow appealed:—Held: appct. having proved that, if the workman had not been incapacitated from earning wages, she would at the time of his death have been totally dependent upon him, & having also proved that at that time she was in fact his wife, she was entitled to an award. The fact that she married him after he had become incapacitated was immaterial, & any motive she may have had for marrying him was irrelevant.—BRAZEWELL v. EMMOTT & WALLSHAW, LTD. (1929), 140 L. He was not obliged to work on any particular day or hour &, provided he did not keep money over the week-end, could pay in money collected whenever he pleased & at any branch. He could not go on holiday without the consent of the society. He was given further elaborate written instructions which dealt in detail with the method in which he should carry out his duties. Under this agreement T. occupied a part of the co.'s premises, for which he paid rent, & was provided with power, water, light, & coal. He on his part provided the necessary labour, grinding wheels & other accessories. He could employ & dismiss what men he liked, & the co. could not object to any workman he employed except by terminating the agreement. Work was given out to him by the co.'s foreman at agreed prices & he made his profit out of the prices. He was allowed to do the work in his own way & in his own hours. He was not paid overtime, & had a key of the room in which he worked. The co. had first claim on his time & their foreman frequently came to see how the work progressed, but gave no directions. If the work had to be finished in a certain time, he was bound to finish it in that time, the co., if necessary, directing him to work overtime or get extra assistance. Before beginning the work appct. went to the house, which was vacant, & measured up what it would take to do the work. He dictated a list of the materials required, & these were ordered, & resp. paid for them. A friend of resp.'s, a farmer, showed appct. where to lay the pipes & where the bath was to be put. Resp. on one occasion spoke to appct. about the line one drain would take as regards certain flower beds, but did not tell him where to run the drain. Otherwise appct. was left to himself as to how he would do the work. During the course of the work appct. was injured:—Held: there was clear evidence that appct. had entered into a contract of service at the weekly wage of £4 4s. for the period required for completing a specified work, & accordingly appct. was entitled to compensation.*—*LOGUE v. In Oct. 1927, he ceased working regularly & on Jan. 24, 1928, he was certified as suffering from silicosis. On a claim for compensation, the county ct. judge held on these facts that T. was employed under a contract of service & was a workman entitled to compensation. The co. appealed:—Held: there was no evidence of any right on the part of the co. to control & direct how the work was to be done. For these repairs the plumber brought his own tools & provided his own sand & cement, but the farmer supplied a ladder. On the third day of the job the plumber fell off the ladder & was injured. 2270a. ———.]—A railway signalman died on Feb. 28, 1931, from pneumonia following a chill. It was alleged by his widow that on Feb. 20, 1931, which was a fine, dry day, after the end of his shift the relief man found him drying his cardigan at the cabin fire. It was the practice at the close of a shift to leave a clean bucket of water in the cabin

& it was alleged that the deceased workman got wet & could only have got wet by falling with the bucket when climbing the steps of the signal cabin. On a claim for compensation by the widow the county ct. judge in making his award said that if he were to find that deceased had met with an accident or, supposing there to have been an accident, that that accident had contributed to his death, he would be going into the realms of guess, conjecture, or surmise. Whether injury by accident.]—A workman, who was employed as a brusher in a mine, began a shift at 11 p.m. on Dec. 30. It was the last shift of the year, & the man worked more vigorously than usual in order to finish early for his own purposes. About 12.20 a.m. on Dec. 31, he complained of a pain in his side. He collapsed while at work about ten minutes later, & died shortly afterwards. Death was due to heart failure, caused by the strain of the whole work of the shift operating upon a diseased condition of the heart. There was no proof of any particular or exceptional strain, & it was not proved that the extra vigour with which the deceased had been working caused his death:—Held: the arbitrator was entitled to hold that the workman's death was not caused by injury by “accident” within Workmen's Compensation Acts.—MILLAR v. COLTNESS IRON CO., LTD., [1929] S. C. (Ct. of Sess.) 429.—SCOT.

& collapsed at 10 a.m. The county ct. judge found on the medical evidence that the work the man was actually engaged on neither caused, nor contributed to, nor accelerated the second stroke & that he could not associate the second stroke with the work the man was engaged upon on Dec. 20 nor with any particular work done before then:—Held: the workman's incapacity was due to disease no doubt aggravated by his work, but as it was impossible to point to any specific event that was responsible for his change in condition, there was no accident within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, s. 1 (1).—*ORMOND v. 2317a. Workman with heart disease—Death from strain.]—A workman, employed in a mine, exerted himself in the ordinary course of his employment in lifting & replacing the wheels of a tub which had left the rails. He immediately complained of pain. He went to work the following day, & on his way home fell dead. Death was due to the bursting of the right auricle, owing to the walls of the heart having steadily become thinner over a period of years. Medical evidence was given to the effect that the strain of lifting would tend to make the workman's condition more critical & so lead to the collapse. The county ct. judge held the workman's death was caused by an accident, & he awarded compensation:—Held: it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding.—FLANAGAN v. ACKERS WHITLEY & Co. (1926), 19 B. W. C. C. 399, C. A.

2317b. ———.]—A stevedore, who for many years had done his work without ailing, while employed unloading a ship had to fill a tub with iron ore, & at a certain point in the transit of the tub to deflect it so as to allow it to clear an obstacle. While pulling the tub into the right position he suddenly said "Oh!" & ceased work for a moment, but, recovering, put some iron ore into the tub, when he again felt ill & stopped. He lay down, & within half an hour from his saying "Oh!" was dead. On a post mortem examination it was found that he suffered from coronary disease of the heart, which sooner or later would have caused death:—Held: death resulted from a strain incurred in the ordinary exercise of the man's work, & this amounted to an accident, as to establish an accident it was not necessary to find a sudden or special strain, & an award should be made in favour of the dependant.—McFARLANE v. HUTTON BROTHERS (STEVEDORES), LTD. (1926), 96 L. J. K. B. 357; 136 L. T. 547; 20 B. W. C. C. 222, C. A.

2317c. ———.]—A dock labourer left his home soon after 5 a.m., apparently in good health. Soon after reaching the docks where he was employed he felt unwell, but the attack passed off. At 6 a.m. he commenced work & was engaged with others in loading & unloading bags of china clay & of sugar, each weighing from 1 to 2 cwt., carried in slings to & from the ship. At 8.30 a.m. he had breakfast. He resumed work at 9 a.m. & was loading china clay. By piling the bags of clay one upon another he & his mates formed a temporary platform about 3 feet high, on which they received the slings. Each sling carried eleven bags, which the men stowed in convenient position on the ship. The deceased man was minded to move one of the bags on the platform. He was sitting on another bag at the time. He raised his hook above his head in order to lay hold of the bag he wished to shift. Then he fell forward & died. The man suffered from heart disease, but the nature of the disease was uncertain. His panel doctor, who had died before the proceedings mentioned below, had given a certificate assigning the cause of death to myocarditis & syncope. In proceedings by the widow & sole dependant of the deceased workman, the county ct. judge held that there was not sufficient evidence of an accident arising out of or in the course of the man's employment; for that any slight muscular movement might have caused his death at any time, & that there was nothing fortuitous about it:—Held: on the evidence it could not be doubted that the work the deceased man was doing contributed to his death; when that was proved it established that the death was due to an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, unless the contrary was shown, & in applying as the test the question whether the death was to be expected at any time, the county ct. judge had misdirected himself.—*FALMOUTH DOCKS & ENGINEERING Co., LTD. v. His widow accordingly made a claim for compensation against the resps. upon the ground that the death was caused by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: the county ct. judge had not misdirected himself in law, & there was evidence to support his finding of fact, that the work & the disease together contributed to his death.—*PARTRIDGE JONES & JOHN PATON, LTD. v. 2322b. — — ——A brusher, employed in a colliery, was engaged in his ordinary work on night shift. He had been trying to bring down part of the roof at which he was working. He had just decided that it was too hard to bring down with the pick & that he would require to fire a shot to bring it down, when he felt a pain in his chest & a choking sensation in his throat. Thereafter, with the help of a companion, a shot was prepared & fired. He was able to carry on with his work intermittently, but felt sick & complained of pain. He went home before the shift was over & never worked since. The workman filed a request for arbn. At the hearing the Sheriff-Substitute found the workman had had sudden heart failure due to two causes: (a) the bad state of the heart & arteries, & (b) the heavy brushing work on which he had been engaged during the shift. He accordingly made an award of compensation in the workman's favour. The employer appealed. In answer to certain questions put by the judges of the First Division the arbitrator reported that there was a definite change in the condition of the workman after the night in question, that he had suffered from an attack of cardiac insufficiency which was suddenly manifested while he was engaged in strenuous physical exertion & the capacity of the heart was severely damaged, & that as a result of the cardiac breakdown the workman had been since that date & continued to be totally incapacitated for work. The First Division on the resumed consideration of the case affirmed the determination of the sheriff-substitute. The employer appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: upon the findings of the Sheriff-Substitute the case could not be distinguished from the cases of Falmouth Docks & Engineering Co. v. Treloar, No. 2317c, & Partridge Jones & John Paton, Ltd. v. James, No. 2322a. Appeal dismissed.

The hard work on which the claimant was engaged induced the breakdown of his enfeebled heart. This involved a definite change in his condition on Apr. 29 (Lord TOMLIN).—LOCHGELLY IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. WALKENSHAW (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 230, H. L.

On coming out of the cylinders the workers, before coming into the outside air, passed into a decompressing chamber, where the atmospheric pressure was gradually lowered. If this were not done, they would sustain serious injury called "Caisson Disease":—Held: appt. was entitled to proceed under sect. 1 of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1927, in respect of injury resulting from an industrial disease, the facts being such as to warrant the finding of accident within that sect.; also the failure of the decompressing chamber work. In Aug. 1925, he was out for a walk, & after walking two or three miles & while standing still his right tibia suddenly snapped, & he claimed compensation for the injury, on the ground that it was attributable to the accident suffered by him in 1919. The medical theory advanced was that, after the injury suffered from the accident in 1919, the muscles of the leg became inelastic, & if he slipped his power of recovering himself would be affected. There was no evidence that he did slip when the tibia snapped in Aug. 1925. The county ct. judge held the injury was due to the first accident in 1919, & awarded compensation:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding, & the award must be set aside.—*WERRIN v. 2342b. —[—]—A station porter lived some four-fifths of a mile from the station at which he was employed & could reach it by the public road, or, more conveniently, by climbing up on to the railway to a cinder path running along the side of the track. He used that route in the dark on a stormy windy morning in Feb., & when crossing the main line at a short distance from the station he was run down from behind by a locomotive & killed. Rule 15 of the railway co.'s regulations prohibited this route to the station, but excepted from the prohibition the crossing of the rails in cases where because of the duties of employees it was permitted. The evidence was that notwithstanding this rule the route in question had been used for a long time by every grade of employee & had never been objected to by the co. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the use of the route on the railway had been permitted by the co., & that being so, rule 15 was no defence to the claim. He accordingly found that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment & made his award for the widow. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of fact & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—GORING v. SOUTHERN RY. CO. (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 68, C. A.

2348b. — Emergency employment.]—A ganger in the service of a railway co. was, by the terms of his contract of service, liable to be called upon in case of emergency to go to the place where the emergency had arisen, notwithstanding that he might have finished his normal day's work, & when so called upon after his normal day's work he was entitled to be paid overtime from the hour he left his home in order to proceed to the place where the emergency had arisen. One night, after he had completed his day's work & after he had gone to bed, he received a message requiring him to go to a certain siding to assist in replacing a derailed truck, & in compliance with that order he rose & was proceeding to the siding when he was knocked down in the street by a motor car & sustained injuries from the effects of which he died. On a claim for compensation by his widow:—Held: as the deceased man was obliged by the terms of his contract to obey an emergency call at any hour, as he was paid from the time he left his home in obedience to the call, & as he was obliged to proceed with reasonable despatch to the place where his services were required, there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the accident arose out of & in the course of the deceased man's employment, & therefore, that his widow was entitled to compensation.—*BLEE v. attached to a bollard & was injured. The route which the workman was using when he met with his injury lay on private property, but was used by members of the general public with the leave & licence of the owners. On a claim for compensation made by him against his employers, the county ct. judge held that as the workman was compelled by reason of his work to be on private property & was leaving it in a reasonable way he was entitled under the decision of Northumbrian Shipping Co., Ltd. v. McCullum (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 284; Digest Supp., to compensation & made his award for the workman. The employers appealed:—Held: the workman when returning from work along a route used by members of the public was acting as a member of the public & was not exposed to a risk special to his employment, & the accident did not therefore arise out of & in the course of his employment. Appeal allowed.—CLARK v. STEPHENS, SUTTON, LTD. (1937), 81 Sol. Jo. 1038; 30 B. W. C. C. 340, C. A.

2349 i. Commercial traveller—Accident on way home after canvassing.—C. was employed as a travelling salesman. Under the terms of his agreement he was to devote the whole of his time to the development of the sales of his employers' products, & was to be paid a commission on all orders obtained by him for them, but was to pay his own travelling & out-of-pocket expenses. When he entered the firm's employment he purchased a motor van with money advanced to him by his employers, the money to be repaid by him to them out of his commissions. While driving this van along the street, he collided with a horse-drawn van driven by K., a workman employed by W. & Son, & K. was injured. K. was awarded compensation against W. & Son. W. & Son claimed to be indemnified by C.'s employers. C. could drive his motor van for his own pleasure or on any business that he might have other than his employers' without consulting them; if he was not selling his employers' goods or collecting their debts, he could drive his van wherever he pleased. On the day of the collision with K., C. had been endeavouring to sell some of his employers' goods, & was returning home with some of their goods in his van, but he went out of his way to call & see a relative. While so driving his van out of his direct way home the collision occurred. The Circuit Ct. judge made an award of indemnity in favour of W. & Son against C.'s employers. C.'s employers appealed to the High Ct.:—Held: there was evidence upon which the Circuit Ct. judge could hold that at the time of the collision C. was acting as the servant of the firm who employed him, in such a manner as to make the firm liable for the injury

2349b. ——[Applt. was the widow of the deceased workman, & claimed compensation as a dependant on his earnings. She alleged that the accident by which he was killed arose out of & in the course of his employment. The county ct. judge held the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The Ct. of Appeal sent the case back for rehearing. (See No. 2349a, ante). The county ct. judge on the rehearing held the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment, as the deceased at the time of the accident was doing no act in discharge of a duty owed to his employers:—Held: the county ct. judge had directed himself correctly in accordance with the authorities & there was abundant evidence on which he could come to the conclusion he did, & it was one which the Ct. of Appeal could not interfere with. Decision of the county ct. judge affirmed.—DUNNING v. BINDING (C. E.) (TRADING AS THE GLOBE CARRIER BAG CO.) (No. 2) (1932), 148 L. T. 378; 25 B. W. C. C. 655, C. A.

2349c. — Accident while leaving premises of employer.—A commercial traveller used a motor car which was his own property for the purpose of travelling for his employers who made a weekly payment towards its upkeep. The employers' premises stood between a public highway & a wharf which was not their property. On the wharf stood a garage which was leased by them. Employees were allowed to park their cars on the private wharf. There was a private passage at the back of the employers' premises by which access could be obtained to the wharf. On a very foggy night, after the workman had finished his day's work, he went from his employers' premises out on to the wharf to get his car. He was never seen alive again, but the car was observed in the fog with its lights on & the engine running & driven against a bollard on the wharf. The workman's body was later recovered from the river under the wharf. The widow claimed compensation as a dependant. The county ct. judge found that deceased workman was under no duty to park his car on the wharf, the car was not a business car & as he had finished his work for the day, he was engaged in his private affairs when he fell into the river. He inferred that the workman ran his car against the bollard & fell into the river when investigating the obstruction. He therefore held that the widow had failed to discharge the onus of proof which lay on which K. had sustained. Appeal dismissed.—KELLY v. JOHN WALLIS & SON, AUTOMATIC SCALE CO. (IRELAND), LTD. (1930), 24 B. W. C. C. Supp. 204.—IR.

her. The widow appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had misdirected himself in failing to apply the proper principles to the facts found. The accident occurred while the workman was using a permitted means of egress from his work & on a spot where the workman happened to be not as a member of the public but in virtue of his employment, the ownership or control of the spot being immaterial. The accident therefore arose in the course of the employment.—FOSTER v. EDWIN PENFOLD & Co., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 240, C. A.

2349d. Accident on way to customers.—A commercial traveller left home earlier than usual & was knocked down & killed by a motor vehicle. It subsequently transpired that he had proposed at some time to call on some customers whose office was near the spot where he was killed. On a claim by the widow, as dependant, for compensation, the county ct. judge held that there was no evidence that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The widow appealed:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could come to any other conclusion than he did. Appeal dismissed. LOUDON v. MACFARLANE (WALTER) & Co. (1935), 28 B. 2349e. Engine driver—Accident after coming off duty.—In hostel provided by employer.]—A railway co. provided a hostel in Sheffield for the use of their employees when such employees were not able to return home between the hours of employment. When such hostels were provided the employees were expected to sleep there unless leave had been obtained to sleep elsewhere. Resp., who was an engine driver, after booking off, was walking down an asphalt slope, part of the premises of the hostel, when he slipped & fell whereby he suffered injury, & he thereupon claimed compensation from appts. upon the ground that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment with appts.:—Held: on the facts the accident arose out of the employment. It also arose in the course of the employment in view of the circumstances that it was part of resp.'s employment that he should go to the hostel & take adequate rest which was essential for the proper performance of his work.—*LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 2354a. — Leaving dock side for ship.—The deceased workman signed on as boat-swain for a voyage, & joined the ship when lying in Swansea Harbour. The contract of service contemplated that he might be called on to act as night watchman with overtime payment. He was acting as such when, returning from his home to the ship, he disappeared, after calling at a public-house just outside the entrance to the dock premises, which were private property, & his body was found in the water a thousand yards from the ship:—Held: deceased, by taking on the special duty of night watchman, did not divest himself of the character of a seaman, & as he must be inferred at the time of the accident to have been on the private premises of the harbour in which the ship lay, & sustained the accident by reason of risks incidental to his employment, which he would not have encountered but for his employment, therefore the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The principle in all the cases of a seaman returning from shore leave to his ship in a public harbour is that the question to be decided must be whether the risk run was shared with all the public, or was incidental to the seaman's employment.—*NORTH-UMBRIAN SHIPPING Co., LTD. v. 2355a. Road repairer—Accident on scene of repairs.—Applt. was a workman who was employed by resps. in road repairing & tar spraying. The work consisted in sweeping & tarring the road; the last portion of his work for the day was to sweep another portion of the road above the section which had been tarred. On July 5, 1929, the foreman blew his whistle at five o'clock, & the men knocked off work. Applt. got to his work on a bicycle, which he left just off the road, & when work ceased he proceeded in the ordinary way to get his bicycle. At the end of the swept portion of the road were some horses belonging to a separate contractor & used for moving the tarring machines. As he passed the horses he was kicked by one of them, knocked off his bicycle was some two miles & a half from the nearest part of the section of line at which he would normally have reported for duty:—Held: though pltf. had a right to be at the place where the accident happened, at the time he was not then there in pursuance of his obligation to deft. & his claim must fail.—*FLOWERDAY v. & severely injured. On those facts the county ct. judge found that the accident did not arise in the course of applt.'s employment:—Held: the decision of the county ct. judge raised a question not of fact but of law, & the proper legal inference to be drawn from the facts was that the accident did not occur in the course of applt.'s employment. When he mounted his bicycle & started off to ride home he had resumed his freedom of action as a citizen on the public highway.—SPAREY v. BATH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1931), 146 L. T. 285; 48 T. L. 2367a. Accident while riding motor cycle.—A fruiterer had a business in N. & a small branch at L. One of his sons lived at L., but not over the L. premises. The son periodically travelled between L. & N. to assist his father in N. & would tell him of the requirements of the L. branch. He travelled by motor cycle except in wet weather, when he went by train. While riding his motor cycle from L. to N. the son collided with a lorry & was killed. The widow claimed compensation. There was no evidence forthcoming in the arbn. as to whether the son had called at the L. branch before leaving for N. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the widow. The employer appealed:—Held: there was no evidence that at the time of the accident the workman was engaged on his employer's business & it was not therefore proved that the workman was in the course of his employment at the time. Appeal allowed.

In the present case the facilities had been provided by the employer, & the deceased chose to travel to his work by motor cycle (LAWRENCE, L.J.).—MEDLER v. MEDLER (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 345, C. A.

2368a. No obligation to use conveyance.—Employers used female labour for the picking of potatoes on their farm. In order to induce women to come from a distance they provided a horse lorry to convey them to & from their homes, but the women were under no obligation to use the lorry. The usual course was for the women, when they had finished their work, to walk back to the employers' yard, where the lorry was waiting. On a particular day the worker, having finished her work, was standing in the yard with her fellow-employees, & the employers' foreman told them to load up on the lorry. The women sat as usual with their legs dangling over the side of the lorry. As the lorry left the yard one of the worker's legs was crushed

2368 i. Conveyance provided by farmer.—A berrypicker was engaged to work on a fruit farm eight miles distant from her home, on the understanding that wages would be paid her at a daily rate & that she would be conveyed by her employer to &

from her work. The hour of commencing work on the farm was generally 7 a.m., but was sometimes 8 a.m., & each evening the workers were informed when the employer's conveyance would call for them on the following morning. No other means of conveyance was available to the berrypicker, & she would not have accepted the employment except on the condition that her employer conveyed her to & from work. While travelling to work on a lorry belonging to her employer she was injured through the lorry being accidentally overturned:—Held: the accident to the worker had not arisen in the course of her employment.—*CRAWFORD v. between the lorry & a gate-post. The county ct. judge held that the worker was not in the yard under any express or implied term of her contract of service, that the yard was not within the ambit of her work, & that it was unnecessary for her to be there either for the performance of her duties or for the purpose of going home, & made an award in favour of the employers. The worker appealed:—Held: the case was covered by authority, & the accident arose out of & in the course of the worker's employment. 2371 I. Bicycle provided by employer—Parcel delivered after closing time—Accident next morning on way to work.—A firm of cycle dealers carried on a parcels-delivery service, & engaged youths, each of whom they provided with a bicycle & a cape for the transport & protection of parcels. Each youth was permitted to use the bicycle as a means of transport to & from his home. If a call came near closing time the messenger, having carried out his mission, would be compelled to take his bicycle home with him, there being no place at deft.'s premises where he could leave it after closing time. While pltf.'s son, one of the youths so employed, was riding the cycle & carrying the cape, to which reference has been made, from his home on his way to work after having delivered a message shortly before closing time on the previous evening, he was struck by a motor vehicle & killed. In an action by his mother for compensation in respect of his death:—Held: the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment.—*CLAUSEN v. COUCHMAN CYCLE CO., LTD., [1935] N. Z. L. sl. Lorry—No obligation to use.—A labourer, while engaged on work at a distance from his home, was conveyed over part of the distance on a motor lorry which was provided by his employers. There was no express contract between the workman & his employers for the use of this conveyance; but, before accepting the job, the workman knew that the lorry would be provided free of cost, & he would not have accepted the offer of employment if it had not been available. This free conveyance was entirely optional, but it was used by employees who resided at a distance from the work. There was no direct transport connection between the workman's home & place of work, &

travel by the ordinary route would have materially increased both the cost & the time of the journey. While being conveyed to his work, the workman fell from the lorry & was killed:—Held: as the workman was not under any contractual obligation to use the lorry, his death while he was proceeding to his work on that conveyance was not the result of an accident arising in the course of his employment within sect. 1 (1) of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925.—*BLACK v. so. Injury while attempting to obtain access to premises.—Pltf., housekeeper at an hotel, whose duty it was to prepare breakfast for guests, stayed with friends one night, & rising about 6 a.m. next morning went to the hotel. Being unable to obtain admission at the front door of the hotel, the only means of access, she went round a street corner to the side of the hotel to awaken a porter by knocking on an iron fence bounding the hotel premises. While hurrying back to the front door after attracting the porter's attention, she slipped & broke her leg as she turned to take a short cut through a neighbouring petrol station:—Held: the worker had not reached the ambit or sphere of her employment, & was not in the course of her employment when she met with the accident.—*OWEN v. If he had orders to deliver, he rode a bicycle, & on Dec. 17, 1926, he was told he might go for his tea, & was to deliver an order on the way, & take two orders coming back. He delivered the order, had his tea, & was bicycling back, but before he had called for the two orders he was knocked down by a motor lorry & injured. The county ct. judge found that at the time of the accident the boy was engaged on his own affairs in returning from tea, & that the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—*LYE v. sb. Accident while returning from giving evidence for employer.—B. & O'L. were employed at a theatre in Waterford. Their employer, the owner of the theatre, was charged with a criminal offence & was returned for trial at Dublin. B. & O'L. were necessary witnesses for the defence, & each was served with a subpoena & given a vaticum to attend the trial. They were driven to Dublin by their employer in his motor car & gave evidence at the trial, which lasted some days. All the expenses of their stay in Dublin were paid by their employer, & he also paid their wages while they were in Dublin. The employer was acquitted, & on the conclusion of the trial he told B. & O'L. to remain at the hotel in Dublin until the following day. B. & O'L. remained, & on the following day he called for them in his car which he drove himself. On the way to Waterford there was an accident in which O'L. & B. were killed. In a claim by the daughter of B. & the widow of O'L. under Workmen's Compensation Act:—Held: the journey to Dublin & the return journey to Waterford were not in the performance of any duty imposed by the contracts of service, & therefore the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment.—*BUTLER & O'LOUGHLIN v. travelling ticket collector in the employment of resp. railway co., had, in the course of his duty, to travel from Oxford, where his home was, to Swansea, where he had to stay overnight, returning thence on the following day to Oxford. Being also qualified as a guard & as such, liable to be called upon in an emergency, he was required by the railway co. to leave, & he in fact left with them, the address of his Swansea lodgings. Apart from this obligation he had an unfettered right as to how he spent his time at Swansea between signing off & signing on, & he could reach the station by any route or by any method he chose. In proceeding one morning from his lodgings to Swansea station to perform his usual duty, he fell in the street & sustained an injury in respect of which he claimed compensation:—Held: while in the street proceeding from his lodgings to the station, appct. was not performing any duty under his contract of service; therefore, the accident did not arise in the course of his employment; & consequently he was not entitled to compensation.—ALDERMAN v. He could go anywhere on the estate, but had to give special attention to the open trench & to look after the red lights at night-time. He was provided with a watchman's box & a coke brazier. During one of his watches, which was twenty-four hours in length, he took the brazier into a workman's day shelter on the estate, but 300 yards from the trench, covered the shelter completely over with a tarpaulin, took his boots off, & lay down to sleep. He was later found dead in this situation, having been suffocated by the fumes from the coke brazier. On a claim by the widow the county ct. judge held that, as the deceased was on his employer's premises in pursuance of his duty, the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. He returned to his work along the haulage way. Going in the same direction as himself, & at the same pace, was a line of empty tubs. He availed himself of this line of tubs by leaning on them as he walked, & putting his lamp into one of them. As he approached his place of work he leaned over the edge of the tub to get his lamp without noticing that the roof immediately in front was low. He was caught between the tub & the roof & injured his spine. The county ct. judge accepted the workman's story of the accident, & held that he had not added a peril to his employment. He was put in charge of five men to do the job. A tank 3 ft. 6 in. by 2 ft. was lowered to the sump filled with mud & water & raised & emptied again & again. There were two platforms on the way down the shaft & ladders to each of them were provided. It was complained that the job was not proceeding as quick as it should, & after that intimation the workman travelled up & down the shaft standing on the tank & helping the men at the top to empty it. He did that some sixteen times & then fell off & received injuries from which he died. On a claim for compensation made by those dependent on the earnings which deceased workman made, the county ct. judge held that they were entitled to compensation as the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment as what the deceased was doing at the time of the accident was done for the purposes of his job & was an act done within the sphere of his employment:—Held: there was ample evidence upon which the county ct. judge could come to that conclusion, as what deceased was doing at the time of the accident was within the sphere of his employment, as contemplated by the terms of that employment, & it was a question

2407c. Slip while stopping leak.—A workman was employed as a labourer on the work of fixing filters & pipes at open air baths. While he was taking refreshment in company with his foreman & other workmen outside the door to the filter room one of his fellow-workmen remarked that water was coming through the discharge pipe through which water was emptied from the baths. Without the authority or the knowledge of his foreman the workman climbed on top of the filters to stop up the mouth of the pipe with clay. He did not take enough clay & in going back for more he stepped on a plank which the workmen used when their work took them to the top of the filters. The plank slipped & the workman fell twelve feet & injured himself. On the workman's application for compensation the county ct. judge found that it was unnecessary to block up the pipe as not sufficient water was splashing through to do any harm, but that the workman acted as he did because he considered that the presence of the water was harmful. The county ct. judge found that the workman was doing an act reasonably incidental to his employment, that he had not added a peril to his employment, & that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment & made his award for the workman. 2417a. Workmen repairing hydraulic apparatus—Not using ladder provided—Electrocution.—Deceased workmen, whilst employed on Oct. 24, 1929, by resps. in the repair of hydraulic apparatus, met with a fatal accident. When the repair was effected it was necessary to go about 100 yards in the works to turn on a valve starting the water power to see whether the repair would resist the water pressure, & if it failed to resist the pressure some one had to turn off the valve as soon as possible. The obvious & proper route to the valve was up a ladder & along an air pipe, using the hydraulic pipe as a handrail, & for an ordinary able workman this was neither difficult nor dangerous. Deceased went to the valve by this route, turned it on, but returned another way, which involved his going along the crane-way, on which there was a danger from moving cranes & a live electric wire, & he put his hand on this wire & was electrocuted. Directly the valve was turned on the workman gave or received a signal from the workmen at the place of repair. The county ct. judge found that one of the objects of the deceased in returning by the way he did was to give or receive a signal as soon as possible, but held that the deceased workman, in adopting that route for the purpose of effecting that object, had acted in an unnecessary & unreasonable way & had by so acting stepped outside the sphere of his employment, & therefore the accident did not arise out of the employment, & consequently s. 1 (2) did not apply:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge, & being a question of fact the Ct. of Appeal could not interfere with the finding.—*SHEPHERD v. messenger to go on foot along the platform & across several sets of rails. The workman, however, borrowed a fellow-servant's bicycle which had been left in the station office. He proceeded to ride along the platform, but failed to keep a straight course & fell from the platform to the rails, sustaining injuries from which he died:—Held: while the accident had happened in the course of the deceased's employment, he had taken a risk, in using the bicycle, which was not reasonably incidental to his employment, but was an added peril to which by his own

conduct he had exposed himself; & accordingly, the accident did not arise out of the employment.—ROONEY v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. CO., [1931] S. C. 34; 23 B. W. O. C. 606.—SCOT.

air. One was an exhaust pipe with a strong draught of air into the shop. Some days before the accident the workman, whilst employed in the shop, mislaid his hammer, & being told that sometimes the hammers were put in the mouth of a pipe he put his hand in one of the inhaust pipes & drew out his hammer, the end of the hammer being visible. He again mislaid the hammer, & next day, Sept. 19, 1928, put his hand again in the same pipe, but not finding it there, tried the next pipe which was the exhaust pipe which had a fan close to the mouth, & his fingers were cut off. He claimed compensation under the Act. It would have been possible without danger to have put his hand in any of the pipes except the exhaust one. The county ct. judge held that the act of the man in searching in the mouth of the pipe was an added peril to his employment, & a peril voluntary superinduced by him on what arose out of the employment; the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment, & further, the act being entirely unnecessary because the hammer could have been seen if it had been placed in the exhaust with the fan so near the mouth of the pipe, & absolutely unreasonable because the outward draught was very strong & quite sufficient to show that there must have been a rapidly revolving fan close to the outlet, the act was not within the sphere of the employment at all:—Held: the question whether this act of the workman was one within the scope of his employment was one of fact involving a question of degree, & therefore a question to be decided by the county ct. judge, & his award could not be interfered with.—*DYSON v. 2421a. — Workman drying leggings.—A workman was employed in certain washing work which was done in sack leggings as it necessitated standing in water. The leggings had to be dried at the end of each day & for this purpose the workman was allowed to make use of the out-draught from a turbine in an adjoining motor-room. On taking his leggings to the motor-room to dry the workman found that another man had already put leggings round the iron braces of the turbine, whereupon the workman put his own leggings inside the casing behind part of the turbine & close to the revolving fan, having to use force to push them in against the draught. The fan caught the leggings & drew his right hand in with them. As a result he lost his hand. The county ct. judge found that it was in the course of his employment to dry his leggings but that by his act he had added a peril to his employment which no workman without acting in extreme rashness would have undertaken, & held that the accident therefore did not arise out of the employment. The workman appealed:—Held: it was a question of degree & therefore of fact for the county ct. judge, there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—*HARRIS v. 2425a. Workman walking along line—Short cut.—An electrician was employed in the erection of an overhead cable to convey electrical current across country. The work had reached a stage where the cable was being carried over a single line of railway. The workman entered his employment when he met his foreman in the morning, but he had to walk a mile & a half after meeting the foreman, to the spot where he had to work. The proper route to this spot was along a road, then along a footpath, & then across a field, but a considerable distance could be saved by walking part of the way along the railway line. The workman chose to trespass along the line, but, as a gale was blowing, he walked with his head down against the wind. He thus failed to notice the approach of a train which struck & killed him. The widow claimed compensation. The county ct. judge made his award for the widow on the ground that the workman was merely acting negligently in the course of his employment. The employers appealed:—Held: the workman was not employed to trespass on the railway, & the accident arose out of the added peril to which he had thereby exposed himself & not out of the employment. 2430a. — Taking short cut through danger area.—The deceased workman was a general labourer employed by resps. as a stand-by man around a mechanical navy to assist the engine-driver. During a short interval when he was not required at the navy, he went away to a neighbouring kiln to warm his hands or to warm himself, which he was entitled to do. He returned to his proper place for his work by taking a "short cut" which brought him under the bucket of the navy. This he had been warned by his employers not to do. As he was proceeding back to work by this "short cut," the engine-driver's foot slipped off the controls, with the result that the bucket fell on the workman's head & killed him:—Held: the workman was performing the work which he was employed to do in a way in which he was warned not to do it, but he was, nevertheless, doing something for the purposes of his employment. The case therefore came within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), & the widow was entitled to compensation.—BROTHERTON v. JACKSON (J. & A.) (1928), 98 L. J. K. B. 76; 140 L. 2437a. Attempt to board lorry in motion.]—Deceased workman at the time of the accident was twenty-five years old, & an active man. He was employed by resp. as driver of a motor steam lorry of about 7 tons burden, & a steersman was also employed on the lorry. On Apr. 12, 1929, whilst driving, he got down & went across a field, in which he had seen his father, to get some tobacco from him. After he had got the tobacco he relieved nature against the hedge, & joined the road some 300 yards in front of the lorry. He beckoned to the steersman, who then drove on at three miles an hour, & whilst it was moving the deceased attempted to get on, but fell & was run over by the hind wheel & killed. The steersman did not see what happened, but felt a bump when the lorry went over the deceased. There was a step about 17 inches from the ground, & then an iron platform 12 inches by 13 inches next to the small door leading into the cab where the driver sat. The door opened outwards on to the iron platform. There was no handrail or handle on the outside of the lorry to give any help to any one entering the cab. There was evidence that men got on to these lorries every day when going at three miles an hour. The question arose whether the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The county ct. judge held that it was a question of degree, & taking into consideration the speed of the steam lorry, its weight, its construction, & its accessibility whilst moving at three miles an hour, the deceased, in attempting to enter it & trying to get through the open door or clambering over it, added a hazard & needless peril to his employment, & was thereby doing something different in kind from what he was employed to do, & voluntarily exposing himself to a risk which was not reasonably incident to his employment; & therefore the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment:—Held: the county ct. judge had not misdirected himself in law & there was some evidence on which he could come to the conclusion he did, therefore his award could not be interfered with.—TAYLOR v. LOCK (No. 2) (1930), 144 L. T. 428; 23 B. W. C. C. 444, C. A.

2438a. — Delivery of message.]—The workman was employed as a time-keeper & costings

clerk by a firm of contractors who were engaged in certain works in connection with an estate. One evening, after work had ceased for the day, the surveyor employed by the estate owners became desirous of conveying certain instructions to the foreman before work was resumed the next morning. That evening he saw the workman at an hotel & told him of his wish that the message should reach the foreman before work was resumed the next morning. The workman said that he would deliver the message to the foreman in the morning. In fact he went forthwith to the site of the works in order to deliver the message to the night watchman & in so doing fell into a trench on account of the darkness & was seriously & permanently disabled. In his evidence in chief the workman said that the surveyor wanted the message delivered that same evening. In cross-examination, the workman admitted that the surveyor had not said in so many words that he wanted the message delivered that evening. The county ct. judge made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: there was no evidence that the surveyor asked the workman to imperil himself by going in the dark to deliver the message to the night watchman & the accident accordingly did not rise out of & in the course of the employment. Appeal dismissed.—ROSSITER v. CONSTABLE HART & Co., LTD. (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 32, C. A.

2439a. Farm hand adjusting mower.]—A workman employed as a harvest hand on a farm was engaged in driving a two-horse mower with a cutting-blade for cutting the corn, & had occasion to replace a chain which had become detached from the back-band of one of the horses. He did not put the cutting-blade out of gear, but stood up from his seat on the machine & attempted to walk out on the pole between the horses in order to reach the detached chain. There was no express prohibition against walking on the pole, but the customary & proper method of replacing a chain was to stop the mower, put the cutting-blade out of gear, fasten the reins, dismount from the machine & walk to the horses' heads. The weight of the workman on the pole caused the horses to start, setting the cutting-blade in motion. He fell on to the blade & was seriously & permanently injured. In a claim for compensation the arbitrator found that the injury sustained was not due to an accident arising out of the employment. On appeal by the workman it was held by the Second Division of the Ct. of Session that there was evidence on which the arbitrator could make that finding. The workman again appealed:—Held: the accident arose from an added peril to which the workman had voluntarily exposed himself & consequently did not arise out of his employment.—STEPHEN v. COOPER, [1929] A. C. 570; 98 L. J. P. C. 97; 141 L. T. 300; 45 T. L. R. 413; 73 Sol. Jo. 268; 22 B. W. C. C. 339, H. L.

2439b. Riding bicycle along railway platform carrying heavy weight.—A workman in the course of his employment had to take a mud-door from the ship on the repair of which he was engaged to get it repaired. The mud-door was a piece of metal about 9 in. by 4 in. & weighing 7 lb. to 8 lb. He walked with it down the pier to the shore-end where the repairing shop was, & when it was mended got on to a bicycle & rode along a platform on the east side of the pier reserved for passengers. A railway ran down the centre of the pier & on each side was a raised platform about 7 ft. wide, the one on the eastern side for passengers the other for traffic. Public notices were put up at the water end of the pier that the eastern platform was for pedestrians only, & at the other end that the western platform was for traffic only. The man fell in front of an approaching train & was killed. His widow claimed compensation as being dependent on the earnings of the deceased workman, but the county ct. judge held that she was not entitled, as though the accident arose in the course of the employment it did not arise also out of the employment, as the getting on the bicycle was an act which it was no part of his employment to hazard or do, & therefore the accident, not being within sect. 1 (1) of the Act, it was immaterial that in fact the act was done for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, since before sect. 1 (2) was applicable, the workman must show that the act arose out of the employment within sect. 1 (1):—Held: the riding of the bicycle along the pier was something different in kind from anything the man was required or expected to do in his employment, & such an act was outside of the sphere of the employment, consequently the accident did not arise out of the employment, & sect. 1 (2) of the Act of 1925 had no operation.—QUICKFALL v. LONDON & NORTH-EASTERN RY. CO. (1929), 142 L. T. 315; 22 B. W. C. C. 653, C. A.

2439c. Postman using motor cycle—Permission to use bicycle—Accident at level crossing.—An auxiliary postman was employed to deliver letters in relief of his father who was sub-postmaster of a country post office. Ten years earlier the father had obtained permission to use a bicycle on the round. In the course of this round it was necessary to go across a level crossing. The son went on the round on a motor cycle & crossed the level crossing in front of an approaching train riding his motor cycle with the engine in gear. As he was crossing the engine of the train caught the motor cycle. He was thrown off & died of his injuries. His widow claimed compensation. At the arb. it was conceded on behalf of the employer that the permission granted to the father to use a bicycle extended to the son, but it was also argued on the employer's behalf that the deceased workman by using a motor cycle instead of a pedal cycle had added a peril to his employment & was doing something different in kind from what he was employed to do. The county ct. judge found that the permission to use a bicycle did not cover the use of a motor cycle & found that the accident did not arise out of the employment. The widow appealed:—Held: the deceased workman by riding a motor cycle as he did at the level crossing was doing an act outside the scope of his employment.

Appeal dismissed.—RACE v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL (1932), 146 L. T. 489; 25 B. W. C. C. 24, C. A.

2439d. Steward getting drunk—Fall over side of ship.—A steward employed on board ship, was seen to be drunk at 5 p.m. At 7 p.m. he was still so drunk as to be incapable of performing his duties. At about that time he went to the port side & put his two hands on the bulwark, & appeared to a witness to be about to vomit. He then pitched overboard & was drowned. The sea was perfectly calm. On a claim for compensation by his widow, the county ct. judge found that deceased met his death when at the side of the vessel where he would not have been but for the fact that he was drunk & desired to vomit & therefore that the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment. The widow appealed:—Held: deceased workman by his own act in getting drunk on board ship had added a peril to his employment & the accident did not therefore arise out of or in the course of that employment. Appeal dismissed.—BOANAS v. BARR-WHIN S.S. OWNERS (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 40, C. A.

2439e. Cleaning steam-roller in motion.—An engine-driver's mate was cleaning the engine of his employer's steam-roller when his hand became caught in the moving machinery & in consequence he was seriously & permanently disabled. The driver had left the steam-roller stationary & had stopped the engine, leaving the workman to clean it. It was the workman's duty to clean the engine only when it was stationary. In the engine-driver's absence, the workman set the engine in motion before proceeding to clean it. The county ct. judge found that it was no part of the workman's employment to start the engine or to clean it while it was in motion, & that consequently the acts occasioning the injury were altogether outside the sphere of his employment; therefore although these acts were done for the purposes of & in connection with the employer's business, the accident never arose out of & in the course of the employment. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings of fact & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—TUCKNOTT v. EAST SUSSEX COUNTY COUNCIL (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 42, C. A.

The driver of an engine belonging to his employers had difficulty in starting the engine, & the workman went to assist him. The engine backfired, with the result that the workman's wrist was broken. The county ct. judge found that, when the workman met with the accident, he was doing an act outside his employment, but one which was for his master's benefit. As, however, there was no emergency, the workman was not entitled to recover. The workman appealed:—Held: the act was one which was reasonable for a fellow-workman to do in the circumstances for the purpose of enabling his master's work to proceed, & the accident arose out of & in the course of the man's employment.—*DERMODDY v. He acknowledged that the only time a porter had a right to be on the platform of a train was for the purpose of removing luggage. There was also a regulation forbidding any porter to do what he was doing at the time of the accident. The county ct. judge held the accident did not arise out of the employment, & as the act that caused it was not done for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, the accident was not to be deemed to have arisen out of the employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the award, & no misdirection.—*PAINTER v. The shop was left open during his tea hour if he liked. While crossing the road to get the milk, he was knocked down by a motor cyclist, & was killed. Deceased paid for his own milk for his tea, & if he chose to might have got his tea out:—Held: the injury having occurred at the time when deceased had left the place of & the course of his employment to get the milk for his tea at his own cost for his own purposes, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment, as he was not within the test laid down in *Parker v. & its decision was affirmed by the Appeal Div. of the Supreme Ct. of New Brunswick:—Held: "Mine rescue work" included under the term "Mining" in the Act, should not be construed as applying only to the occurrence of a peril which places in jeopardy the lives of miners in a mine which is in actual operation. There is no warrant for limiting the meaning of the words so as to exclude rescue in a mine shaft in which actual operations have ceased or been suspended, if circumstances arise to create a peril there; or so as to apply only to the rescue of miners.—*BETTS & GALLANT v. sq. Farm labourer taking gun to shoot crows.]—A man, who was employed by a farmer to do general work on the farm, was working in a potato field, grubbing potatoes. He was using, with the assistance of another man, a grubber, which was a machine drawn by two horses. He had taken his employer's gun from a storeroom in a house on the farm without his employer's permission, & he fired at a crow which flew down. He then placed the gun on the grubber, the gun shortly afterwards accidentally went off, & he received injuries from which he died. Evidence was given that a number of crows were in the field earlier in the day & that crows would injure the potatoes. The employer had a licence for the gun, enabling him to shoot over his own land. He did not use the gun himself & he had no ammunition. He never gave the workman permission to use the gun. The workman had no licence:—Held: the act of the workman in carrying a loaded gun was entirely different in kind from the class of acts which he was employed to do; the risk occasioned by so doing was not a risk incidental to his employment; & the workman was not acting in a manner which was reasonably within the contemplation of the parties when the contract of service was made, & accordingly that the accident did not arise out of the employment.—*LOUGHRAY v. b. For "accident arose" read "accident did not arise."

Several other youths, employed also by resps., shut the oven door. Applt. called to be let out & then put his eye to the keyhole to see what they were doing outside, & lime was thrown, which got in his eye, the sight of which was lost. On a claim by applt. for compensation for an accident which he alleged arose out of & in the course of his employment, the county ct. judge, acting as an arbitrator under the Act, found that, though applt. himself was injured whilst following his proper occupation, the risk he ran from larking by other boys engaged in the same employment was not a special risk & therefore not one incidental to his employment by resps., but that the larking of boys was a risk common to the public at large, & it followed that therefore the accident did not arise out of his employment. It was alleged on behalf of applt. that larking by the employees had occurred on many other occasions before the accident in question here, but that the county ct. judge did not take that fact into consideration:—Held: the question whether applt. in the circumstances of his employment did run some special risk was a question of fact to be decided by the county ct. judge, & he having decided in this case that there was no such risk, therefore the accident was not one which arose out of the employment.—CALTON v. SAMUEL FOX & Co., LTD. (1938), 158 L. T. 402; 31 B. W. C. C. 43, C. A.

2471a. —.]—A workman in charge of a cotton-machine saw that it was not working properly. The machine had a locking device which prevented the guard being removed while the machine was in motion, but on that day the device was out of order. Although acting in contravention of an order, implied or otherwise, from his employer not to attend to any defect while the machines were in motion, the workman removed the guard to adjust a defect in the machine. He slipped & caught his left hand in the moving machinery, sustaining a serious injury. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge found that although the workman had acted in contravention of his employer's orders, the act was done for the purposes of his employer's business. He also found that the workman had done something so dangerous as to prevent him obtaining the benefit of the provisions of sect. 1 (2). He accordingly made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had not followed the principles laid down in Thomas v. Ocean Coal Co., Ltd., No. 2511a. Having found that the workman was doing something for the purposes of his employer's business which would have been within his employment except for the prohibition, he ought to have applied the provisions of sect. 1 (2), & held that the accident was one deemed to have arisen out of the employment. In such circumstances the fact that the act done is a dangerous one does not prevent the application of this sub-sect. Appeal allowed.—*MATTHEWS v. VICTORIA SPINNING Co. 2475a. Consumption of intoxicating liquor on duty.]—Resp. railway co. had a rule that "employees must not consume intoxicating liquor while on duty." This rule was well known to the co.'s employees, including the deceased man, a carter, whose duty it was to drive a pair-horse van. On the day of the accident giving rise to the claim for compensation, while he was taking a load from one depot to another he stopped his van outside a public-house, descended from the box seat, & having put a chain on the near side wheel & removed a trace he went some distance up a side street to a public-house for the purpose of getting a glass of beer & also for the purpose of using the lavatory; but the county ct. judge found as a fact that the man's dominant purpose was to drink the beer. On his return to the van he removed the chain, replaced the trace, took the reins in his hands, & was in the act of mounting to his seat when, probably owing to the horses starting to move, he slipped & fell under the wheel & sustained injuries which caused his death. On a claim for compensation by his widow:—Held: (1) the accident did not arise in the course of the deceased man's employment, seeing that it happened before he had completed the series of acts—unchaining the wheel, refastening the trace, taking possession of the reins—which, owing to his breach of duty, had to be performed before he could regain effective control of the horses for the purpose of re-starting them; (2) the accident could not be deemed to have arisen out of & in the course of the deceased man's employment within sect. 1 (2) of the Act, inasmuch as the act he was doing in contravention of a regulation applicable to his employment was attempting to regain his seat on the van as one part of a composite act of consuming intoxicating liquor while on duty, which act, being expressly forbidden by the terms of the employment, could not be said to be an act

2475b. Act done for benefit of employer.]—A labourer was occasionally given the task of operating an overhead crane worked by electric power. The cab from which the crane was operated was normally reached by a ladder placed at the crane's usual stopping place. If the crane stopped away from its ladder the proper method of access for the crane driver was to mount some other ladder into another crane & ride in the other crane until the two were close together, when the crane driver could climb into his own crane. During great pressure of work the workman in order to avoid the lengthy method prescribed of reaching his own crane climbed up a stanchion close to his crane & was electrocuted by live wires & immediately killed. Evidence was given to the effect that the deceased man was an eager & good workman & it was found as a fact by the county ct. judge that it was not an act done out of bravado or laziness but was done for the purposes of & in connection with his employer's trade or business, although he had been expressly warned of the danger of not going up to his crane by the prescribed method. The county ct. judge held that on those facts the accident must be deemed to have arisen out of & in the course of the employment within the meaning of sect. 1 (2) & made his award for the widow. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—PARMLEY v. ENFIELD ROLLING MILLS, LTD. (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 187, C. A.

2479a. ———.]—A young girl was injured while cleaning a machine for pulping cheese. She was employed to dust bottles & sweep the floors & not to do any work in connection with the machine, & permission to help on the machine had been refused:—Held: as the girl was injured when doing something entirely different in kind from what she was employed to do, the accident did not arise out of or in the course of her employment, & Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 7, did not apply to such a case.—DENNISON v. KEILLER, LTD. (1926), 19 B. W. C. C. 409, C. A.

2486a. Lorry boy cranking up engine.]—An infant was employed as a lorry boy, & his duties were to keep the lorry clean & obey the orders of the driver, whom he accompanied on his round. Books of instructions were issued to the storekeeper in which lorry boys were expressly prohibited from cranking up the engine of a lorry under any circumstances whatever, but the workman had no knowledge of this prohibition. The workman was under the mistaken impression that the driver of his lorry ordered him to crank up the engine & he attempted to do so. As a result he received injuries to his arm. He claimed compensation for the accident. The county ct. judge held that the workman had to obey the orders of his driver, & his lack of knowledge of the prohibition did not limit the scope of his employment. He therefore made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: the appeal must be allowed.—CARTWRIGHT v. SHELL-MEX & B.P., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 650, C. A.

2488a. Riding on engine.]—The duty of C., a workman in the employ of the S. Railway, required him to go from point A. to point B. on their premises. Instead of going by a public road he proceeded to walk along the permanent way, a shorter route, in disregard of an emphatic prohibition. It was a common practice, acquiesced in by the railway's responsible officers, though forbidden by their rules, for workmen passing between A. & B. to travel on an engine if one happened to be running at a convenient time. When C. had walked about three-quarters of the distance along the line an engine going in the same direction passed him at a low speed, & to save himself the trouble of completing the journey on foot, he attempted to mount the engine in motion, with the result that he was seriously & permanently injured. The county ct. judge found that, although the prohibition was a very real one, C. was entitled to compensation, as he was acting "for the purposes of & in connection with" the railway's business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2):—

the works, to the top platform of the crane, in order to inspect the mechanism, as the crane had failed to act. Such inspection was part of his duty. The cabin was connected by an inside safety ladder with the top platform, around which, for the purposes of safety, was a handrail. The crane-man's duties required him to return, on completion of his inspection, to his cabin. He attempted to descend from the platform by climbing over the handrail, & clambering down the outside structure, & in doing so he fell to the floor of the works, & was fatally injured:—Held: the arbitrator was entitled to hold that the accident did not arise out of the employment, as the workman was doing a prohibited act.—M'CORMACK v. STEWARTS & LLOYDS, [1930] S. C. 1038; 23 B. W. C. C. 585.—SCOT.

ad. Working near live wires.]—Appets. claimed compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, as dependants of a deceased workman employed by resps. Deceased was employed by resps. in connection with their work in carrying out an electrical installation in a number of houses. On the day of his death, his work included fixing shackles & insulators to a pole or standard for the purpose of the main wires being connected to the house. Without a specific order or direction to do so at that time, he placed a ladder against the pole & ascended it, carrying shackles & insulators. He apparently lost his balance at the top of the ladder, clutched the main wires, & was electrocuted. The evidence for resps. was that deceased had been instructed that when he had finished his prior work, he was to report to the engineer or to the foreman that he wanted the line switched out & that he was ready to ascend the pole; & that no one was to ascend the pole without a note in writing from the operator or engineer. There was also evidence, corroborated by one of appets.' witnesses, that a few days previously deceased had started to ascend a pole; that the foreman had warned him that the line was "live" & that he should not attempt to go up & had bidden him never to do it again. The foreman also gave evidence of the existence of a book of safety rules (including one forbidding any man to work on live contacts) which he said he had, some time before, in another town, read out to a number of workmen, including deceased:—Held: it was outside the scope & sphere of the employment of the deceased to ascend the pole unless & until he had applied to have the electric current cut off & had received a note in writing that this had been done; & accordingly, the application must be refused.—HUTCHINSON v. IRISH ELECTRICAL CONSTRUCTION CO. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. Suppl. 139.—IR.

Held: the above sub-sect. did not extend compensation to workmen who were not in their employment at all, & as C. in going into a definitely prohibited area, had gone outside his sphere of employment, he could not recover.—CLARKE v. 2492a. —[—]—Some miners had been conveyed from their work at the face to the shaft in a train of tubs provided by the employers. Some conveyance was necessary in order to enable the men to leave the pit within the limit of seven hours permitted for each shift. Subsequently the employers provided a "spake," i.e., a train of special vehicles containing seats. On the occasion of the accident the driver in charge of the spake, for some purpose of his own, did what he had sometimes done before, namely, instead of using the spake used a train of tubs for conveying the miners, who knew that riding on tubs was prohibited, but did not complain. The train of tubs broke & overturned, & two of the miners were killed, & one was slightly injured:—Held: the prohibition was of the class that dealt with conduct within the sphere of the employment, & Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), applied. It was necessary for the employers that the men should leave within a specified time, & the act was done for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & compensation should be awarded to the dependants of the two miners who were killed, but not to the slightly injured miner, who was, for that reason, not covered by sect. 1 (2).—EDWARDS v. 2494a. —[—]—A shunter was employed to accompany a short train & to get down to open gates, through which the train had to pass, & also to do the necessary shunting. He should have ridden in the front waggon, but used to ride by means of his coupling stick on the buffer so as to enable him to get off & on more easily. Whilst so engaged the train went over a stone & jolted him off, & the injury he received resulted in the loss of a leg. Riding on a waggon by means of a coupling pole was prohibited:—Held: the prohibition was not one defining the sphere of the man's employment, though the breach of it, apart from Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), would have prevented the accident arising out of the employment. There was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the act done was for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & the accident, by sect. 1 (2), was to be deemed to arise out of the employment.—JAMES v. 2499a. — — — Order by unauthorised contractor.—Resps., coal masters, employed a contractor to win coal in a pit they were working, & the contractor employed applt. as a mine worker for that purpose. It having become necessary to fire certain shots in this pit, the shot-firing was entrusted by the resps. to a duly appointed fireman, who alone was authorised to fire the shots. The fireman, in breach of Explosives in Coal Mines Order of Sept. 1, 1913, allowed the contractor to couple up the cable employed in the process of shot-firing to the shot, the fireman then connecting the other end of the cable to the firing apparatus & firing the shot. After six shots had been fired in this way, the contractor, without informing the fireman, instructed applt. to couple up the cable to the seventh shot, & while applt. was in the act of coupling up the cable the charge exploded & seriously & permanently injured him. Upon an application by applt. for compensation from resps., the arbitrator found in law that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment & made an award in favour of the applt. :—Held: the accident to applt. did not arise out of or in the course of his employment, but arose out of & in the course of the prohibited act, & 1925 Act, sect. 6 (1), did not apply, as applt. was not employed on any work which the contractor had undertaken with the principal to execute.—PALEOKAS (OR POLLOCK) v. 2506a. — — — — ——[S., a stoneman, was employed by resps. driving a drift through rock by shotfiring & was found dead within three yards of the working face, his body being very badly damaged & his left arm practically blown off, he being a left-handed man. The drill & ratchet were found burnt, broken, & twisted a few yards from the working face, & the standard some way from the face & undamaged. The drill & ratchet together with the standard were used for drilling holes to put the shots in, but if a shot misfired & the stemming was drilled out the standard was not used. S. was a licensed shot firer, & his duty would be to deal with the case of a misfire, but the use of a hole in which a shot had misfired was prohibited, as also the drilling out of it the stemming in order to put in another charge, it being directed that a fresh hole must be bored not less than a foot from the old hole. There was no evidence that there had been any attempt to drill a fresh hole. The county ct. judge held the man was killed whilst doing a prohibited act, but, as his motive was to save himself the trouble of drilling a fresh hole, he was not at the time of the accident doing an act for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), & his dependant was not entitled to recover compensation:—Held: the personal motive of the man in doing the prohibited act was not a criterion as to whether he was doing it for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & as the man was engaged at the working face within the sphere of his employment he must be deemed to have acted for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & though doing a prohibited act, he was brought back within sect. 1 (1), & compensation was payable as for an accident arising out of & in the course of the employment.—STOKOE v. 2511a. —.]—Applt.'s husband, who was employed as a hitcher at resps.' colliery, had the duty (inter alia) of controlling full trams & sending them up to the surface. He performed his duties on both sides of the pit bottom & could pass from one side to the other by a way round the shaft or by crossing the shaft bottom, but by a statutory regulation, "No person shall attempt to go on or across the uncovered space of the shaft bottom, except for the purpose of working in the shaft bottom, & no person shall be allowed to work in such space unless the cages are stopped." He crossed the shaft bottom when he was in charge of it as a hitcher, & a descending cage crushed & killed him. The county ct. judge found that the man's act was for the purposes of the employers' business:—Held: the accident arose out of the man's employment, & it was also in the course of his employment apart from the statutory prohibition, & as the judge had found the act to have been done for the purposes of the employers' business, the accident was, notwithstanding the prohibition, to be deemed to have arisen in the course of the man's employment, & therefore applt. was entitled to compensation.—*THOMAS v. 2512a. —.]—By the Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 43 (11), an official of a mine is permitted to travel on foot on a haulage road while the haulage is in motion, but by sect. 43 (12) of that Act is not permitted in the circumstances of this case to ride on the tubs. An overman, whose duties took him to all parts of the mine, was at some distance from the bottom of the shaft at the time when it was his duty to hand over his duties to another. He got into a moving tub for the purpose of riding to the person to whom he had to hand over his duties, & whilst so riding received injuries which caused his death. On a claim by his widow the county ct. judge found that the workman's act in riding on the tub was done for the purposes of & in connection with his employers' business, but it was an act which was not within the scope of his employment. He therefore made an award in favour of the employers. A shifter, in contravention of Regulation 25 (a), made under Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), got into an open train, which was being hauled along the way by a pony, without the permission of the manager. In consequence he received injuries which caused his death. On a claim by his widow, the county ct. judge made a similar award. Both appcts. appealed:—Held: the question of whether the workman was acting within the scope of his employment at the time of the accident was one of fact, & there was evidence to support the finding that he was not. This being so, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment, notwithstanding that the act of the workman was one done for the purposes of & in connection with his employers' business. The judge's decision was right & there was no misdirection.—DAVISON v. HOLMSIDE & SOUTH MOOR COLLIERIES, LTD., NAPPER v. LAMBTON, HETTON & JOICEY COLLIERIES, LTD. (1929), 140 L. T. 511; 45 T. L. 2512b. —.]—By Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 43 (2), no miner may ride on sets or trains of tubs where the haulage is worked by gravity or mechanical power. A workman, when signing on for work at a colliery where he was employed as a salvage man, was supplied with a summarised copy of this provision. Men-riding trolleys were provided for carrying the men up the dips at the end of their shift. The workman, with two other salvage men, was ordered in the middle of a shift to move twenty-six pipes from the bottom to the top of a dip, a distance of about seventy yards. Half the pipes were loaded & hauled up on a timber-trolley. The workman, instead of walking down to assist in loading the remainder, got into an empty tub attached to the descending timber-trolley. In the descent the tub became derailed by an accident in the haulage engine-house & the workman was killed. His widow claimed compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman rode in the tub for the purposes of & in connection with his employer's business in that he did it to save time, & held that he was still within the scope of his employment, although acting in contravention of the statutory prohibition, inasmuch as the prohibition was only concerned with the mode of carrying out his work. An award having been made in favour of the dependant, the employers appealed:—Held: the question was one of degree & therefore one of fact for the county ct. judge. In this case there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—HANNABY v. LLAY MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD., [1931] 1 K. B. 602; 100 L. J. K. B. 353; 144 L. T. 490; 23 B. W. C. C. 403, C. A.

2512c. Riding on journey of trams.—A miner & his son, working on the same shift, had to return to the pit shaft by the main drift along which journeys of trams were being hauled. While they were returning, the cable of a journey of trams broke & ran back some twenty yards. The son was then found to be pinned underneath the corner of an overturned tram & the father was found lying across another derailed tram, holding the signal rope & seriously injured. The boy died immediately & the father died two days later. The widow claimed compensation on behalf of herself & her surviving children. The county ct. judge found that the workman had been riding on the journey of trams contrary to the prohibition contained in Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 43 (2), & consequently was not acting in the course of his employment at the time of the accident. He therefore made an award in favour of the employers. The dependants appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—EDWARDS v. OCEAN COAL CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. 2515a. Workman entering prohibited place by mistake.]—A series of cubicles for electrical works were in course of being fitted up, some of which had been completed & contained live electrical machinery, & were locked. There was an express order to the workmen not to enter the completed cubicles. The cubicles being worked upon were quite close to those finished, being in the same series. The workman, a very competent man at his job, was very short-sighted, & was found electrocuted in one of the completed cubicles, he having unlocked the others. The county ct. judge drew the inference that the workman had entered a completed cubicle by mistake, & was there for the purposes of his employers' trade or business, & that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support this inference of fact, & although the workman was acting contrary to a prohibition, the accident must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment.—*CARTER v. sl. Recapture of elephant—Workman forbidden to shackle or ride elephants.]—A workman was employed by appts. as a coolie whose duty it was to assist & attend upon the driver of an elephant belonging to appts. On one occasion the elephant, which was of uncertain temper, was shackled & let loose to graze in the jungle. The driver being ill the workman & two other coolies were sent out to find him. They were expressly ordered not to attempt to catch the animal, much less to unshackle & ride him. They found the elephant but the workman approached him, unshackled & rode upon him.

A few moments later the elephant threw him down, & killed him with his tusks. Resp. as a dependant claimed compensation:—Held: not entitled, as the workman met his death by an accident caused through doing an act which he was not employed to do.—*BOMBAY BURMA TRADING CORPN., LTD. v. 2535a. —.]—A cotton-machine was fitted with a locking device which prevented the bars of the machine being cleaned or adjusted while it was in motion. A workman, while operating the machine, noticed that it was defective, & finding that the locking device was broken, he attempted to clean or adjust the bars when the machine was running, contrary to the orders of his employers. In so doing he slipped & sustained serious & permanent injuries through his left hand coming into contact with the revolving knives. He claimed compensation on the ground that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment, or should be deemed to have so arisen by virtue of sect. 1 (2) of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925:—Held: (1) as the prohibited act of cleaning the bars while the machine was in motion resulted in serious & permanent disablement of the workman, & was done by him for the purposes of & in connection with his employers' trade or business, the accident must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment, & the employers were therefore liable to pay compensation; (2) the defence of added peril, based on the allegation that the contravention of the employers' regulation by the workman added a peril to his employment, could no longer, since the decision in Thomas v. Ocean Coal Co., Ltd., No. 2511a, deprive the workman of compensation.—VICTORIA SPINNING CO. (ROCHDALE), LTD. v. MATTHEWS, [1936] 2 All E. R. 1359; 105 L. J. K. B. 521; 155 L. T. 363; 52 T. L. 2544a. Operating machine without guard.]—An infant workman was in charge of a sausage machine which was perfectly safe to use when fitted with a guard, but unsafe without it. He admitted that he had been repeatedly told not to operate the machine without the guard, but nevertheless did so & in consequence suffered an accident which resulted in the loss of all the fingers of his right hand. The county ct. judge found that the workman was employed to operate the machine with a guard which would have prevented any possibility of injury & was never employed to operate the machine without the guard. He therefore held that the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment, but was due to an "added peril." The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no mis-

about its condition, whereupon the employer forbade it to be used, & directed another ladder to be brought from his premises. Notwithstanding this, the painter again used the unsafe ladder, when it broke & he fell, with the result that he suffered serious & permanent disablement:—Held: the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment, in respect that neither the workman's negligence, nor, in view of his serious & permanent disablement, his contravention of the employer's orders, rendered the accident outwith the scope of the Act. 2552a. Drowned when using boat not provided by employer.]—Five sailors got leave to go on shore. The bo'sun said that they were not bound to be back in the ship until 6.15 a.m. A launch had been provided to take the sailors on leave to the shore & back again, & the captain told the men that the last journey to the ship by the launch would be made at 8 p.m., & that if they came back later than that, they would have to find some other means of returning to the ship. The men desired to enjoy their leave till later than 8 p.m., & tried to arrange with the man who worked the launch to come for them at 10 p.m., offering to pay him 2s. each, but the launch never came for them at 10 p.m., so they got into the first boat handy, a dinghy, & borrowed a scull with which they propelled the dinghy from the stern. The dinghy, though the men were unaware of it, was rotten & sank, the result being that three of the five men were drowned:—Held: there was no contractual obligation on the deceased men to return to their ship by the boat they used, which was not provided by the employers, & as no such duty was on the men to use that boat, the accident by which they lost their lives was not in the course of performing some duty arising out of their contract of service, or, in other words, in the course of their employment.—ROBERTSON v. 2552b. Standing up in boat to take hold of gangway—Boat sinking.]—M. & W. were members of the crew of a ship lying in a river about twenty-five feet from the wharf. The ship provided no boat for the purpose of going to or from the shore. A game of football was being played on shore, at which the captain & some of the officers were present & in which M. took part. On returning to the wharf after the game M. hailed W., who got into a canoe at the foot of the gangway & fetched M. When M. got up to take hold of the gangway, the canoe filled, & both men were drowned. The county ct. judge held the accident was occasioned by a reasonable attempt to get hold of the gangway, & such attempt involved more than an ordinary risk of navigation to which any passenger would be exposed, & was an act specifically connected with his employment on the ship, & he made an award in favour of the dependants in both cases, on the ground that both men had been drowned in an accident arising out of & in the course of their employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding.—MORRISON v. Seaman crossing barges instead of using boat.]—A sailor who was on shore on leave from his ship returned to the ship by walking over barges which lay between it & the quay, & while doing so, fell into the water & was drowned. The employers had provided a boat & boatman for the members of the crew to get from & to the ship, but most of the crew used the way over the barges, & that was acquiesced in by the officers:—Held: the sailor being under no obligation or duty to his employers to return by this means, was not in the course of his employment in so doing, & therefore the accident did not arise in the course of the employment.—BLACK v. Fall from ship lying between barge & quay.]—A canal barge, with a cargo of grain, which was to be transferred to a ship lying alongside the quay, drew up on the river side of this ship & lay alongside it secured in that position by hawsers. The only reasonable way the men on the barge had of going ashore was to cross this ship & then cross the gangway between it & the quay. In the interval before the discharging of the cargo began, the master of the barge went ashore to obtain refreshments, cash a cheque, &

to use a lavatory, there being no lavatory on the barge. On his return, having crossed the ship he was proceeding to get from it to the barge, there being no gangway between the ship & the barge, when he slipped & fell into the river & was drowned. There was some evidence that the crew of the barge could not go ashore without the permission of the master of the barge, but there was no evidence that the master could not go ashore without leave from some superior officer of his employers:—Held: the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—LAWLOR v. two feet, & then hopped on to the quay. The deceased workman followed, but in stepping off the ship's bulwark he slipped, fell, & was killed. After the accident the foreman noticed for the first time that there was a ladder provided to bridge the two-foot space between the ship's bulwark & the handrail on the quay, & it was admitted that stepping across from the ship's bulwark to the quay was not the right way of leaving the ship. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers:—Held: the manner in which the deceased workman left the ship was not so far removed from anything contemplated by either party as to preclude the ct. from holding that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The case must be remitted to the county ct. judge to assess compensation.—DIXON v. AYRESOME S.S. OWNERS (1930), 99 L. J. K. B. 250; 142 L. T. 455; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 115; 23 B. W. C. C. 29, C. A.

2557a. No order before accident—Liability to receive order to work on machine from which injury received.]—A workman employed in a brick factory had to work according to the instructions of a foreman. He might be put to work at any moment on any machine, including a plunger machine. He was instructed by the foreman to work a pressing machine & then to collect broken bricks. After collecting the bricks he was asked by a fellow workman to work a plunger machine. While working on this machine he was injured by an accident which resulted in serious & permanent disablement. The county ct. judge found as a fact that although he was working on the plunger machine without instructions from the foreman, the act was one within the scope of his general employment, & held that as the act was done for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' business, the accident must be deemed to have arisen out of & in the course of his employment. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—THORNTON v. WILLIAM COCHRAN-CARR, LTD. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 411, C. A.

2557b. Order to take bath—No liability to dismissal for disobedience.]—Resp. was employed by appts. as a fireman in their mine. In 1929 the welfare society erected baths for the use of the miners on land forming part of appts.' colliery undertaking leased to the society. The workmen in the mine contributed 3d. each weekly towards the expense of the baths & appts. 3d. a week per man employed, & the baths were managed by the welfare committee & representatives of the workmen & the employers. Appts. ordered all their firemen to instruct their men that they must take a bath after a shift & if any workman did not take a bath he must give a reason to the manager. Of 1,100 miners a thousand used the baths, but any man who did not was never dismissed. On Nov. 26, 1931, resp. was having a bath at the welfare society premises after his shift when he slipped & injured his knee. The injury caused resp. to be totally incapacitated from osteo-arthritis & he claimed compensation. The county ct. judge found that there was an order issued that the men should have baths & that the order was part of the contract of service & that therefore the accident in the bath arose out of & in the course of the employment, & awarded compensation:—Held: though there might have been an order that men should take baths that order was never a term of the employment, as the men were not subject to dismissal if they disobeyed it. Therefore when resp. was bathing he was no longer in the course of his employment by appts. & was not entitled to compensation.—GASKELL v. ST. HELENS COLLIERY Co., LTD. (1934), 150 L. T. 506; 27 B. He worked for a few months on drilling & stamping machines as he was told to do by S.; but on Dec. 18, 1933, on which date he was fifteen years old, F., a fellow workman, told him to work his pressing machine. He worked on it for two hours, when he sustained an accident resulting in the tops of two of the fingers of his left hand having to be amputated. 2566a. Handling electric cable before permit given.]—A linesman of some experience was employed by contractors in their work of laying overhead electric cables. The work was done in three stages, unrolling, gunning, & lifting the wire on to the insulators on the poles. He had been instructed by his foreman that cables were not to be fixed to the insulators on the poles until information had been received that the current had been turned off from the live wires already in position. The first two stages of the work having been completed, the workman without waiting for the necessary permit, proceeded to lift a wire into position on top of the poles. While doing so he struck a live wire & sustained severe burns from which he died. On a claim for compensation by the dependants, the county ct. judge though he found the foregoing facts & also that the workman was a quick workman who was anxious to proceed with the job, & that, provided care was used, there was no danger from the live wires, held that, as the workman was instructed not to work in the area where he met with his accident until the current had been turned off, the accident did not arise out of the employment within sect. 1 (1), & made his award in favour of the employers. The dependants appealed:—Held: on the facts found by the county ct. judge the accident must be deemed to have arisen out of the employment within sect. 1 (2). Appeal allowed. He was asked to change the electric bulb over the machine, which he had been asked to do & done before, & got on the table of the machine whilst it was in motion to do so, when the bulb gave him an electric shock, causing him to fall into the machine, with the result that both legs had to be amputated. The county ct. judge awarded him compensation on the ground that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment. The boy admitted in evidence that he had no right to be working the automatic machine, but the evidence was that from time to time he used for considerable periods to work that machine, & had more than once changed the bulb, & was never told not to do so. The county ct. judge also found that the act was done by the boy for the purposes of & in connection with his employer's trade or business:—Held: there was ample evidence for the award made, as what the boy admitted in evidence did not imply that, knowing the full terms of the Act, he confessed he had lost all his rights under the Act against his employer, & changing the bulb was within the scope of his employment & therefore arose out of his employment.—*MANLEY v. 2574a. —[Deceased was a mosaic worker employed by appts., who had a flooring contract at K., & deceased was carrying out at K. mosaic work for the purposes of the contract. It was the duty of deceased to travel by train from L. to K. daily, & he was paid by appts. for the time occupied in so travelling, & his railway ticket was also paid for by appts. Deceased, having gone to sleep, got out of the train whilst it was in motion leaving K. & slipped on the platform as he landed, fell heavily on his back, his head striking the platform violently, & died of the injuries received:—Held: though deceased was in the course of his employment while travelling in the train, he was committing an illegal act in getting out of the train while in motion, & was doing an act which did not arise out of the employment, but under the above sect. it must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment as having been done in pursuance of & for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & the act done was not so contrary to law as to put the man wholly outside the sphere of the employment, & his widow was entitled to compensation.—*ALTOBELLI v. 1. Workman fetching hot water for tea.—Following a practice or custom known to his employer, a worker left the job upon which he was working to go from one part of his employer's premises to another during his employer's time, in order to procure hot water for tea for the midday meal of himself & his fellow-workers; he was doing this for the purpose of more conveniently supplying them with the hot water which the employer habitually provided, generally as a matter of statutory obligation, sometimes without that compulsion, but in like case. Whilst on the way to the employer's boiler containing the hot water, he was injured by a motor car on a road on the employer's premises:—Held: the accident arose in the course of his employment, & he was entitled to compensation.—PEARSON v. FREMANTLE HARBOUR TRUST (1929), 42 C. L. R. 320.—AUS.

2589a. —.]—A porter employed by furniture & upholstery makers claimed compensation for injury by accident arising out of an assault committed upon him in the course of his employment. Whilst engaged in loading furniture into a railway van outside resp.'s premises an altercation arose between appt. & the van driver in consequence of a suggestion made to the driver that he should assist in expediting the work. The driver struck appt. in the face, & so injured one of his eyes that it had to be removed. The county ct. judge dismissed the application, finding that though the assault was an accident, it was not one of the risks of appt.'s employment that he should be assaulted, & it was not the result of doing anything of service to his employer, & it was not an accident arising out of the employment:—Held: the decision was right, as there was evidence upon which the judge could support his decision, & no misdirection.—LEE v. BRECKMAN (S. & I.) & Co. (1928), 138 L. T. 610; 44 T. L. R. 235; 72 Sol. Jo. 154; 21 B. W. C. C. 32, C. A.

2594a. Attendant of urinal—Assault by drunkard.]—A workman employed as an underground urinal attendant in the East End of London, was struck in the eyes by a drunken sailor who refused to pay a penny for using a water-closet. As a result, the workman, who already suffered from partial loss of sight, was totally blinded. The county ct. judge heard no evidence as to the quantum of compensation, but decided as a point of law that he could not hold that the accident arose out of the employment in the absence of evidence that the employment exposed the workman to some risk of assault. He therefore made an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the workman, by the nature of his employment, was exposed to risks to which ordinary members of the public were not exposed & the accident arose out of the employment.—SMITH v. STEPENY CORPN. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 451, C. A.

2594b. Workman murdered by mad fellow-workman.]—A workman was murdered in a rubber factory by a fellow-workman, who suddenly developed homicidal mania. His father claimed compensation as a dependant. The county ct. judge made an award in his favour, holding that, though there was no special risk attached to the nature of the employment, the workman was bound by his duty to work near the man who ultimately went mad, & was therefore exposed to a risk not equally shared with the rest of the community. The employers appealed, & it was argued on behalf of the dependant on appeal that a risk was attached to the locality in which the workman was murdered by reason of the presence of a madman:—Held: the risk of being attacked by a madman did not arise out of the employment either by reason of the duties performed by the workman or by reason of the locality in which they were performed.—HOLDEN v. PREMIER WATER-PROOF & RUBBER CO., LTD. (1930), 144 L. T. 519; 47 T. L. R. 169; 23 B. W. C. C. 460, C. A.

so. — Buyer at fruit market.]—A worker employed by a wholesale fruit vendor at a market while recovering some fruit cases from some buyers was assaulted by one of the buyers & as a consequence his right eye had to be enucleated. The buyer who assaulted the worker was one of a very rough class of men. These men thieved from vendors in the markets, became quarrelsome & in a number of cases assaulted persons who recovered stolen goods:—Held: there was a special risk of assault attaching to appt.'s employment.—*HARDER v. sr. Watchman bitten by dog.]—Resp. employed appt. as a watchman, & for about two years prior to May 24, 1934, his dog accompanied him on patrolling duty. While waiting to be relieved of duty appt. was stroking his dog, when the dog, without provocation, bit appt.'s hand, causing him incapacity for work. At the time of the happening of the injury, appt. was seventy-three years of age, & had physical disability unconnected with his employment. As a result of the dog bite he suffered a degree of permanent disablement to his right hand, which caused him a degree of partial incapacity for the limited type of work he could perform before the happening of the injury, thus reducing his pre-injury ability to earn & this disablement was a material contributing factor in restricting his opportunities for employment of the pre-injury kind:—Held: the injury arose out of & in the course of the appt.'s employment with resp.—*COLLINS v. in hold, after having been helped on board three hours earlier in a hopelessly drunken condition. The accident happened when he was engaged in carrying food, it being no part of his duty to do so, on that night. The county ct. judge found that the workman must have crawled through the ropes round the hold without having any duty whatsoever to do so, & held the accident arose neither out of nor in the course of his employment:—Held: the judge could have come to no other conclusion on the evidence, & there was no misdirection.—WATSON v. ALEPPO (OWNERS) (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 634, C. A.

2602b. — Accident not due solely to intoxication.—A seaman who had been on shore with leave returned to his ship in a state of intoxication. While climbing from the jetty to the ship by means of a ladder, he slipped from the ladder & was killed. The county ct. judge found that the negotiation of the ladder, although properly placed & secured, involved some risk & that the accident was not solely due to the intoxication. He therefore made his award for the dependants. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—*BULMER & BYRON v. S.S. 2610a. — Earthquake.—Buildings at Nelson, New Zealand, having collapsed owing to a severe earthquake, debris therefrom fell upon three men who were "workers" within Workers' Compensation Act, 1922, two of them being at work on the premises where they were employed, & the third being in the public street in the performance of his duty as an hotel porter; a further worker while working lost his balance owing to the earthquake & fell down a steep incline on the premises where he was employed:—Held: in each case the accident to the worker was one "arising . . . out of the employment" within sect. 3 (1) of the Act above mentioned without it being shown that by reason of his employment he was especially exposed to risks incidental to earthquakes.—BROOKER v. THOMAS BORTHWICK & SONS (AUSTRALASIA), LTD., [1933] A. C. 669; 102 L. J. P. C. 170; 149 L. T. 590; 50 T. L. R. 3; 77 Sol. Jo. 556; 28 B. W. C. C. 495, P. C.

2612a. Splinter in finger—Workman making packing-cases.—A workman engaged in making wooden packing-cases complained to a welfare worker in his employers' works that he thought he had a splinter in the little finger of his right hand, but she could find nothing except a small black speck. It was a frequent occurrence for a workman to request the welfare worker to remove a splinter from a finger, & this particular workman had done so on several occasions. The finger became red & swollen, & five days later a doctor found a small bleb on it containing pus. The workman was feverish & was sent to hospital, where he died of septic pneumonia ten days after his complaint to the welfare worker. In his evidence the house-surgeon of the hospital said, "There was no sign of a foreign body. In my view there must have been some injury or crack at place of bleb. Crack might be microscopical or it might be a foreign body entering there. The latter is the most usual." There was no evidence that the workman did any work at home which might cause a similar injury. On a claim by the dependants, the county ct. judge found the following facts: (a) sepsis was due to the entry of a foreign body, the point of entry being indicated by the bleb, (b) deceased had previously got splinters in his hand, such as led to festering, (c) such a splinter would be likely to produce the condition of deceased's finger. From these facts he drew the inference that the deceased was infinitely more likely to get a splinter at work than elsewhere, & that he, therefore, died from an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. The employers front of the building fell on to the pavement, & E. was killed, his body being found on the footpath buried beneath the hotel veranda & the fallen front portion of the building:—Held: (1) the death of deceased took place "in the course of" his employment, & his death in the circumstances outlined above arose "out of the employment"; (2) a worker, who in the discharge of his duty to seek safety attempts to leave the building in which he is employed, is within the protection of the Act until he arrives at a place where he is reasonably safe from being injured through the collapse of building; the ambit or scope of his duty impliedly extended to cover the danger area in respect of that building & its curtilages, Altter, if a worker, having reached a place of safety, returns to his place of employment out of mere curiosity & is injured by a fall of brickwork resulting from one of the aftershocks of an earthquake.—*EVANS v. sl. Accident in bath—Bathhouse provided by employer in accordance with statute—No order to use bath.—R., while in the employ of deft., which, pursuant to Coal Mines Act, 1925, s. 150, had provided bathhouses for workers at its mine, & while bathing in accordance with the practice at the mine, slipped & suffered injury which disabled him from working. No order or request, express or implied, was given to the men to use the shower-bath:—Held: (1) the taking of a bath in the bathhouses provided by deft. formed no part of pltf.'s duty, & the accident did not accordingly arise out of & in the course of his employment; (2) the deciding factor was not the provision of the baths pursuant to a statutory requirement, but the conditions relating to their use, which was optional.—*REED v. 2618a. Scratches—Furniture remover.—A workman, employed to drive a lorry & move furniture, frequently received scratches in the course of his work, but usually took no notice of them. On returning from his work one evening he showed his wife that his fingers were scratched. He suffered great pain under the arm during the night & died within seven days of septic poisoning. He had no hobby or occupation at home which exposed him to scratches. The county ct. judge found that death was due to an injury arising out of the employment. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—PIPER v. DE'ATH BROS. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 73, C. A.

sg. Earthquake.—An accident caused to a worker in the course of his employment within Workers' Compensation Act, 1922, s. 3, as a result of a severe earthquake, which was a general catastrophe, does not arise "out of" the employment unless the accident is due to a "locality risk" & the worker establishes that he was exposed to some special risk due to the incidents of his employment.—BORTHWICK (THOS.) & SONS (AUSTRALASIA), LTD. v. RYAN, BORTHWICK (THOS.) & SONS (AUSTRALASIA), LTD. v. BROOKER, NELSONS (N. Z.), LTD. v. PRENDERGAST, BRENNAN & MANNING v. ASHWEILL, [1932] N. Z. L. R. 225.—N. Z.

2618b. Domestic servant drying hair.—A domestic servant was accustomed, with the knowledge, assent, & approval of her mistress, to wash her hair once a fortnight. On one occasion having washed her hair she sat near a gas fire in the kitchen, & was engaged in drying her hair by rubbing it with a towel when she fell in a faint against the fire suffering severe burns. It was admitted by the employer that the accident arose in the course of the employment. The county ct. judge found that it was part of the girl's duty to her employer to wash her hair & that the accident resulted from so doing. He, consequently, held that the accident arose out of the employment. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings of fact, & from those facts the county ct. judge had drawn the correct inference in law that the accident arose out of the employment.—CODLING v. RIDLEY (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 3, C. A.

2619a. —.]—A commercial traveller was killed by a falling tree while motor-cycling upon his employers' business. The fall of the tree was apparently caused by a gale of unusual force:—Held: as deceased was brought into a danger zone by reason of his employment, the accident arose "out of the employment" within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1, & the question as to what caused the fall of the tree was irrelevant.—*LAWRENCE v. 2620a. Fall in lavatory.—Aplts. had employed resp. for some fourteen years as a clerk, & were aware that he had been liable all the service to seizures of epileptic fits which sometimes he felt coming on & the danger of which he lessened by sitting down. On Aug. 10, 1932, he had occasion in the morning to go to the lavatory which the employers had provided on the working premises, & he fell, in an epileptic fit, on the back of his head, fracturing his skull & dying the same day from it. The floor of the lavatory was tiled & was wet, but the fall was found & admitted to be due to the fit. The widow of the deceased workman claimed compensation from aplts. as being dependent on the earnings of deceased. The county ct. judge, sitting as an arbitrator under the Act, having found that the floor of the lavatory was not in itself dangerous except in the sense that to fall upon it, just as upon any hard surface, would probably be productive of injury, but that it was a zone of special danger with relation to an epileptic person, & that resort to the lavatory was not only an incident but an obligation of the employment, held that the accident arose out of the employment as well as in the course of the employment:—Held: when once the county ct. judge had found that the floor of the lavatory was not in itself dangerous, he was bound to hold that there was no accident which arose out of the employment, as the origin of the mishap was the idiopathic condition of the workman, & the cause of the fall peculiar to the man himself quite apart from his employment.—LANDER v. BRITISH UNITED SHOE MACHINERY CO., LTD. (1933), 102 L. J. K. B. 768; 149 L. T. 395; 26 B. W. C. C. 411, C. A.

2620b. — Fall off bicycle.—A workman, who to his employer's knowledge suffered from frequent epileptic fits, used a bicycle to go to & from his work. He had been warned by his doctor not to ride a bicycle, but had continued to do so, & his employer had on many occasions told him to use his bicycle for the purpose of carrying his tools if he was required to work at any distance from his usual place of employment. On the day of his death the workman had been told by his employer to leave his work early in order to take his tools to a field where he was to work on the following day. He was found dead on the road; there was no suggestion that the accident was caused by any traffic trouble, & the evidence showed that he had had an epileptic fit & had fallen off his bicycle,

- sustaining injuries from which he died:—Held: the accident arose out of the workman's employment.—MARTIN v. FINCH, [1937] 2 All E. R. 631; 156 L. T. 447; 81 Sol. Jo. 418; 30 B. W. C. C. 99, C. A.

The dyke was 15 feet wide at the top & 2 feet 6 inches wide at the bottom. To perform his work the workman had to stand on the sloping sides which were uneven & did not afford a firm foothold, & chop upwards with a scythe. He was found drowned in the water at the bottom of the dyke. On a claim for compensation brought by the widow the county ct. judge drew the inference that he had fallen into the water in an epileptic fit. & further found as facts that the place & nature of the work were such that a normal man might fall & that a risk was necessarily attached to the employment by reason of the fact that the workman was an epileptic. He accordingly made an award in favour of the widow. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings of fact & no misdirection.—IRONMONGER v. VINTER (1938), 31 B. W. C. - 2647a. — — —.]—A colliery repairer, fifty-eight years of age & apparently in excellent health, was scooping out a hole in the earth with an iron bar. After kneeling at this work for a minute or two he fell forward without a word & died some hours later without regaining consciousness. There was no post mortem or inquest as the medical man called to the deceased was alleged to have said at the time that death was due to "natural causes." At the arbn. brought by the widow the same medical man in his evidence said that he did not understand the meaning of the phrase "natural causes" in its legal significance, & that he now thought that the work was connected with the death. The county ct. judge, sitting with a medical assessor, said that on the evidence he was entitled in law to find either way, but having discussed the medical aspect with the medical assessor he did not feel that appt. had discharged the onus of showing that the death had any connection with the work on which deceased was engaged at the time of his collapse, & made his award in favour of the employer. The widow appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—HAYMAN v. PENSFORD & BROMLEY COLLIERIES (1921), LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 37, C. A.
- 2647b. — — —.]—A labourer was employed as a handy-man to clean up & do "anything" he was told. He set a motor truck in motion, but being unable to drive it or to switch off the current he was squeezed by it against another truck, sustaining injuries from which he died. On an application by his widow for compensation the county ct. judge held that the moving of the truck was within the sphere of the workman's employment.

The employer appealed:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that deceased moved the truck for the purposes of his work. Such a finding was no more than "surmise, conjecture or guess" & the widow had failed to discharge the onus of proof.—COLLINS v. BRITISH TIMKIN, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 74, C. A.

2647c. ———.]—A pipe fitter was employed by oil refiners, & went to & from his work on a bicycle. On the day of his death he complained while at work of a tightness in his chest, & had a fit of vomiting. While on his way home he fell from his bicycle. A passer-by summoned a doctor, who found that the workman was already dead. Suspecting heart disease the doctor performed a post mortem examination but could find no signs of heart disease. Certain organs were sent to the borough analyst who diagnosed gas poisoning. The organs were then sent to a distinguished pathologist who definitely reported in favour of heart disease as the cause of death. On a claim for compensation by the widow the county ct. judge held that the widow had failed to prove out her case, & in making his award for the employers accepted the evidence of the expert witnesses called by them. The widow appealed on the ground that the judge was wrong in accepting this evidence:—Held: there was no misdirection & ample evidence to support the award. Appeal dismissed.—DAWSON v. AGWI PETROLEUM CORPN., LTD. (No. 2) (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 456, C. A.

2647d. ———.]—An electric fitter who was competent & trustworthy had been employed by the same employer for twenty years. It was part of his duty to carry out tests on switches, & he was employed on this work in a compound containing four powerful switches. Each switch before being tested was made "dead" by disconnection. No. 3 switch having been tested was made "alive" again & work was being done on No. 4, which had been disconnected. An explosion occurred & the workman was seen on No. 3 electrocuted. No reason was known for his return to No. 3 switch. On a claim for compensation by the widow the county ct. judge drew the inference from the facts proved that the workman had gone on to No. 3 in mistake for No. 4, & that he had not gone there for any purpose of his own, & awarded the widow compensation on the ground that death resulted from an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. The county ct. judge in giving judgment appeared to have overlooked the fact that evidence was given on behalf of the employer. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence upon which the county ct. judge could draw the inference he did, & even assuming that he had not considered the evidence given on behalf of the employer, such evidence was not sufficient to displace that inference, which was a proper one to draw. Appeal dismissed. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords refused.—KEELEY v. ENGLISH ELECTRIC CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 118, C. A.

2647e. ———.]—A labourer came home from work & showed his wife a cut on his forearm to which iodine had been applied. As a result of infection in the wound the workman died. The widow claimed compensation.

Notice of an accident to the workman had been entered in a register of accidents kept by the employers. The county ct. judge held that there was not sufficient evidence that the deceased workman had sustained injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, & made his award for the employers. The widow appealed:—Held: there was no evidence of any accident arising out of & in the course of the employment & the entry in the register of accidents could not be used as evidence of the occurrence of an accident. Appeal dismissed.—PITT v. STRETFORD & DISTRICT GAS BOARD (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 43, C. A.

2650a. ———.]—The deceased workman was employed to drive a dust cart & assist in collecting house refuse. The occupier of a house asked deceased's mate to take away some gas cylinders which he did, placing them in a pail at the rear of the cart. The mate was in another house collecting refuse when he heard a loud report. He went out & found the deceased lying fatally injured on the bank with a gas cylinder lying two feet away on the road without its brass cap. The gas cylinders could not explode unless touched in some way. They were not house refuse & should never have been collected. On an application by the widow for compensation the county ct. judge refused to find either that deceased workman was engaged in his employer's work up to the time of his fatal injury or that his last known acts were consistent with the continuance of that work, on the ground that the only evidence before him was that the explosion could not have occurred automatically, & its occurrence was not therefore consistent with either of the sets of facts which he was asked to find on her behalf & made his award for the employer. The widow appealed:—Held: there being no evidence that the workman was otherwise engaged than in his employer's work up to the time of his fatal injury, & the explosion being consistent either with the continuance or discontinuance of that work, the proper presumption to be drawn, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, was that death resulted from an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of the employment. Appeal allowed.—PATTENDEN v. MCINTOSH (I.) (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 434, C. A.

2651a. ———.]—A miner was returning from his place of work at the face to the pit shaft by a route along which journeys of trams went. He was found crushed & later died from his injuries, but was heard to say, "I slipped." His dependants brought a claim for compensation which the employer resisted on the ground that the workman had been riding on a journey of trams in contravention of a statutory prohibition. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman had been riding on a tram & had fallen off, & made his award for the employer. The dependants appealed:—Held: there was no evidence on which the judge could come to the conclusion which he did without surmise, conjecture, or guess, & as the accident was unexplained & occurred in a place where it was the workman's duty to be during the performance of his work the award should have been made for the dependants.—EVANS v. RAGLAN COLLIERIES, LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 609, C. A.

2651b. —.]—A miner was employed to attend to the removal of dirt in steel tubs from a lower to a higher part of a mine through an inclined tunnel 70 yds. long & 6 ft. wide. The height of the tunnel varied from 6 ft. to 3 ft. 6 ins. By the side of the lines on which the tubs ran was a footpath 2 ft. wide, & in the side of the tunnel man-holes were constructed for safety purposes. The tubs were hauled by a chain worked from a stationary engine at the top of the tunnel. The workman was very familiar with the tunnel & used to walk by the side of the tubs as they were hauled up the incline. On this particular occasion he entered the tunnel by the side of a tub & was last seen walking, when he was lost to sight in the darkness. A few seconds later a shout was heard & the engine was stopped. The workman was found lying partly in a manhole with his feet towards the lines & his cap lying further along the way in which the tubs had been moving. His back was broken & he was in great pain. He was alleged to have said, "Yes, I have been riding, but don't tell anyone." He subsequently denied recollection of such a statement. The workman claimed compensation. The employer denied liability on the ground that the workman had been riding on the tubs, contrary to the regulations, & it was admitted on behalf of the workman that, if that were so, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment. The county ct. judge rejected the alleged statement made while the workman was in pain as being of no evidential value & held that on the circumstantial evidence he was justified in drawing the inference that the workman had lurched forward in the dark & had been struck by the tub. He, therefore made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords refused.—HESFORD v. MANCHESTER COLLIERIES, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 137, C. A.

2651c. —.]—Two workmen were employed in a shed in a timber yard dipping timber into creosote & then stacking it. Shortly after one workman had left the shed the other workman was seen running from it in flames. He subsequently died from the effects of the burns. The widow of the workman having claimed compensation, evidence to the above effect was given on her behalf at the arbn., but the employers called no evidence. The county ct. judge found that it was a matter of common knowledge that creosote was inflammable & drew the inference from the facts that the workman's clothes had creosote upon them. He held, however, that there was no evidence to show how the clothes could become ignited by any act connected with the work or to establish that the accident was capable of explanation solely by reference to the presence of some risk incident to the work or place, & said that he refused to draw from the evidence the inference that the accident had arisen out of the employment. The widow appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge having found that creosote was inflammable & that creosote was on the workman's clothes, must thereby be taken to have found that the workman was subjected by reason of his employment to a special risk & was bound in law to hold that the widow had discharged the burden of proving that the accident had arisen out of the employment, as the facts raised a presumption which it was for the employers to rebut. The employers having called no evidence to rebut this presumption, the widow was entitled to succeed. Appeal allowed.—TOWRISS v. MARSHALL, KNOTT & BARKER, LTD. (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 78, C. A.

2668a. Dispenser—Scratch.]—Appet.* was employed by two doctors in partnership as a dispenser, her duties being to fill medicine bottles & clean instruments. On Nov. 9, 1926, at 10.30 a.m., whilst so employed, she noticed that her right thumb was bleeding, but was not sure how the scratch which caused the bleeding had occurred, & she had not felt pain. She inferred that she must have knocked it at the time on a rough bit of wood at the side of the sink or on the edge of a cork box. She applied iodine, but as the bleeding did not stop she went to the assistant, who bandaged her thumb, & she continued at work until 11.30, when she went to one of the partners, who dressed the wound. On Nov. 16 she felt too unwell to go to work, & subsequently was in the infirmary until Jan. 18, 1927, suffering from septic poisoning:—Held: (1) there were sufficient facts proved before the county ct. judge to enable him to draw an inference one way or the other, so that there was no necessity for surmise, conjecture, or guess; (2) the employers had had knowledge of the accident, & notice was not necessary.—*GILL v. On the following day he told a fellow-workman that he was "feeling his shoulder," but he continued at work until May 21. A doctor was called in on May 23, but the workman rapidly grew worse & died on May 25 from septicæmia. The widow spoke to the employers' time-keeper of the death & gave formal notice on June 11. The county ct. judge held he was entitled to infer an injury resulting from an accident which arose out of & in the course of the employment, & also held the employers were not prejudiced by any delay in giving notice:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.—*FLETCHER v. 1931, the workman called his mate's attention to his finger, & the mate said that the finger appeared inflamed to him. He then went to the ambulance room & had his finger dressed. Septicæmia set in & he died on Aug. 20. His parents claimed compensation as dependants. The county ct. judge held that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment & made an award in favour of the dependants. That award having been set aside by the Ct. of Appeal, the dependants appealed:—Held: the more likely cause of the accident was a cut from a splinter of a metal sheet; in other words, the cut was sustained during work hours on July 20 & was therefore an accident which occurred in the course of the workman's employment.—*DAVIES v. 2686a. Fall—Death from head injury.]—A plumber while working alone fell from some steps & was, for a time, in a state of stupor, but was able to finish the job. His jaw & face were contused & he was unable to eat owing to the injury to the jaw. His doctor sent him to bed & later to hospital. He had some injury to his back which prevented his turning over, & also a dark hæmorrhage. He died in hospital on the fourth day after his accident. His widow claimed compensation. At the arbn. the panel doctor & a specialist from Harley Street called on behalf of his widow were of opinion that death was due to or accelerated by the injury to the head. The county ct. judge found that the widow had discharged the onus of proving that death was due to an accident which arose out of & in the course of the employment & made his award in her favour. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—EVERETT v. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY & TOWN WATERWORKS CO. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 237, C. A.

2689a. Concussion—Subsequent stroke.]—A labourer, aged thirty-eight years, suffered injuries to his head & concussion in Oct. 1930, from an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He was in hospital for ten days, when he returned to do light work with his old employers. In Mar. 1931, owing to lack of work, he was discharged. In July, 1931, he had a stroke, as a result of which he was paralysed down the right side & unable to speak. The medical evidence was conflicting as to whether the stroke was due to kidney & bladder trouble or to the injuries suffered by the accident. The county ct. judge held that the onus upon the workman of proving that his present condition was due to the injuries received in the accident had not been discharged & refused to make an award for him. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—STANDLEY v. CHAPMAN (J.) & SONS, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 403, C. A.

2690a. — Chronic glaucoma.—A stoker, who was already blind in his left eye, complained that he had become completely blind. He alleged that a foreign body had entered his right eye, but at the time of the alleged accident he made no complaint of anything having entered his right eye. A doctor, who examined him, diagnosed the case as one of chronic glaucoma. The county ct. judge found that the workman was at all material times suffering from chronic glaucoma, & that there was no injury by accident arising out of or in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—WARSAWA v. WATNESS (OWNERS) (1921), 21 B. W. C. C. 85, C. A.

2690b. Cataract.—A foreman electrician had since the age of seven worn spectacles in order to save a permanent squint. On Apr. 16, 1926, an ignition tube burst, & some particles of dust & carbon struck his right eye. The right side of the face was blackened, but after his eye had been bathed & particles of carbon washed out, he continued at work until Jan. 1928, although from time to time the right eye became inflamed. In Feb. 1928, cataract was diagnosed, & in Oct. 1928, the right eye was excised. After the operation the workman resumed his work with the same employer & earned the same wages. On an application for compensation the county ct. judge said he was not satisfied that the workman had made out a prima facie case of incapacity due to the accident in 1926 & did not call on the employers, but dismissed the application with costs. The workman appealed on the ground that the award was against the weight of evidence:—Held: the evidence justified the county ct. judge in finding that the incapacity was not due to the accident.—*JONES v. 2691a. — Injury to one eye—Subsequent incapacity to other eye not due to accident.—A plumber injured his right eye when stooping down at his work in Feb. 1924. He returned to work in Mar. 1924, & remained at work until May, 1932. Meanwhile as a result of the accident a cataract developed in his right eye, which became useless in 1931, so that he had to work with the sight of his left eye. The left eye also developed cataract unconnected with the accident. In 1932 he was operated on for cataract in the right eye & recovered partial sight in that eye. On a claim for compensation for total incapacity the county ct. judge held that the incapacity was not due to the accident in Feb. 1924, & made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the matter was a question of fact for the county ct. judge.—BEALL v. BOSTAL BROS., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 371, C. A.

2691b. Claim successful—Shoe cleaner—Burst bottle of ammonia.—A woman was employed in a stock-room to clean patent leather shoes. For this purpose ammonia was used & was supplied by the foreman as required. If, however, the supply ran short, the workmen were in the habit of buying ammonia for themselves. The woman bought a bottle of ammonia for the purpose of cleaning shoes, but the cork flew out & the liquid splashed in her face. As a result her eyes were injured. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge found that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment & made his award for the woman. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—BULLERS v. ALTUS SHOEMAKERS, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 132, C. A.

2693a. — Railway guard travelling as passenger.—A railway guard, instructed to travel from Glasgow to Gourrock in order to take charge of a train there, got into an empty compartment at Glasgow. On arrival of the train at Gourrock he was missing, but articles belonging to the man were found on the seat of the compartment. He was afterwards found lying unconscious in a tunnel between Glasgow & Gourrock at the left side of the direction of the train, & he died from a fractured skull without recovering consciousness. The compartment at Gourrock had its left door shut but the window open. Upon a claim by his dependants for compensation, the arbitrator negatived violence & suicide, & found that the man met his death by falling accidentally from the window of the compartment, & on these facts he concluded that the accident arose out of & in the course of the deceased's employment & awarded compensation:—Held: the arbitrator was entitled on the facts found to draw the inference that the accident to the deceased arose out of as well as in the course of his employment.

The rule to be deduced from the authorities for application to unexplained accident cases is that where the evidence establishes that in the course of his employment the workman was properly in a place to which some risk particular thereto attaches, & an accident occurs capable of explanation solely by reference to that risk, it is legitimate, notwithstanding the absence of evidence as to the immediate circumstances of the accident, to attribute the accident to that risk, & to hold that the accident arose out of the employment, but the inference as to the origin of the accident may be displaced by evidence tending to show that the accident was due to some action of the workman outside the scope of his employment (per CUR.).—*SIMPSON v. 2702a. —.]—A ship's fireman who, in warm weather & with permission, had gone to sleep on deck when the vessel was in harbour, fell overboard in the night & lost his life. There was no evidence that he was on duty at any time during the night. On a claim by the dependants of the dead man against the owners of the ship for compensation on the ground that the death resulted from an accident arising out of & in the course of the man's employment, the county ct. judge decided against the claimants, his award indicating that he considered that the absence of any evidence that the man was on duty at the time was a critical & determining factor which, on the authorities, bound him to reach this conclusion:—Held: this was a mistaken view of the true position as laid down in the authorities, & the judge was free to draw an inference from the facts as they were before him, & since he had not considered himself so free the case should be remitted to him with a direction that he was.—*ROSEN v. At 1 a.m. on the following morning the workman was found asleep on deck by one B., who wakened him & asked him if he was not going to bed. He replied that he would go in five minutes. B. went below & heard some one go past his door five minutes later. The workman did not report for duty at 5 a.m. & was never seen alive after 1 a.m. It was presumed that he had gone overboard, but his body was never recovered. The ship was out at sea between 1 a.m. & 5 a.m., but there was only a slight roll. Two years later his widow filed a request for arbn. on behalf of herself & her children. The county ct. judge held that there was no evidence of any kind from which he could draw any inference that there was an accident which arose out of & in the course of the employment. 2710a. —.]—A miner, who was known to be suffering from valvular disease of the heart, returned to work against his doctor's advice. His condition was such that he was liable to collapse or sudden death at any moment. He went down the mine at 10.30 p.m., & was alive & well at 3 o'clock. At 4 o'clock he was found dead in his stall, lying back as though asleep. There was no evidence of any fall of roof, & he had no pick in his hand. He was alone at the time of his death, & there was no evidence of what the man was actually doing:—Held: there was later his body was found floating in the Canal Basin. The cause of death was, admittedly, drowning:—Held: there was evidence from which the judge could infer that when the workman left the hut he had gone for the purpose of relieving nature; there was also evidence that the death of the workman was caused by an accident; & that accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—*TRACEY v. b i. —.]—Workman leaving work to relieve nature.—The premises of a coal importer adjoined the Grand Canal Docks. Although a considerable number of men were employed on these premises, no lavatory accommodation was provided, & it was customary for the employees to go across a piling on to a track about three feet wide which passed along the edge of the docks & to relieve nature either on the track, which was on the employer's premises, or at some little distance outside the premises at steps which led down to the water's edge. The dinner hour for the men was from 1 to 2 o'clock. One of the workmen was told by the foreman to return to work one day before 2 o'clock to do certain work, & he returned as ordered. But when he returned he found that the work, which it was intended he should do, was not required to be done. As it was then only a short time before the ordinary hour for resuming work, he remained on the employer's premises in a shed in the company of some of his fellow-workmen. He subsequently went out of the hut, making use of a slang expression used by the men when retiring to relieve nature. He was never seen alive again. Several hours

A post-mortem examination showed that he had been suffering from advanced disease of the heart. The widow claimed compensation. The county ct. judge held that there was no evidence of any accident. 2710c. ———.]—A miner was engaged in filling a tram, & in the course of his work had to reach over a tram to get a piece of coal with a pick. He reached over the tram, said "Oh!" twice, & died. The post mortem examination showed that he had been suffering from a large rupture of the left ventricle of the heart which burst & caused his death. The dependants filed a request for arbn. At the hearing a fellow-workman gave evidence that chipping coal was no heavy work & there was no unusual strain, while one of the medical witnesses said that the workman might just as well have died in his bed so far as physical condition went. The county ct. judge in his award stated that he was unable to find that the work contributed to the death, & made his award in favour of the employer. The dependants appealed:—Held: as to whether the workman's death was accelerated by the work he was doing in any material degree was a question of fact. The evidence supported the judge's decision & there was no misdirection.—DAVIES v. VIPOND (JOHN) & Co., LTD. (1932), 146 L. T. 498; 25 B. W. C. C. 47, C. A.

Three minutes after that he was found lying unconscious on the ground almost touching the front of the van. He died in hospital some days later. He was found to have been suffering from an aneurism of the heart which might have burst spontaneously at any time. The county ct. judge found that the workman died not from the disease alone, but from the disease & employment together, & therefore made his award for the widow. The employer appealed:—Held: there was no evidence to justify the finding, & therefore the widow had failed to discharge the onus of proving that there was an accident arising out of & in the course of the employment.—DAVIS v. 2714a. Workman falling into water tank.]—Deceased was a grease boiler, aged 61, & was at the time of the accident suffering from heart disease. His doctor said in evidence that he did not advise him to go back to work, but he insisted upon going. The doctor also gave evidence that he might have died at any moment, & any strain or stooping was prejudicial to him. He was seen about his work at 5.20 a.m., & found dead at 5.40 a.m., lying over a water tank his face being covered with water. The post mortem examination showed that he died of heart disease. Upon these facts the county ct. judge held that the work upon which the deceased was engaged contributed to & accelerated his death & applying the principles in Treloar's Case, No. 2317c, & in Partridge Jones & John Paton, Ltd. v. James, No. 2322a, he made an award in favour of the dependants:—Held: the case was distinguishable from Barnabas v. On June 25 he entered the employment of fresh employers as a blacksmith & on the same day, while lifting a steel bar weighing a hundredweight, strangulated the hernia & an immediate operation became necessary. The lift was not an abnormal one, but was in the ordinary course of a blacksmith's work. while at his work:—Held: although, if there is an unexpected personal injury arising from some physiological condition set up in the course of the work, that may be described as an accident even when there is nothing unusual or particular which sets it up, yet the onus on pltf. in the present case of establishing that his condition was the result of a recent hernia had not been discharged.—AYLING v. 2731a. — Death from drinking caustic soda in tea.—A workman was entitled to refresh himself with a cup of tea while he was working. Near to his place of work there was a bucket of caustic soda which was occasionally used to wash the walls. On drinking from his cup he felt a burning sensation & became totally incapacitated from the effects of drinking caustic soda. There was no evidence as to how, or by whom, the caustic soda could have been put into the cup. The county ct. judge held that the accident did not arise out of the employment, & made his award for the employer. The workman appealed:—Held: on the evidence no inference could be drawn that the accident arose out of the employment. Appeal dismissed.—GEARY v. MATHEW BROWN & CO., LTD. (1931), 24 B. W. C. 2731b. Death from typhoid.—A workman who had been employed for a year in sewer work returned home feeling ill & died a fortnight later of typhoid fever. Medical evidence was in agreement that the typhoid could have been contracted either by eating or drinking or by work in the sewer, but there was no evidence as to the source of infection in this particular case. The county ct. judge on a claim by the widow for compensation drew the inference that the typhoid fever was contracted by deceased while engaged in the sewer work. The employer appealed:—Held: on the evidence the ct. was left in the position of having to surmise, conjecture, or guess as to when & where the disease was contracted, so that there was no ground for comparing & balancing probabilities, & it was not therefore possible for the county ct.

judge to draw an inference in favour of the widow. Appeal allowed.—HANNON v. MOWLEM & CO., LTD. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 139, C. A.

2734a. — — —. — A miner was about to insert a fuse in a detonator in the course of his duties when the detonator exploded & injured him. The sheriff-substitute held that the cause of the explosion was not proved &, the workman having discharged any onus laid on him by proving that the explosion caused the injury, found that the accident arose out of the employment & made an award in his favour. The employees appealed. The First Division of the Ct. of Session by a majority affirmed the award. The employers appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: it followed from the facts of the case that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—*LOCHGELLY IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. 2735a. — Seaman stooping in course of duty—Burst blood-vessel.—The chief officer of a vessel, fifty-eight years old, while on duty on the bridge, stooped to get some string out of a cupboard in the course of his duty & then stated to the captain that he felt queer, sat down, & later fell unconscious on the bridge. He recovered consciousness in five minutes, but died about eight hours afterwards. There was no inquest or post mortem. At the hearing of a claim by the widow the doctors on both sides agreed that he died very probably from cerebral hæmorrhage. His own doctor, who had attended him for twenty-five years, said he was a healthy man, & there was no evidence of anything wrong with his heart. The county ct. judge found that the cause of death was the breaking of some blood-vessel due to the stooping which caused the fall which subsequently led to the death, but held that he would not be justified in making an award for the dependant. The dependant appealed:—Held: on the finding that death was due to the stooping, it followed that death resulted from injury by accident arising out of the employment.—HORE v. GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 100, C. A.

b 1. — No evidence how accident occurred—Deceased killed by railway wagons at place of work.—Deceased, who was employed by deft. co. to sweep up the coal dropping on the wharf alongside one of its ships which was discharging, was discovered some short distance away from the scene of his work jammed between two railway wagons & fatally injured, it being impossible to say how he got into the position in which he was found:—Held: there being evidence that deceased was seen at his work shortly before the accident, a presumption arose that he continued in the course of his employment.—*ARCHIBALD v. t 1. — Heart disease.—On June 9, 1933, a labourer, who was carrying sleepers, felt the strain in his neck & chest, & had to get help. On June 13 he was employed in breaking up an iron box with a sixteen-pound hammer. On that day he felt so exhausted that he refused to work overtime, & next day represented himself as unfit for work. On June 23 he claimed compensation for total incapacity due to muscular strain of his chest. The employers paid compensation. Later the workman presented an application to the arbitrator to have a memorandum between himself & the employers, of date Oct. 27, 1933, recorded. The employers disputed the genuineness of the memorandum on the ground that any incapacity of the workman was not, & had not been, due to injury by accident, but to natural causes. They also asked for review & ending of the compensation on the same ground. The arbitrator, after proof, found that the workman had throughout the relevant period suffered from myocardial disease, that the muscular strain had been for some time completely cured, that the workman's present claim was made in respect of the condition of his heart, that the employers had made no contract with him relative to his present claim, & that he had not, at or about the dates libelled, suffered an accident in the sense of the Act. He therefore refused to award compensation. The workman appealed:—Held: the workman being no longer fit for employment owing to the wear & tear of his ordinary work acting on a diseased heart, the incapacity was not due to "injury by accident" in the sense of the statute.—MILLER v. CARNTYNE STEEL CASTINGS CO., LTD., [1935] S. C. 20; 27 B. W. C. C. Supp. 101.—SCOT.

2737a. — Fumigation of ship with sulphur—Gastritis from fumes.—At 6 p.m. on July 30, 1930, a ship was fumigated with sulphur, all hatches being battened down. All hatches were opened at 2 a.m. on July 31, & at 8 a.m. a body of workmen came on board to remove gear. Among them was a man in good health & forty-six years old, who worked at a winch about two feet from one of the hatches & nearer to the fumes than any other of the workmen. The fumes from the sulphur were coming up the hatches at that time but were not bad. At midday the workman felt very ill & complained that it was due to the fumes. He vomited during the dinner hour, but worked in the afternoon on another ship. He worked on & off feeling very ill until Aug. 8, when he was sent to hospital suffering from gastritis. None of his fellow-workmen appeared to suffer from the sulphur fumes. At the subsequent arbitration the county ct. judge found, in accordance with medical evidence, that the illness was due to the fumes & also that the occurrence was an accident. He therefore made his award in favour of the workman. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence on which the judge could find that there had been personal injury by accident within the Act & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—BRADLEY v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. Co. (1931), 145 L. T. 30; 24 B. W. C. C. 41, C. A.

2737b. — Farm bailiff hiring employer's horses.]—A farm bailiff hired horses from his employer for the purpose of moving his furniture to the residence appointed for him. The workman unbridled one of the horses in order to use the straps to tie up his furniture, but the horse took fright, knocked him down, & killed him. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the accident arose out of the employment & made an award in favour of the widow. The employer appealed:—Held: the question was one of fact for the county ct. judge. There was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—JACKSON v. FROST (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 347, C. A.

2737c. — Broncho-pneumonia.]—A workman was employed by resps. as an underground fireman in their colliery. It was part of his employment to clean out a sump in the colliery into which water was collected from the underground workings. In carrying out the work it was usually necessary to stand in cold water about waist-deep. On one occasion, upon coming out of the sump, it was noticed that he was cold & shivering; he contracted a chill which within a short time developed into broncho-pneumonia, from which he died. In an arbn. under the Workmen's Compensation the arbitrator drew the inference that the broncho-pneumonia from which the deceased died was caused by a chill which he contracted through exposure to cold & water while cleaning the sump, but he found in law that the death of the workman was not caused by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: having regard to the findings of fact in this case the workman's death was caused by personal injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment.—WALKER v. 2737d. — Death from typhoid.]—The workman was a mess-room steward employed on a steamship. On the round voyage the ship put in at midday at Durban for coal, leaving the next morning for New York. While at Durban, the workman & other members of the ship's co. went ashore. During the passage from Durban to New York the workman & two others were taken seriously ill with typhoid & were landed at Ascension Island, where the workman & one other died. The workman's widow claimed compensation on behalf of herself & infant son, as dependants. The county ct. judge found that death was due to typhoid probably contracted from a germ swallowed by the workman while partaking of food or water on board ship when at Durban & held that death resulted from an injury by accident arising out of his employment. The employers appealed on the ground that the finding of the county ct. judge that the infection was caused while the man was on board ship was mere surmise, conjecture, or guess, & not based on the evidence or probabilities of the case:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of fact & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—LEARY v. DEPTFORD S.S. OWNERS (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 235, C. A.

2768c. —.]—A quarryman, aged thirty-seven & in good health, was working a pneumatic drill on a ledge when the drill jumped causing him to fall six feet off the ledge & then to roll down a slope of twenty feet to the bottom of the quarry. Although bruised on the legs he resumed work, but the foreman gave him a lighter job for the rest of the day. After work he bicycled 2½ miles home & slept well, but it was noticed that he was not his usual self. On his return to work the next morning the foreman took care not to put him to work on too high a spot. After a while he was missed & was found dead in a shallow stream eighty yards from his work to which he had probably gone to relieve nature. The medical witnesses agreed that he had not drowned but had died from shock. The county ct. judge held that there was no break in the chain of causation between the accident & death, & that falling into the stream did not amount to a novus actus interveniens. He therefore made his award in favour of the widow of the deceased workman. The employers appealed:—Held: it was a question of fact for the county ct. judge, & there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—HUTCHINGS v. DEVON COUNTY COUNCIL (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 320, C. A.

2768d. —.]—A steel erector aged sixty-two fell forty feet into soft dirt. He was unconscious for ten minutes, but was able to walk home & returned to work next day. He came to work every day for a fortnight, but did not do his full work. He continued to suffer from shock & it was found that he had commencing cataract in both eyes. After paying compensation for four months, the employer served a notice under sect. 12 & stopped the weekly payments. The workman claimed compensation. At the arbn. it appeared that the condition of his eyesight prevented the workman from doing his old work of a steel erector, but it was doubtful whether this condition had been aggravated by the accident or not. There was further medical evidence in regard to the man's capacity for work. The county ct. judge disregarding the condition of the eyesight found that the workman was totally incapacitated as a result of the accident. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of fact & no misdirection.—BLACKWELL v. ARROL (SIR WILLIAM) & Co., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 151, C. A.

found to have heart disease. He was then told by his doctor not to lift heavy weights. On May 16, 1933, he started work at 8 a.m. as usual & was employed using a 4-lb. hammer until 9.30, when with the help of his mate he lifted iron "stringers" weighing about 162 lb. for a quarter of an hour. He then continued work involving no strain until 11.45 a.m., when he collapsed & died. His widow filed a request for arbn. At the arbn. the employer called no evidence. On behalf of the widow a fellow workman was called, & a doctor who gave it as his opinion that the lifting of the stringers was the cause of death, though he admitted that the workman might have died at any time without strain. The county ct. judge held that there was no evidence of any strain at work which either accelerated or contributed to the workman's death. The widow appealed:—Held: it was a question of degree & therefore of fact for the county ct. judge & there was evidence to support the judge's decision & no misdirection.—MITCHELL v. PALMER & Co. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 159, C. A.

2777b. —.]—A foreman stevedore, aged fifty-two, who supervised the work of a gang & occasionally lent a hand, was on June 28, 1933, struck on the chest by a case weighing 5 cwt. & knocked over. He sat in the hold for about an hour, until work ceased, when he climbed the ladder & went home. He returned to his work as a foreman on the following day, although he complained of feeling "very bad in the breast." He took a ten days' holiday in Aug. & continued his work of supervision, but after the accident did no physical work. On Sept. 5 he became totally unfit to work. He claimed compensation. At the arbn. in Apr. 1934, evidence was given that since Jan. 1933, the workman had been suffering from an aneurism, but that this fact had not been disclosed to him by his medical advisers who allowed him to continue at work. In making his award for the workman, the county ct. judge said, "Finding then that this accident did aggravate appet's condition & cause him to become totally incapacitated before he would otherwise have done, I have further to form a judgment as to when he would have become incapacitated had there been no accident." He came to the conclusion that, but for the accident, the workman would not have been incapacitated for another fourteen weeks & awarded compensation for fourteen weeks. The workman appealed:—Held: the judgment of the county ct. judge must be read as meaning that the accident had accelerated the arrival of the date on which the workman would in any event have become incapacitated by the aneurism, but that otherwise the effects of the accident were temporary & at the time of the hearing had completely passed away. There was evidence to support the award & no misdirection.

Where the only effect of the accident is to accelerate the disease so that the man is put into a condition of incapacity at an earlier date than he would have been put had the disease been allowed to run its normal course without acceleration caused by the accident, his incapacity that is due to the accident may not last beyond the date at which, if the disease had run its normal course, he

- would have become incapacitated (ROMER, L.J.).—OLD v. FURNESS, WITBY & CO., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 266, C. A.

Having become fit for special light work, her employers gave her such work at her full pre-accident wage. While so employed she was rendered temporarily unfit for any work through serious illness unconnected with the injury due to the accident. The light work provided by her employers remained open to her during the whole period of her illness. He was re-employed as a collier in 1920, & worked at the coal face until 1927, earning higher wages than he had done as a trammer. In 1927 he had to give up work owing to bad health, & became unemployed. On an application by the workman for compensation the county ct. judge found that there was no incapacity for work resulting from the injury, that there was no probability that he would have been earning higher wages if he had remained uninjured, & that there was no reasonable probability that any incapacity would ensue from the injury in the future, & dismissed the workman's application. - 2796a. Melancholia due to accident—Death from pneumonia—Susceptibility due to melancholia.—A farm labourer was, in Sept. 1932, kicked by a horse, & sustained a dislocated shoulder. Adhesions formed & he was totally incapacitated. Towards the end of the year he showed signs of mental trouble & suffered from melancholia. In Jan. 1933, he was certified as insane & entered a mental hospital, where on Feb. 28, he developed broncho-pneumonia from which on Mar. 2, he died. The widow claimed compensation as a dependant. The medical evidence, accepted by the county ct. judge & adopted by him as findings of fact, was to the effect that the melancholia was the result of the accident, & that a person suffering from melancholia was more susceptible to broncho-pneumonia than a healthy person & less likely to recover from it. The county ct. judge held that there was not sufficient evidence for him to find that death was accelerated by the melancholia. He accordingly made his award for the employer on the ground that there was no evidence to justify a finding that death from broncho-pneumonia resulted from the accident:—Held: the county ct. judge, having found that the melancholia was the result of the accident & the melancholia made the workman more susceptible to broncho-pneumonia, was bound to find on that evidence that death resulted from the accident.—*EWERS v. - 2799a. ———.—An operative baker had suffered for some years from a right inguinal hernia for which he wore a truss. On May 26, 1936, he slipped & fell whilst at his work & sustained a left inguinal hernia. On July 5, 1936, he was operated on for both hernias. He received compensation on the basis of total incapacity until Oct. 1936, when he resumed his old work at his old rate of wages of £3 15s. 6d. a week. Towards the end of Mar. 1937, the employer agreed that the workman was entitled to a declaration of liability & a memorandum of the agreement was drawn up with a view to its being recorded, but it was not in fact recorded. On Mar. 27, 1937, the workman noticed that a lump had appeared in his right groin, after feeling a sudden pain while engaged in his work. This indicated that he was again suffering from a right inguinal hernia, but he continued to work until Apr. 3, 1937, when the hernia became strangulated, while he was not at work, & he underwent a second opera- tion. He returned to light work on June 28, 1937, at a weekly wage of £3 7s. 6d. On July 28, 1937, he claimed compensation at the rate of 30s. a week from Apr. 3 to June 28, 1937, & at the reduced rate of 4s. a week from June 28 onwards. He claimed on the basis of two accidents which occurred on May 26, 1936, & Mar. 27, 1937. The employer alleged that what the workman called the second accident was not an accident at all, but the gradual results of a physical weakness. The county ct. judge found that although the coming into existence on Mar. 27, 1937, of a lump might be the culmination of a gradual process, it was a particular event which happened at a particular time, that the lump was caused by his last slip on Mar. 27, & that the formation of the lump was directly connected with the subsequent strangulation which caused total incapacity. He held that the workman was therefore entitled to be paid compensation on the basis of total incapacity from Apr. 3 to June 28, 1937, for an accident which occurred on Mar. 27, 1937, but was not entitled to any compensation thereafter because all the medical witnesses agreed that the workman ought never to have returned to his full work on Oct. 26, 1936, & that the only effect of the second accident was to call the attention of the workman to his natural weakness or tendency to hernia. In fact the workman had recognised this by being content to take lighter work at less wages. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed. Leave to appeal to House of Lords refused.—ANSELL v. ENFIELD HIGHWAY CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCN., LTD. (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 150, C. A.

2799b. ———.]—A workman was employed in pottery works as a biscuit placer, work which involved carrying heavy utensils known as saggars & climbing ladders to place the saggars at a proper height in the kiln. In May, 1936, he fell into a hole in the works & fractured his right ankle. After receiving compensation for total incapacity he returned to lighter work on Jan. 14, 1937, receiving reduced compensation in addition to his wages. On the evening of Jan. 25, 1937, he was carrying along a street for his own purposes a wireless accumulator weighing 3 to 4 lb. when, there being no obstruction or irregularity where he was walking, he fell & damaged his spine & once more became totally incapacitated. The workman applied for a review & increase of the weekly payments on the ground that the fall in the street was caused by the original accident. The employers while admitting their liability to pay 10s. 6d. a week for partial incapacity, contended that the fall in the street was a novus actus interveniens. The county ct. judge gave as his reasons for dismissing the application for review: "His former employers gave him lighter work at first, as is often done, & admitted a liability of 10s. 6d. a week not on the ground of an fresh injury to the ankle, for there was none, but solely on the footing that he was not after his return to work earning his usual wages. . . . I preferred the opinion of [the employer's doctor] to that of [the workman's doctor] largely on the ground that no one alleged any injury or weakness of the ankle joint owing to this second accident. I thought on the case of Noden v. Galloways, Ltd., [1912] 1 K. B. 46; 34 Digest 347, 2797, this was a second accident & I was not satisfied that it was a sequela of the first. Award for 10s. 6d. a week." The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had failed to direct himself properly to the issue of fact which he had to decide, viz. Was the second accident in any way caused by the first accident? Appeal allowed. Case remitted for new trial by another judge.—PEDLEY v. DAVISON & SON, LTD. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 323, C. A.

2801a. Existing total incapacity from first accident.]—A workman, while totally incapacitated as the result of an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, was certified by the certifying surgeon to be suffering from miners' nystagmus & disabled from earning full wages, the date of the certificate being under sect. 43 of 1925 Act the date of the disablement. In proceedings brought by the workman for compensation for total incapacity from the miners' nystagmus while in receipt of compensation for the total incapacity resulting from the accident:—Held: the workman was not entitled to any compensation in respect of the nystagmus while the total incapacity from the previous accident continued, as the disease did not result in any loss or diminution of earning capacity; but a declaration of liability should be made so as to enable the workman to obtain compensation in respect of the nystagmus as soon as the total incapacity from the previous accident ceased.—*WHEATLEY v. 2815a. ———.]—A dock labourer, sixty-two years old, was injured by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Immediately after the accident he underwent an operation for strangulated hernia. As a result of the operation he suffered from an inguinal hernia. The employer alleged that if he underwent an operation for the inguinal hernia he would be cured & fit for work. After serving a notice under sect. 12 the employer reduced the compensation. The workman commenced arbn. proceedings. At the hearing two expert witnesses advised the operation, but the workman's panel doctor, who had never operated for hernia, was against the operation. The county ct. judge found that the workman was fit to undergo the operation which would probably result in a radical cure & therefore there must be strong reasons to justify a refusal. The judge then said that he held that, on the whole, it was not reasonable that the workman should be required to undergo the operation or lose his compensation. He therefore made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: the advice of the panel doctor was not conclusive on reasonableness, & the county ct. judge had not decided the question of fact, whether the workman's conduct was reasonable or unreasonable.—ZIKKING v. SWIFT (THOMAS & CO., LTD.) (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 53, C. A.

2815b. ———.]—A workman in Sept. 1930, was carrying pig iron when he slipped & strained his right groin, with the result that a femoral hernia supervened. He was then forty-two years old & had for several years been treated by his own doctor for chronic bronchitis. This doctor advised him to have an operation, but after the operation had been performed by a surgeon the hernia still remained, & it was thought by the workman's doctor that the coughing due to the bronchitis had “undone the operation.” He was supplied with a truss by the employer, who also, in Dec. 1930, gave him very light work—white-washing—paying him £2 a week as wages & 15s. 6d. a week as compensation for partial incapacity. The employer in May, 1933, suggested that if a second operation was performed he would be cured. On the advice of his own doctor he refused. The employer applied for a review of the weekly payments on the ground that the workman was bound to submit to reasonable remedial measures. Two medical men gave evidence at the arbitration that there would be no danger in having a second operation & that the result should be successful. The only evidence called by the workman was his own doctor, who said that with his experience of the bronchitis & the result of the first operation he must disagree. The county ct. judge held that the workman was not unreasonable in refusing to undergo the second operation on the advice of his own doctor, bearing in mind that he was a sufferer from chronic bronchitis, & that it was common knowledge that coughing after an operation for hernia was very dangerous. The employer appealed:—Held: the reasonableness or otherwise of a workman in refusing to undergo an operation was a question of fact for the county ct. judge. There was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—SHELTON IRON, STEEL & COAL CO., LTD. v. FRANKLIN (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 140, C. A.

2820a. Inability to do former work even if operation successful.—A scaffolder sustained a wound in the middle finger of his right hand which became septic, thus necessitating its removal. The operating surgeon at first removed the index finger by mistake: the middle finger was removed subsequently. Eighteen months later the employer succeeded in proceedings for a review in obtaining a reduction of the weekly payments. The county ct. judge, however, found that the man had a tender nerve ending on the stump of the middle finger & “as far as the results of the injury caused by the accident are concerned” his earning capacity was only 25s. a week. The evidence went to show that an operation on that finger would probably cure the sensitive condition. The workman refused to undergo this operation on the ground he could not do the work of a scaffolder without his index finger. The employers applied by way of review to terminate the weekly payments. The county ct. judge held that the workman's refusal was reasonable, because, having lost the first finger, it was useless to have the operation. He consequently refused to terminate the weekly payment. The employer appealed:—Held: whereas in the first proceedings the county ct. judge has correctly excluded from consideration the effect of the loss of the index finger, he had failed to do so in the second proceedings, & therefore the case must go back to him to consider whether the refusal to undergo the operation would be reasonable or not, if the workman had not lost his first finger. Appeal allowed.—MOWLEM (JOHN) & CO. v. MUDGE (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 450, C. A.

—]—A workman strained the muscles of his back in the course of his employment & received compensation for five months. He also suffered from septic teeth. Acting on their doctor's certificate his employers stopped compensation & the workman filed a request for arbn. The employers answered that, if the workman was still incapacitated, the incapacity was due to natural causes. The workman's doctor had advised him to have his teeth out, as their condition retarded his recovery, but he had refused to have this done, & at the hearing the county ct. judge was advised by the medical assessor that the condition of the teeth had perpetuated the injury. The county ct. judge found that the workman had acted unreasonably in not having his teeth removed, as by that means he would probably have fully recovered by the time that the employers had stopped compensation. He found "that appt. had failed to prove that his continued incapacity was due solely to the accident." He made an award of a penny a week, allowing the workman the costs of the arbn. The workman appealed from the award of a penny a week, & the employers cross-appealed on the question of costs:—Held: the county ct. judge was justified in awarding only a penny a week, because he found that he could not otherwise assess the quantum of incapacity due to the accident so long as the effect of the septic teeth remained, also the award as to costs could not be disturbed because he had found that there was some incapacity due to the accident.

PART XIV. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 7.—D.

2822 ii. —]—A repaiirer in a colliery sustained injury to his back arising out of & in the course of his employment. After a period of compensation for total incapacity he was certified by a medical referee fit for suitable light work. Work of that character having been provided by the employers, the workman worked at it for a few hours, left & did not return. Thereafter a second remit was made to the medical referee who certified the workman unfit for any work owing to the neurasthenia caused partly by the accident & partly by the refusal of the workman to co-operate by continuing to attempt light work. After the issue of that certificate the workman applied for an award of compensation for total incapacity. He averred & offered to prove that he had done everything reasonably practicable towards assisting his recovery, & that his failure to continue the light work was reasonable & due to no fault of his. The employers pleaded that the workman's petition for compensation for total incapacity was irrelevant, & should be dismissed, but offered 13s. per week as partial compensation. The arbitrator repelled the employer's plea, held that the workman was entitled only to partial compensation, & before further answer remitted the case back to the medical referee to state to what extent the incapacity was due to the accident. The workman appealed:—Held: the arbitrator was wrong in holding that on the medical certificate he was bound to find that the workman was only partially incapacitated by the accident, as the question of the reasonableness of the workman's failure to co-operate by continuing light work was a question of fact for him & not a medical question for the referee. The remit to the medical referee was therefore premature.—WILSON v. NIDDRIE & BENHAR COAL CO., LTD., [1934] S. C. 364; 27 B. W. C. C. Supp. 19.—SCOT.

2836c. —.]—A miner was certified in Jan. 1926, as suffering from miner's nystagmus. He had been a cheerful man before the onset of the disease, but gradually became depressed & ultimately showed signs of marked nervous & mental derangement. He walked unsteadily & failed to recognise his friends. On the evening of Oct. 12, 1928, he attended on the certifying surgeon & was afterwards put on a tram, his home being not far from the tram terminus. A friend found him at a spot about 400 yards from the tram terminus & about 400 yards from his home, crawling on his hands & knees. The friend led him to a fence which led to his house. His body was subsequently found in a canal 2½ miles from where his friend had left him. The widow claimed compensation on the grounds that her husband committed suicide, that he committed suicide while he was insane, & that the insanity was a direct effect of the nystagmus. The county ct. judge made an award in her favour, in which he said, "I do not say he was insane, but that the suicide was due to mental derangement." The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—DIXON v. SUTTON HEATH & LEA GREEN COLLIERY, LTD. (No. 2) (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 135, C. A.

On Feb. 21, 1931, he was found dead, having committed suicide by cutting his throat. His dependants made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge, who sat with a medical assessor, found that the depression was due to the nystagmus & that the suicide was due to the depression, but held that there was no evidence of insanity which would entitle him to attribute the suicide to the accident. He therefore made his award in favour of the employer. The dependants appealed:—Held: the evidence supported the findings, & there was no misdirection.—*BRADSHAW v. 2839a. —.]—Applt., on Nov. 29, 1923, met with an accident, which arose out of & in the course of his employment by resps., & thereby his right thigh was fractured & there was a shortening of his leg & stiffness of his right knee; his right arm had also subsequently to be amputated. He received compensation for total incapacity from resps., who accepted responsibility, up to Nov. 18, 1931, when he was convicted of a criminal offence & sentenced to twenty months' imprisonment, whereupon the weekly compensation was stopped. On June 28, 1933, on an application for a review of the weekly payments made by resps. the county ct. judge reduced the compensation to 10s.

a week as from Nov. 18, 1931. Resps., in their application, asked that there should be a diminution or termination of the weekly payments as from Nov. 18, 1931, on the ground that any incapacity to perform work & earn wages as from that date had not been the result of his injury but was due to causes unconnected therewith. The evidence of a doctor at the hearing was that applt. was capable of doing certain work such as stone dusting, & that he had been in that condition for many years. Applt. was released from prison in Apr. 1933:—Held: there being no evidence or finding that applt.'s recovery began at the time he was imprisoned, there was not sufficient justification for holding that the incapacity changed on Nov. 18, 1931; & the county ct. judge was not justified in finding that applt. was partially incapacitated. A workman did not become disentitled to compensation because, while incapacitated, he was imprisoned.—NORTH'S NAVIGATION CO. (1889), LTD. v. BATTEN (1933), 150 L. T. 186; 26 B. W. C. C. 525, C. A.

2849a. — Error in entry—Verbal notice correctly given.]—The workman, a miner, met with an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment with applt. He went into his employers' ambulance room & received treatment. An entry was made in the accident book describing his injury as an injury to the left knee. The injury was in fact to the right knee, & the workman subsequently developed tubercular trouble in his right knee. In answer to a claim for compensation, the employers relied on the entry in the accident book & said that they had had no notice of the injury to the right knee, in accordance with Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 14. The county ct. judge found on the evidence that the workman's right knee was in fact injured by the accident & that the entry in the accident book was an error. He also held that the entry in the accident book referred to the accident & that notice of the accident was given orally by the workman in the ambulance room, & that that notice complied with sect. 14 (2); that the incorrect entry was no bar to the claim for compensation, & that the employers were not prejudiced, & he made an award in favour of the workman:—Held: the employers were not prejudiced by the incorrect entry in the accident book, as notice of the accident had been properly given to them in compliance with sect. 14. Therefore the award of the county ct. judge must be affirmed.—CROUCH v. APPELBY IRON CO., LTD. (1930), 143 L. T. 264; 23 B. W. C. C. 69, C. A.

2849b. —.]—The workman was employed by resps. as an iron-moulder, & on Oct. 12, 1932, whilst so employed, hit his leg against a cast-iron moulding box. He made an exclamation & held his leg, & left his work for a short time, then finished his shift, & he worked the next two days complaining of pain in his leg & limping. The works were then closed down for nineteen days, during which his leg became septic, & he went into hospital. When the works opened again, notice of the accident was given, & entered in the accident book kept by resps., & the entry was witnessed by a fellow workman. The workman died as a result of the accident. The widow, as a dependant on the earnings of deceased workman, claimed compensation. The county ct. judge held that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment, the death being accelerated by the condition of the leg, but refused the claim on the ground that the notice of the accident was not given as soon as practicable. He also held that the register for the entry of accidents kept by the employers referred to in sect. 15 (2) (c) of 1925 Act was synonymous with the book in the prescribed form mentioned in sect. 15 (3) of the Act:—Held: (1) there was evidence upon which the county ct. judge could conclude that the notice of the accident was not given as soon as practicable, for the workman had not complied with the requirements of sect. 14 (1), or its proviso, or with sect. 15 (3) of the Act of 1925, & the workman could not rely on sect. 15 (2) (c), as that referred to a register, the purpose of which was for the employers themselves to make a note of any accident; (2) the register kept in the works of an employer for the entry by them of accidents mentioned in sect. 15 (2) (c), was not the same as the book in the prescribed form referred to in sect. 15 (3).—*THOMAS v BAGLAN ENGINEERING CO. 2849c. Contents.—All injuries need not be specified.]

—The mere fact that notice has to be given does not imply that all injuries must be specified.

A workman gave notice of an accident, in which he complained of injury to his ribs, & his employers paid him compensation. He returned to work after two months. He then began to suffer with his hip, & eventually had to cease work on that account. His employers resisted a second claim for compensation, on the ground that no injury to the hip was specified in the notice of the accident. The county ct. judge found that the injury to the hip was due to the original accident, that the employers had not been prejudiced by any failure to mention the hip in the notice of accident, as they had paid compensation to the workman after an examination by their own doctor:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.—*WILES v. 2855a. — — —.]—A miner, on July 1, 1932, bumped his head on a beam of timber causing a bruise & some bleeding. On his return home his head ached. The mine was shut until July 12, but the workman was unable to resume work. On July 18 he went to hospital & was found to be suffering from paralysis of the right side. On July 25 his son gave notice of the accident, & on July 30 the workman died. The county ct. judge on a claim by the widow for compensation found that death resulted from an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of the employment, & held that notice of the accident was given as soon as practicable within sect. 14 (1), & made his award for the widow. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—BROOKS v. WEST LEIGH COLLIERY CO., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 130, C. A.

2855b. — — —.]—A miner sustained an injury to his eye from a bit of coal on Wed. Mar. 9, 1932. A mate removed the bit of coal from his eye & he continued at work, the pain stopping in half an hour. On ceasing work he was unable to find a deputy to whom he could give notice of the accident & had no time to give notice at the ambulance station as he had to catch the last bus to his home. He worked on the Thurs. & Fri., & on Sun. pain began to develop in his eye. He saw his panel doctor & had to go to the infirmary on Mar. 17, where he remained for five weeks, undergoing three operations. On Mar. 18 he sent for a friend to ask him to give notice of his injury, but the friend could not come to see him until Mar. 20. Notice was given by his friend on Mar. 21. When he came out of the infirmary the workman was practically a one-eyed man. On an application for compensation the county ct. judge held that the workman had given notice of the accident as soon as practicable, & that in any case the employer was not prejudiced in his defence. He then went on to say that he was satisfied on the evidence & found as facts (a) that but for the accident the workman would still be employed at the mine; (b) that the workman was practically one-eyed; (c) that the disfigurement in the eye was so observable that it must prevent him from obtaining light work in the labour market, & made his award for the workman on the basis of total incapacity. No evidence was called as to what steps, if any, the workman had taken to obtain work in the mine or on the surface or elsewhere. The employer appealed:—Held: (1) there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could hold that notice had been given as soon as practicable; (2) there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could make finding (a) above, & therefore nothing to support an award of total incapacity under sect. 9 (4) (i.), as amended by the 1931 Act. Further, there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could make finding (c) above, & it was necessary for him to be satisfied by evidence that the workman had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment & he was not entitled to assume that no work would have been available if he had taken all such reasonable steps.

Per ROMER, L.J.: I do not doubt that for the purpose of estimating the value of evidence given before a county ct. judge & for the purpose of drawing inferences from the evidence brought before him a county ct. judge is entitled to use his local knowledge; but I emphatically dissent from the proposition that he is entitled to substitute that knowledge for evidence when evidence is available.—OWENS v. LLAY MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 573, C. A.

2855c. —.]—A bus driver strained himself cranking up the engine of his bus & felt strained & sick that day when driving. At the hearing of a claim by him for compensation he alleged that on the next day he telephoned to his employer's garage & told the manager that the doctor said he had strained his heart & that he would be away six weeks, & that he must have done it winding the bus the night before. The manager gave evidence that the workman told him on the telephone that he would not be able to work that day, that he had been to the doctor & had to go to bed & that he did not know what was the matter. Fourteen days later the workman's daughter wrote to the manager that her father had strained his heart winding the bus on Nov. 2. The county ct. judge held that the workman had given notice of the accident as soon as practicable. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence upon which the county ct. judge could come to the conclusion that notice was given as soon as practicable.—*BROCKWAY v. Notice of the accident was not given to the employers until a month after the workman's death. The county ct. judge found that notice of the accident had not been given as soon as practicable, & that the employers were prejudiced by the want of notice:—Held: it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding.—*EVANS v. —.]—A workman was injured by a fall of coal on his right knee in Feb. 1931, while working a compressed air drill. He reported the accident to his overman, whose duty it was to report to the fireman, who in his turn should have entered the accident in the accident book. It was not in fact so entered. The workman stated that he could no longer hold the drill with his knees & was in consequence put on light work at full wages. Except for a short absence he continued at work until June, 1932, when he had to give up work. His own doctor was of the opinion that he was suffering from traumatic arthritis, but he was later certified by a certifying surgeon as suffering from "beat knee," being an industrial disease within the Act. The medical referee allowed an appeal from this certificate & certified that the workman was suffering from arthritis. The workman received National Health benefit until Oct. 1933, when he claimed compensation on the ground that he was incapacitated by reason of the accident in Feb. 1931. The employer resisted the claim on the grounds that no notice had been given of the accident & that the claim was out of time. The county ct. judge held that the notice to the overman was sufficient notice to the employer, & that in his findings on fact there was reasonable cause for delay in making the claim. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—CARTLEDGE v. SHELTON IRON, STEEL & COAL CO., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 136, C. A.

2876a. —.]—A workman alleged that on Mar. 5, 1935, he was loading teak boards when his foot slipped & a board struck him in the abdomen. On Mar. 7 he complained of pain to his wife. On Mar. 8 he ceased work & went to bed. On Mar. 11 he was visited by his doctor. On Mar. 19 a swelling appeared in the neighbourhood of the spleen, & a second doctor was called in. An operation was performed on the swelling by a third doctor on Apr. 5, but a thorough examination was not made. On the same day notice of the accident was for the first time given to the employer. All three doctors thought the swelling to be a hæmatoma or collection of blood caused by the blow. The workman's condition having deteriorated, he was on Sept. 16 examined jointly by his own doctors & a doctor representing the employer. This was the first time that a doctor representing the employer had examined the workman. The employer's doctor took the view that the workman was dying of carcinoma of the descending colon, which had probably begun about six months previously & had eaten through the bowel wall & caused an abscess. He was also of opinion that the blow had not had any effect on the carcinoma or been the cause of the approaching death. Shortly afterwards the workman died, & a post mortem examination was carried out. This examination confirmed the employer's doctor's theory of the cause of death, but did not make it possible to prove whether the swelling had been caused by a hæmatoma due to the blow or by an abscess due to the cancer. After the post-mortem examination, the workman's doctors formed the view that the blow had accelerated the growth of the cancer. On a claim for compensation by the widow of the deceased workman, the employer's doctor said that he had been prejudiced by delay in examining the workman, & the county ct. judge, while accepting the view of the workman's doctors, found as a fact that the employer had been prejudiced in his defence by the want of notice of the accident, & made his award for the employer. The widow appealed:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the employer had been prejudiced in his defence by the want of notice & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—BLACKWELL v. ASHBE & SONS, LTD. (1936), 29 B. W. C. 153, C. A.

2876b. —.—.]—On Nov. 20, 1936, a milk salesman while handling wire crates sustained bruises on two fingers & an abrasion on one finger of the left hand. His wife washed the wound, treated it with iodine & kept it covered up. He continued at work although in pain. On Nov. 27, he suffered a considerable increase of pain & was heard groaning in the night. His doctor was then called in & advised hot fomentations. On Dec. 8, he complained of a red, inflamed lump in his left armpit, & his wife applied hot fomentations to the lump. He still remained at work until Dec. 10, when he collapsed & was taken to hospital. On Dec. 20 he died of septicæmia resulting from the accident. Notice of the accident was first given to his employer on Dec. 22. His widow claimed compensation. At the arbn. the employer called no evidence. The county ct. judge found that the accident was not a trivial one & that it was practicable to have given notice on the day of the accident. He held on the facts that there was no reasonable cause for want of notice of the accident after Nov. 27, & refused to hold that the employer had not been prejudiced in his defence. The widow appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge was right in law in refusing to draw the inference from the evidence before him that the employer had not been prejudiced.—*HOLBOROUGH v. employment of resps., but with assistance worked till the end of the shift. He went home & lay on a sofa, which he was unable to leave until he was removed to hospital on Dec. 9, 1929. He remained in hospital until May, 1930, where he was operated on nine times & became totally incapacitated. On July 31, 1930, he filed a request for arbn. proceedings claiming compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925. The stepfather & mother of applt. said that whilst he lay on the sofa he was not in complete possession of his mental faculties, but the panel doctor gave evidence that his mentality was not affected until the third or fourth day & his temperature was normal. The question was raised whether before the accident the applt. suffered from osteo-myelitis or whether the osteo-myelitis had developed after the injury at the seat of the injury. No notice of the injury was given to the resps. until Mar. 1930:—Held: (1) the only conclusion on the evidence was that resps. were prejudiced in their defence by the delay in giving notice of the injury, as they were deprived of the opportunity of obtaining medical evidence as to applt.'s condition during the first three days of his illness upon the issue whether there had been pre-accident osteo-myelitis, & it was irrelevant to consider whether the employers would have been likely to take advantage of the opportunity or not; (2) the failure to give notice earlier was not occasioned by reasonable cause. Applt., therefore, having failed to give notice of the accident as soon as practicable after the happening thereof within sect. 14 (1) of the Act, was not excused from such failure on either of those two grounds, within the meaning of clause (a) of the proviso to that sub-section.—*WHITE v. 2912a. & failure to hear counsel.]—An agreement made between an injured workman & employers was embodied in an award given by a county ct. judge in 1929. By this agreement the employers agreed to pay a certain sum weekly to the workman on the basis of partial incapacity. In 1930 the employers applied for a review of the weekly payments before another county ct. judge, who sat with a medical assessor. At this hearing the judge at an early stage in the case expressed the view that the material question for him to decide was the present condition of the workman, & that he was not concerned with the condition in 1929. Counsel for the workman took no objection to this expression of opinion, & did not attempt to tender evidence as to the workman's previous condition. The judge then suggested that the workman should be examined by the medical assessor, which was done, neither counsel offering any objection. On receiving the report of the assessor the judge immediately proceeded to make an award ending the compensation on the ground that the workman had entirely recovered, without first calling on counsel to address him. No objection was taken by counsel for the workman, nor did he ask for an opportunity to address the ct. The workman appealed on the grounds (a) that the judge had refused to hear evidence as to the workman's condition in 1929, & (b) that he had given no opportunity for counsel to address him on behalf of the workman before making his award:—Held: counsel for the workman, having by his silence allowed the judge to think that he acquiesced in the manner in which the trial was being conducted, could not now raise objections which could, & should, have been raised in the ct. below.—*NAVY, ARMY & AIR FORCE INSTITUTES v. 2930a. — Unreasonable conclusion as to condition.—A warehouseman, whilst superintending the loading of lorries in Feb. 1932, was struck on his back by a lorry. After five minutes he continued his work. He went home feeling sick, but on the next day was able to do his work & continued to do it without interruption until Sept. He felt slight pain in his back until Mar., when it got worse, but even then was only intermittent. In July he was definitely worse & could only get up from a lying position with difficulty, but was still able to do his work & earn full wages. In Sept. a swelling appeared on his back, & on Sept. 16 he first gave notice of the injury. He went to the infirmary where an abscess which had given rise to the swelling was opened. Subsequently tuberculosis supervened & he became totally incapacitated. In his evidence on the hearing of a claim for compensation the workman said that in July he thought the matter "serious & mysterious," but at that time still thought that the trouble would wear off in time. He admitted that his wife had urged him to be examined by a doctor as early as May. The county ct. judge found that it was practicable for the workman to have given notice in Mar., or certainly in May, but that the employer was not prejudiced in his defence by his failure to give notice then. He further found that there was reasonable cause for the failure to make a claim within six months, & that the workman was honest in his belief that the accident would not interfere with his work. He made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: the workman's attention was so drawn to his serious condition, which he knew to result from his accident, that there was no reasonable cause for not making a claim within six months.

It is not "reasonable cause" within the sect. if a man honestly arrives at a conclusion about his own physical condition at which no sensible man could arrive.—PHILLIPS v. SIDEBOTTOM & CO., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 382, C. A.

2939a. — ]—A professional football player was, on Mar. 16, 1935, playing for his club in a match, when, according to his account, he was kicked on the neck. He stated that he did not attach very much importance to it at the time, although he showed the place to others that evening. On Mar. 25 he played again but did not feel well and suffered occasional pain until on Apr. 26, 1935, he collapsed. His doctor was called in on Apr. 29. On May 4 he was sent to hospital suffering considerable pain. An X-ray taken in hospital at the end of May disclosed that the vertebræ of the neck were injured. Notice of the accident was given to his employer on June 1, 1935, & a claim for compensation was made on Aug. 6, 1935. Proceedings were instituted on May 4, 1937:—Held: there was no reasonable cause for failure to give notice of the accident between Apr. 26 & June 1. Appeal dismissed.—*HODGE v. 2941a. — ]—In Jan. 1925, a miner was struck in his right eye by a piece of coal. He never went off work, but from the first suffered pain in the eye which increased. A year after the accident a white patch appeared on the eye. In Apr. 1928, he was run over by an omnibus & prevented by that accident from working. He then began to go blind in the right eye. In Sept. 1928, he first gave notice to his employers of the accident to his eye in 1925, & subsequently claimed compensation. At the hearing medical evidence was given to the effect that the condition of the eye was consistent with the blow it received in 1925. The county ct. judge said in his award, that he was satisfied that the blindness was caused by the blow received in 1925, but that the workman never thought that the injury was in any way serious. He therefore held that, in those circumstances, there was reasonable cause for giving no notice of the accident until Sept. 1928. The employers appealed:—Held: there was misdirection; on the evidence the injury was serious to the man's knowledge from the first, & the workman had shown no reasonable cause for failing to give notice of the accident at the time it occurred.—SHARROD v. WARWICKSHIRE COAL CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 599, C. A.

2948a. —.]—A quarryman, while lifting a granite block on Nov. 13, 1930, cracked one of his fingers which bled. He did not visit his employer's doctor who was stationed at the quarry to attend to injuries, but tied up the finger & continued at work. He worked on Nov. 14 although in pain. On Nov. 15, a Saturday, he stayed at home & put a poultice on it. On Monday, Nov. 17, the finger was so swollen that he sent for his panel doctor who diagnosed septic poisoning & treated him accordingly. It was not disputed that the treatment prescribed by the panel doctor from Nov. 17 onwards was correct. The doctor asked the workman on Nov. 17 whether he had reported the accident & the workman replied that he had not. Notice of the accident did not reach the employer until Dec. 1 through the workman's friendly society. The employer contended that notice of the accident had not been given in accordance with the requirements of the Act, but the county ct. judge found as facts that Nov. 17 was the first practicable date on which notice could have been given as that was the first date on which the workman knew his finger was septic & did not until then realise he had received an injury for which he would be entitled to claim compensation. He further found that the employer was not prejudiced by want of notice after that date. He accordingly made his award in favour of the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—EVANS v. PEN-MARN-MAWR & WELSH GRANITE CO., LTD. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 443, C. A.

2948b. —.]—A wood machinist slipped in the course of his employment & hurt his knee. He felt some pain & that was all. He gave no notice of the accident as he did not consider it serious & continued at work. During the next three weeks the knee became increasingly painful & began to swell. He consulted his panel doctor, who advised him to go to hospital for X-ray examination. He then gave notice of the accident. The examination at the hospital revealed a sarcoma on the site of the injury & the leg had to be amputated. On a claim for compensation the employers pleaded that they had been prejudiced in their defence by the want of notice. The county ct. judge held that notice of the accident had not been given as soon as practicable, but that the fact that the workman thought the accident a trivial one was reasonable cause for the delay & the employers had not been prejudiced in their defence. The employers appealed:—Held: the employers had been prejudiced in their defence, but on the facts the county ct. judge was right in holding that there was reasonable cause for the delay in giving notice. Appeal dismissed. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords refused.—INCE v. PULLING & WOLSEY, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 151, C. A.

2948c. —.]—A miner whilst sweeping up the floor of the colliery on Friday, Jan. 11, 1935, & picking up small pieces of sharp shale said to his mate, "I have cut my hand." He continued working that day. On Sat. the colliery was closed. He worked again on Mon. & Tues. but on Wed., Jan. 16, his thumb was swollen & painful & he was unable to go to work. A doctor was sent for on the 17th & again on the 19th & 20th, when he made incisions. On Thurs., Jan. 24, he was removed to hospital with a septic thumb & whitlow & the infection spreading, he died on Jan. 27. Notice of the accident was not given until Feb. 19. The widow claimed compensation for herself & infant children. The county ct. judge found as facts that notice might have been given on Jan. 16, but that before that date the workman thought that the injury was trivial; & that the employer was not prejudiced in his defence by the delay in giving notice within sect. 14 (1) (a) & made his award for the widow:—Held: the questions were ones of fact upon which there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—LOMAS v. PARK HALL COLLIERY CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 313, C. A.

2948d. —.]—An electrician was employed in the foundations of a building in a cutting, the roof of which was so low that he had often to lie on his back with his head resting on the floor. Men who worked there had to discard their caps because of the heat due to central heating pipes. The place was dark, dusty, & dirty. When he returned home on Nov. 23, 1934, the electrician showed his wife, applt., a sore place on the back of his head, which neither regarded as serious, & he continued to work as usual. On Nov. 26 he felt so ill that his wife tried to dissuade him from going to work. He went to work but came home early & complained of pains in the chest & in the head, & in the evening his condition was serious. On the following day he remained in bed, & his doctor found that he had bronchitis in both lungs but did not connect it with the septic wound on his head. He was admitted to hospital on Dec. 7 suffering from septic meningitis & septic pneumonia, & on Dec. 10 he died from septic meningitis. The doctor who conducted the post-mortem examination attributed the septic condition to the small wound on the back of the head as the place of entry of the poison. On Dec. 7 applt. notified the employers, resps., verbally that the illness was due to the workman having hurt his head in the cutting, but there was no evidence adduced as to such cause of the illness. Written notice was given to the employers on Jan. 22, 1935. An award of compensation was made to applt. on the ground that the balance of probability was that the small wound on the head was caused at work, & that the want of notice of the accident was occasioned by mistake or other reasonable cause:—Held: (1) there was evidence upon which the county ct. judge could reasonably infer that the small wound on the back of the head was caused by an injury arising out of & in the course of the employment; (2) notice of the accident was given as soon as practicable, & the failure to give earlier notice was therefore due to a reasonable cause. The fact, therefore, that the employers may have been prejudiced by want of notice is immaterial.—ELLISON v. CALVERT & HEALD, [1936] 3 All E. R. 467; 106 L. J. K. B. 74; 155 L. T. 547; 80 Sol. The wound got worse, & after two or three weeks a doctor was called in. The doctor at first thought it was a carbuncle, & treated him for that. The workman got steadily worse & died of septicaemia within six weeks of the accident. The widow made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that death was due to a burn, & held that the employers had been prejudiced by the want of notice, & that there was no reasonable cause for failure to give notice. He therefore made his award for the employer. The widow appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—OWEN v. JOHN BAKER & BESSEMER, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. 2951c. ———.—A timber discharger was on Sat., Nov. 7, 1931, hit on the head by a swinging baulk of timber whilst engaged in unloading in the hold of a ship. He was, according to the evidence, "knocked out" for ten minutes. A ladder was then lowered & he climbed on to the deck, where it was said he rested for half to three-quarters of an hour before resuming his work. One of his employers was in charge of the unloading, but the accident was not brought to his notice. The workman finished his work for the employers on that day, but complained of pain at home & was unwell on the Sun. On the Mon. he applied for work at the labour exchange & worked on & off for various employers until Jan. 27, 1932, when, whilst working for other employers, he collapsed & died. No notice was given of the accident until Feb. 20, though he had continually complained of pain in his head. The widow filed a request for arbn. on behalf of herself & six children on July 19, 1932. At the hearing the medical evidence was to the effect that the deceased workman had an aneurism in his brain which ultimately killed him, but that the blow on the head accelerated the death. There was also medical evidence to the effect that a more valuable opinion could have been given if the workman had been examined at the time of the accident. The county ct. judge found that notice of the accident was not given as soon as practicable, & that the employers were thereby prejudiced in their defence. He further held that there was no reasonable cause for the delay in giving notice, & that the want of notice was therefore a bar to proceedings on the part of the widow. He accordingly made his award for the employers. The widow appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—BEDFORD v. BELL & WINNEY, LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. h i. — Refusal of X-ray examination.—An injured workman, who had been receiving weekly payments for over six months, was examined by his employers' surgeon on Oct. 4, 1934. The surgeon made a clinical examination, but reported to the employers that, without a radiographic examination, he could not form a definite opinion on certain aspects of the workman's condition, & as he was not himself a radiologist, he asked for authority to incur the expense of such an examination. Having obtained this authority, he requested the workman to attend on Oct. 18 to be X-rayed. The workman, founding on the Regulations of 1907, refused to attend until the expiry of two months from Oct. 4. The employers having thereupon stopped the weekly payments as from Oct. 18, the workman brought arbn. proceedings to obtain the continuance of the payments:—Held: in the circumstances, the radiographic examination was a necessary part of the surgeon's examination to

—[An injured workman was treated in hospital by a consultant of the hospital. She returned to work, but ceased work again owing to the injury. She was then requested by her employers to submit to an examination by the same consultant acting as their medical adviser. She refused, on the ground that he would be a necessary witness on her behalf in any arbn. proceedings. The employers applied for suspension of weekly payments until the examination had taken place. The county ct. judge granted the application, on the ground that the reason given for the refusal was itself unreasonable:—Held: to find that the refusal was unreasonable merely because the workman objected to being examined, at the instance of the employer, by a consultant at the hospital at which she had been treated, was not sufficient. The matter must be further inquired into to ascertain (1) whether this consultant was the only medical adviser available to the workman, & (2) whether the woman's case, if it went to arbn., would be imperilled by reference to this particular consultant.—*TELEPHONE MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. She was then requested by her employers under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 18, to submit to an examination by the same consultant acting as their medical adviser. She refused on the ground that he would be a necessary witness on her behalf in any arbn. proceedings. On an appln. by the employers under sect. 18 to suspend the weekly payments, the county ct. judge held that her refusal was unreasonable & granted the appln. On appeal the case was remitted for further inquiry to ascertain (a) whether this consultant was the exclusive adviser of the workman, (b) whether the workman's case, if it went to arbn., would be imperilled in any way by reference to this particular consultant, & (c) whether the employers' request that the workman should be examined by this consultant was reasonable. The county ct. judge found in favour of the employers on all points. The workman appealed:—Held: on the evidence the workman was reasonable in refusing to submit to examination by this consultant at the instance of the employer, & the county ct. judge's findings could not be supported.—*TELEPHONE MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. 2970b. Application for reference to medical referee—When justified.]—A miner lost the sight of one eye as the result of an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He recovered sufficiently to be fit for work on the surface, but was unable to obtain such work. He was paid compensation for partial incapacity, & the matter came from time to time before a joint committee of representatives of employers & workmen in the pit. The workman ultimately applied to the joint committee to be treated as totally incapacitated under sect. 9 (4) as amended. The joint committee referred the matter to arbn. in the county ct. In the meantime the employers served a notice on the workman under sect. 12, ending the compensation on a report of their doctor that he was fit for work underground. The workman served a counter certificate of his own doctor, who reported that the workman was only fit for surface work on account of being one-eyed. The employers applied under sect. 19 (2) to the registrar for the matter to be sent to a medical referee, but he refused on the ground that there was no real medical dispute. The workman filed an application for arbn. to which the employers filed an answer. The employers then appealed to the county ct. judge from the registrar's decision. The county ct. judge held that the matter was of sufficient difficulty to justify refusing to send the matter to the medical referee. The employers appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: there was no exceptional difficulty within sect. 19 (2) to justify a refusal of the reference.—*KILBANE v. —[A workman injured his left knee by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, as a result of which he was unable to work standing. He was, therefore, fitted with a mechanical knee-cap & attempted light work. Two days after starting light work he slipped & injured his knee a second time. He received compensation for total incapacity for about three years, when the compensation was reduced after notice given under sect. 12. On an application by the workman for arbn. the employer applied to the registrar of the county ct. to refer the matter to a medical referee. The registrar refused the application & the employer appealed to the county ct. judge, who dismissed the appeal on the grounds enable him to return a true report; accordingly, it could not be said that the workman, in being requested to attend to be X-rayed, was being requested to submit himself to a fresh examination; & therefore, so long as he refused to submit himself to be X-rayed, his right to compensation fell to be suspended. Appeal dismissed.—MALONE v. CURRIE & Co. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. Suppt. 183.—SCOT.

sd. Extent of reference.]—Employers, who had been paying compensation to a workman in respect of an injury through accident, applied for a reference to a medical referee under 1925 Act, s. 19, averring in their application that that workman had become fit for light work of a general character "as far as the accident is concerned." In the remit made by the sheriff-clerk, the medical referee was asked to certify as to the condition of the workman that there were sufficient reasons for not referring the matter to a medical referee, namely, that the circumstances of the second accident could be properly investigated only in an arbn. The employer appealed:—Held: the matter was one of discretion, & in this case the county ct. judge had exercised his discretion judicially. The words "any other sufficient reason" are not to be construed as being necessarily of the same nature as "exceptional difficulty."—WHITE v. CARLTON MAIN COLLIERY CO., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. 2970d. — Minute must indicate extent of reference.]—If it is desired by the parties, or one of them, where a joint minute is lodged by them in a workman's compensation claim craving the ct. under sect. 19 of 1925 Act, to order a reference to a medical referee, that both the condition of the workman & the attribution of that condition to the accident should be investigated & finally determined by the medical referee then it must be made clear in the joint minute that the parties are in disagreement on both questions, & that it is desired that both questions be referred & decided. If the minute be ambiguous it should be clarified by amendment before the reference is made.—ARCHIBALD RUSSELL, LTD. v. MCNEILLY (1934), 50 T. L. R. 471; 27 B. W. C. C. 362, H. L.

& his fitness for work, & also as to whether or to what extent his incapacity was due to the accident:—Held: the words "as far as the accident is concerned" in the application warranted the sheriff-clerk in including in the remit the question whether the workman's remaining incapacity was due to the accident.—MERCHAN v. BAIRD (WILLIAM) & Co., [1932] S. C. 468; 25 B. W. C. C. Suppt. 1.—SCOT.

2970e. — —.]—A workman sustained injury to his back on Oct. 27, 1932, in an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment & thereafter, by agreement, he was paid compensation as for total incapacity. In Jan. 1936 the employers were advised that the workman had wholly recovered from the injury & had become fit for his ordinary work. This was disputed by the workman, & the employers applied for a reference to a medical referee, which was allowed by the sheriff clerk depute. The latter prepared an order of reference, on the prescribed form, from which he deleted the question as to whether, or to what extent, the incapacity was due to the accident. The medical referee found that the workman had wholly recovered from his injury by accident, but was quite unfit for his ordinary work or for any work except the lightest. An arbitrator remitted the matter back to the referee, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the existing unfitness was attributable to the accident. Without further examination, the referee reported that the said unfitness was not attributable to the accident, whereupon the arbitrator terminated the payment of compensation. On appeal by case stated, the first division of the Ct. of Session held that the arbitrator was not entitled to hold that the claimant had wholly recovered from his injury by accident & to end his right to compensation, & was bound to refuse to end compensation, & that the omission to include, in the reference to the medical referee, the question as to whether, or to what extent, the incapacity of the claimant was due to the accident confined the duties of the medical referee to considering the condition of the workman, & his fitness for employment, & excluded any report by him as to whether the incapacity was attributable to the accident. Thereupon this appeal was brought. The same question was raised in both appeals:—Held: as the prescribed form of the reference included the question whether the workman had wholly or partially recovered from the injury by accident, & as, in the application for a reference, the question of the workman's recovery was expressly stated to be in dispute, the arbitrator was justified, on the referee's certificate of complete recovery, in terminating the payment of compensation.—*ADDIE (ROBERT) & SONS COLLIERIES, LTD. v. On Dec. 14, 1931, her employers' insurers wrote to her solr. offering to pay compensation under the Act, & the solr. acknowledged the letter & stated that until their inquiries were completed they did not propose to take compensation under the Act. Matters were left in that condition until on June 17 the workman raised a common law action in the Sheriff Ct. of Lanarkshire against her employers for damages. The action was dismissed as irrelevant. The pursuer having appealed to the Second Division of the Ct. of Session, the ct. adhered to the Sheriff-Substitute's view that the pursuer has failed to state a relevant case, but in hoc statu recalled the dismissal of the action in order to enable the pursuer, if so advised, to lodge a claim in the action for workmen's compensation in terms of sect. 29 (2) of the 1925 Act. Pursuer having lodged a minute claiming compensation, defenders lodged answers in which they averred that no claim for compensation had ever been made by or on behalf of the pursuer, & that her common law action had not been raised within the six months laid down by sects. 14 (1) & 29 (2) as the limit of time for raising proceedings independent of the Act in which, on the failure of the proceedings themselves, compensation under the Act could be assessed. After argument on the minute & answers:—Held: (1) an offer of compensation made to but not accepted by the workman did not constitute a claim under the Act, & (2) the workman had shown no reasonable cause for her failure to make a claim in time. On being asked at the hearing why the claim had not been made before she said "I left all that to my husband; we were paid good wages & did not think we could make a claim," & her husband said "I did not make a claim because I could not get another place as good as that." The county ct. judge held that there had not been shown any reasonable cause why the claim had not been made within six months of the date of the accident. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had come to a right decision on the evidence & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—TAYLOR v. WOOD (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 287, C. A.

(2) In Apr. 1924, resp., while working as a drawer in applts.' employment, injured the muscles of his back. He immediately reported his injury to the proper officer, who, thinking the injury trivial, did not report it to headquarters. Resp. continued his work as a drawer at full wages, with the exception of a fortnight in Sept. 1927, for nearly four years, when he became totally incapacitated, & he had since been fit for light work only. His injury took the form of muscular rheumatism in the back & attendant sciatica. In Oct. 1928, he made a claim for compensation, & until that date applts. had no knowledge that he intended to make any claim against them. Throughout the whole period he suffered considerable pain, which he associated with the injury. He did not intend to claim compensation so long as he was able to earn full wages in applts.' employment. The arbitrator found in law that resp.'s failure to claim compensation timeously was without reasonable cause & refused compensation:—Held: resp. had proved that his failure to make a claim within the statutory period was occasioned by mistake or other reasonable cause.—*SHOTTS IRON CO., LTD. v. He first made a claim in Dec. 1931, & in Mar. 1932, filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge found that his claim was not made within six months of the alleged accident, & held that his failure to make a claim within the required time was not occasioned by absence from the United Kingdom or other reasonable cause, & that the period of six months began to run from the date of the accident & not from the date of the workman's return to the United Kingdom. On the following day he was found to have a hernia. He made a claim for compensation on Aug. 3, 1927, giving the date of the accident as Jan. 5, 1926. The employers contended that no claim had been made within six months of the alleged accident. The county ct. judge held that there was reasonable cause for failing to make a claim within six months, because the workman believed that the pain was temporary, & that he would soon recover. The employers appealed:—Held: there was misdirection, & the workman had shown no reasonable cause for failing to make a claim within six months.—BROWN v. AVELING & PORTER, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. 3025b. —.]—A workman, on Jan. 6, 1927, trod on a piece of pipe, causing him to fall on his right arm. He made no claim until Aug. 1929. At the hearing he said: "I felt sick, but could not find the first-aid man. Fourteen days after I went to a doctor. I carried on with my work; it was difficult & painful. . . . At the time I realised there was an accident. I thought a good deal of the injury, but I thought it would work off. I made no claim because I thought it would work off & there would be no necessity to make a claim. That was why I made no claim. I was able to earn my money." He continued working until Nov. 1928, when he went off work on account of bursitis until Apr. 1929. After Apr. he worked for two months, & then, owing to slackness of trade, was discharged. In Nov. 1929, a medical man reported that from Nov. 1928, to Apr. 1929, his incapacity was due to the bursitis, & in all probability the bursitis dated from the fall in Jan. 1927. The county ct. judge decided that on those facts he was bound to hold that the workman had shown no reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months of Jan. 6, 1927:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—*HALSEY v. 3025c. —.]—On Feb. 20, 1931, the left eye of a workman was injured by a chipping from a flagstone. He gave notice to his employer of the accident on Feb. 23, but neither he nor his employer considered the injury serious as he had frequently got chips in his eye without serious results. Though the eye gave trouble he was able to continue his work until May when he was discharged owing to slackness of work. He had been advised to go to an eye hospital in Apr., but he alleged that it was not until Aug. 20, 1931, that he realised that the condition of his eye was serious. He made a claim for compensation on Aug. 29. The employer denied liability on the ground that the claim had not been made within six months. At the arbn. the workman in cross-examination said, "At the end of June I knew the sight had gone." The county ct. judge stated that the workman was entirely honest in giving his evidence, although it contained flagrant inconsistencies, & he was convinced that the man did not realise his condition was serious until Aug. 20, 1931. He therefore found that there was reasonable cause for failure to make the claim within six months as throughout that period the injury had honestly been treated as a trivial one. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—TEMPLETON v. COUPE (E. & J.) & SONS, LTD. (1932), 146 L. T. 518; 25 B. W. C. C. 56, C. A.

medical treatment, he continued at his usual occupation, earning full wages, until Mar. 1928, when he left his employment to undergo treatment for trouble arising from the injury. In Oct. 1928, while still incapacitated, he made a claim for compensation. In addition to the above facts it was established that the workman was suffering from muscular rheumatism & sciatica, & that these troubles arose from the injury in Apr. 1924; that ever since the date of the accident the workman had associated his trouble with the accident; but that he had not intended to claim compensation so long as he was able to earn full wages. It was also established that, immediately after the accident, the workman had notified the fireman of the injury, but that the latter, considering the injury trivial, had not reported it to his superiors, & that prior to Oct. 1928, the employers had no knowledge, either actual or imputed, of any intended claim:—Held:

although the workman was throughout aware of his injury, the fact that he was able to earn full wages in his ordinary employment for four years after the accident showed that he was not unreasonable in assuming that the injury was not such as would cause him to become incapacitated; & accordingly, that his delay in claiming compensation was due to a "reasonable cause."—*FORDYCE v. sect. 14 was occasioned by reasonable cause within proviso (b) to sect. 14:—Held: (1) there was evidence upon which the county ct. judge could find that the incapacity was caused by the accident; (2) there was reasonable cause for not making a claim within six months of the accident as during that period the workman both honestly & reasonably believed that the pain which he suffered was owing to rheumatism & was not due to the accident, & it was therefore not necessary to consider whether any further delay in making the claim was excusable on similar grounds.—*BALDWIN v. The workman said he suffered inconvenience from, but was never incapacitated by, the blow. Every week after receiving it he visited his doctor, who treated him for what he & the workman believed to be a strained cartilage due to the accident. He was, with other men, stood off work in Aug. 1935, but returned in Nov. 1935, & continued at his work until Feb. 4, 1936, when he became ill & it was discovered that he was suffering from a tubercular knee-joint. On Feb. 7, 1936, he made a claim for compensation in respect of the accident of July 25, 1935. The county ct. judge found that his tubercular condition was due to the accident & after finding the other facts as set out above held that the failure to make a claim within six months was occasioned by reasonable cause. After consulting his own doctor & after having been seen by his employers' doctor, he continued at his work as a signalman under the impression that the matter was trivial, but wearing a truss. At the end of 1934 he began to realise that the matter was not trivial. In 1936 he was offered work as a crossing keeper, but refused it on grounds unconnected with his injury. His employers then reduced his wages to a lower grade on the ground that he was unable to perform signal-box duty "in consequence of a physical disability." The workman filed a request for arbn. in which he claimed half the difference between the two sets of wages. He had given notice of the accident at the proper time, but had never made a claim. The employers contended that there was no reasonable cause for the failure to make a claim within six months of the accident. The county ct. judge held on these facts that there was reasonable cause for the failure to make a claim within the statutory period. The employers appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had drawn the proper inference of law from the facts. Appeal dismissed.—STENNING v. SOUTHERN RY. Co. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 430, C. A.

being disabled for three days, he returned to work at full wages, receiving help with the heaviest part of his duties, & suffering severe pain which diminished but did not entirely disappear. He continued at work, with bouts of pain for ten months, when the pain increased & he was absent from work for ten days. He still continued at work, with occasional absences due to pain, until it was discovered that he was suffering from progressive osteo-arthritis in the injured elbow, which was likely to cause incapacity in the future. The workman claimed compensation in respect of the period of ten days' absence, & a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge held that the osteo-arthritis had been latent during the six months following the accident, & that the workman had therefore reasonable cause for not making a claim within that period & that he was not concerned with any subsequent delay. He therefore made his award for the workman granting the relief claimed. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—*SIMS v. 3031a. —.]—On Apr. 16, 1926, a workman fell & injured his knee. He was paid full wages, although incapacitated, until Sept. 3, when he was summarily dismissed from employment for misconduct. In the hope of being reinstated, he threatened to bring an action for wrongful dismissal, but made no claim under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), until two days after the statutory six months had expired. The county ct. judge found that the workman never intended to claim within the necessary period of six months, & there was no reasonable cause for the delay, & he refused to award compensation:—Held: the evidence supported the findings, & there was no misdirection.

When the workman knows that the injury he suffers from was occasioned by an accident giving him a right to compensation, & fails to make a claim within six months, if that failure was prompted by his own interests, & was not induced by any action of the employer which would lead him to believe he could get compensation without making a claim, he shows no reasonable cause (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—*DREWITT v. 3033b. Expectation of compensation without necessity of making claim.]—In Apr. 1925, a chef severed the ligaments of his right hand in handling a dish which broke, but he continued his work at his full wages. His employers knew of the accident, but were not aware the chef could not do his full work. In July, 1926, he was dismissed, & in that month made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman did not refrain from making a claim because he formed the view that he would receive compensation should incapacity supervene in the future without the necessity of making a claim, & that the employers did nothing to encourage such a view, & there was no reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months of the accident:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.

There would be reasonable cause for not making a claim within six months, if the workman could prove that there was a tacit understanding that the employers knew all about the possibility of a claim & were prepared to give him compensation, even though his claim might fall outside the six months (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—*SOYER v. 3033c. Belief that injury trivial.]—An engine planer on July 16, 1930, sustained an injury to his eyes, & was unconscious for an hour & a half. His panel doctor treated the injury as trivial, gave him a lotion, & sent him back to work. No ophthalmic expert was called in. He remained at work until Oct. 1930, when he was discharged in consequence of slackness of trade. On Feb. 15, 1931, he was examined by another doctor, who took a serious view of the case. The workman made a claim for compensation on Feb. 16, 1931. An application for arbn. was filed in Mar. 1932. The county ct. judge on those facts held that the failure to make a claim within six months was occasioned by mistake, the workman having been entitled from the time of the accident until he saw the second doctor to consider the injury a trivial one. He therefore made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge was entitled to hold that there was reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months & there was no misdirection.—*FLINDERS v. 3034a. —.]—The husband of pltf. had been killed in an accident due to the condition of the floor of a power station. The case in support of an action for damages was so strong that it was not then thought advisable to make a claim under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), which there was little likelihood of ever being prosecuted. In the course of the action for damages, great difficulty was encountered in ascertaining who, among a number of contractors & sub-contractors, was responsible for the condition of the floor which was the cause of the accident. At the trial, it was decided that the wrong parties had been sued, & it was then too late to bring an action under the Fatal Accidents Act against the right party. Upon the action being dismissed, application was made for an assessment of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84). It was contended that the absence of the claim under the Act was due to mistake within the meaning of sect. 14 of that Act:—Held: the making of a claim is not a mere formality. The requirements of the Act in that respect must be fulfilled, in the interests of both parties. Upon the facts, the widow deliberately refrained from making a claim under the Act because she deemed it in her interest to take other proceedings. The application for compensation was, therefore, refused.—HARRIS v. HOWDEN (JAMES) & CO. (LAND), LTD., [1938] 4 All E. R. 167; sub nom. HARRIS v. DORMAN, LONG & CO., LTD., 159 L. T. 568.

3038b. Omission of date of disablement in medical certificate.]—A miner suffered from nystagmus in 1914 & again in 1919, but after each attack resumed his work underground. He again had to cease work owing to the same disease on Dec. 28, 1930. The employer & his insurers both knew by Feb. 5, 1931, that a claim was being contemplated by the workman for compensation as from this date. On Feb. 6 the workman obtained a certificate from a certifying surgeon, but it did not give any date for the commencement of the disablement. The workman filed an application for arbn. based on this certificate, but claiming compensation as from Dec. 28, 1930, for a recurrence of the attack in 1919, but when the arbn. came on in Apr. these proceedings were abandoned. The workman then obtained a fresh certificate in Aug. 1931, which gave the commencement of the disablement as Dec. 28, 1930. From this the employers appealed to the medical referee, who gave a certificate in accordance with that of the certifying surgeon, but stating that the workman was fit for surface work. Proceedings on the basis of these certificates were commenced on Oct. 19, 1931. At the arbn. the employers contended that the claim was out of time as it had not been made within six months from Dec. 28, 1930, & there was no reasonable cause for the delay. The county ct. judge made his award in favour of the workman, & ordered that the partial incapacity should be treated as total under the 1931 Act. The employers appealed:—Held: (1) on the evidence the workman had always intended to claim as from Dec. 28, 1930, to the knowledge of all parties. In view of this & that the certifying surgeon had omitted to fill in the date of disablement in the Feb. certificate, there was reasonable cause for the delay in making the claim; (2) though the medical referee had certified only partial incapacity, the judge was at liberty on the evidence to make his award on the basis of total incapacity under sect. 9 (4) as amended by 1931 Act. Appeal dismissed.—WILLIAMS v. NEW BRITISH RHONDDA COLLIERY CO., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 75, C. A.

3038c. Absence of medical information as to nature of disease.—E., a married woman, at one time an employee of resps., was certified on June 4, 1937, to be suffering from a disease scheduled under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 43, & known as dermatitis, produced by dust or liquids. The certifying surgeon certified that disablement commenced on Sept. 11, 1936, & that she was thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which she had been employed. The certificate was thus dated more than six months after the date on which disablement was certified to have commenced. E. had been in the employ of resps. for many years before Sept. 11, 1936, when she left their service, & had been under treatment for irritation of the skin on her fingers for some time prior to that date. A claim for compensation must under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 14 (1), be made within six months from the occurrence of the accident.

E. having claimed compensation in the county ct., it was held by the county ct. judge that she had not discharged the onus incumbent upon her to show that there was a "reasonable cause" for her not making a claim within six months from Sept. 11, 1936, & that she was not entitled to compensation. E. appealed:—Held: it could not be said that a workman had not shown "reasonable cause" when he did not make a claim within the six months in a case where, during that period, he had not been certified to be suffering from the notional accident which alone could give him the right to make a claim. No such thing as "reasonable cause" could under sect. 14 be considered in respect of an appct. failing to present himself to the certifying surgeon, since the Act did not anywhere lay down any such duty. For that reason "reasonable cause" must be held to have been shown when during the six months' period in which he could have claimed he could not produce the certificate, which constituted the accident, & which alone could support his claim; also, the county ct. judge was wrong in his conclusion that on the evidence produced applt. had not shown "reasonable cause," & that applt. was entitled to compensation. Appeal allowed.—EASTERLING v. PEEK, FREAN & CO., LTD., [1938] 2 K. B. 300; [1938] 1 All E. R. 674; 107 L. J. K. B. 704; 158 L. T. 289; 54 T. L. R. 495; 82 Sol. Jo. 194; 31 B. W. C. C. 113, C. A.

3052a. Report signed in firm name.—Applts. applied to the registrar under the provisions of 1925 Act, s. 19 (2), for the appointment of a medical referee. The registrar refused the application, & on appeal the county ct. judge upheld his decision. The grounds of the judge's decision were that it was not possible to appoint as referee a doctor who had acted in that capacity in a previous reference between the same parties. This doctor had given up practice, & was no longer a medical referee. There was, therefore, no machinery available for compelling him to give evidence under a reference, or to produce certain X-ray photographs. In the judge's view, these facts made the case one of exceptional difficulty within the words of the sect.

Resp. had been examined on behalf of applts. by two doctors, who were working in partnership, & their certificate was signed in the firm name:—Held: (1) once a county ct. judge has decided that a matter ought to be settled by arbn., he is bound to refuse to allow a medical reference; (2) on the facts of this case, the judge was justified in regarding the case as one of exceptional difficulty within the meaning of those words in sect. 19 (2), & in refusing to order a reference; (3) the word "report" in sect. 19 (2) & the word "certificate" in sect. 12 (3) should be given the same meaning; (4) a report signed by a firm name is within the requirements of the Act, provided that the injured person has been examined by all the partners. 3053 xvi. —.—A minor, who was disabled by nystagmus, & had been paid compensation by his employers, was examined by a medical referee, who certified that "the claimant is not now suffering from nystagmus . . . & his condition is such that he is now fit for his ordinary work." The employers having craved the arbitrator to end the right to compensation, the workman moved for a continuance of the award of compensation at the rate of 30s. weekly. He averred that the certificate was not conclusive, in respect that it did not bear that he had completely recovered in the sense of not being more susceptible than formerly; in fact, he was more susceptible; no employer in the mining industry would engage him in consequence of his being unable to sign a declaration that he had not suffered from nystagmus; the work underground was no longer open to him; & his failure to obtain employment was wholly or mainly due to his having contracted the disease. The arbitrator having, before answer, allowed a proof of these averments:—Held: he was not entitled to allow a proof, for the question of recovery was to be decided by the referee.—HAMILTON v. KINNEIL CANNEL & COKING COAL CO., [1933] S. C. 81; 25 B. W. C. C. Supp. 81.—SCOT.

3053 xvii. —.—On Nov. 14, 1927, a colliery overman injured his back by accident arising out of his employment. Compensation at the rate of 30s. per week was paid from the date of the accident to Dec. 15, 1932. On Aug. 2, 1928, a medical referee certified that the workman was still unfit for any work on account of his injury. On Apr. 13, 1929, the same referee certified the workman as fit for light work on the surface, & reported, inter alia: "Such work is essential. . . . He is reluctant to make any exertion. . . ." On Dec. 15, 1932, the employers applied for a third reference, & a remit was made to a different referee (the previous referee having died) in the double form prescribed by Act of Sederunt of Mar. 16, 1926, which follows upon sub-sects. (3) & (4) of sect. 19 of 1925 Act. The referee certified, inter alia: "(1) . . . the facts of the case, & his complaints are elicited from the two agents & from claimant's wife. . . . He has recovered from the accident, but his general condition is such that he is unfit for any work. (2) The incapacity . . . is not due to the accident, but to his neglect to work as recommended by the [previous] medical referee . . . or, in default of obtaining such work, neglect to exercise himself. . . ." The employers moved the arbitrator on this certificate to end compensation, & the workman lodged a minute averring that the certificate was ultra vires of the medical referee, in respect that the finding that the incapacity was due not to the accident but to neglect of exercise was (1) not a medical question, & (2) pronounced upon insufficient evidence. The workman averred that he had been taking exercise under the advice & care of his own doctor, & that that fact had not been disclosed to the referee. The arbitrator refused in hoc statu to end compensation & allowed the workman a proof of the averments in his minute. The employers appealed:—Held: proof was incompetent, & compensation ought to have been ended, in respect the question whether the incapacity was due to the accident or to neglect of work or, failing work, exercise, was ultra vires compromissi, & there was no reason to doubt the sufficiency of the data upon which the medical referee decided it. The proper time for the workman to state that he had been taking exercise under his own doctor's orders was when the remit was made, or at latest before the referee. Appeal allowed.—*CAMPBELL v. In Jan. 1933, the workman & his employers presented a joint minute to the Sheriff-Clerk asking for a medical reference. The employers averred in the application that the claimant was "fit for light work so far as the accident is concerned," & the workman maintained that he was unfit for any work. On Jan. 28, 1933, the Sheriff-Clerk remitted to the medical referee to "give his certificate as to the condition of [the workman] & his fitness for employment . . . & whether or to what extent the incapacity of [the workman] is due to the accident." On Feb. 4, 1933, the medical referee certified, inter alia, as follows: "(1) . . . His condition is such that he is not at present fit for any work. . . . 3055a. —.—There being disagreement between the medical advisers of a workman & his employer, respectively, as to the condition & fitness for employment of an injured workman in receipt of compensation, the matter was by consent referred to a medical referee, who certified that the workman was suffering from an inflammatory condition due to the original accident, & was thereby totally incapacitated from work. A year later a similar disagreement arose, & the matter was again referred to the medical referee, who gave a similar certificate. Three years later, the employer having ceased to pay compensation, the workman applied for resumption of the weekly payments. At the arbn. the medical evidence called on behalf of the employer was to the effect that the workman had been suffering from some considerable time from osteitis fibrosa which was the principal cause of the incapacity & in no way due to the accident. On that evidence the county ct. judge made his award for the employer. The workman appealed on the ground that he had all along suffered from the same condition which had been conclusively found by the medical referee to have resulted from the accident, & therefore could not now be said to be due to other causes:—Held: the county ct. judge not having given reasons for his judgment, & it being doubtful whether he had applied the principle set out in Cauldon Potteries, Ltd. v. Johnson, No. 3821a, post, there must be a new trial.—DUNN v. DORMAN, LONG & Co., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 593, C. A.

his persistently retaining the foot in bad position & refusing to put down in normal way. . . ." The employers thereafter moved the ct. to end compensation, & the workman lodged a minute asking for an award in respect of total incapacity. He averred that he had been receiving competent medical treatment, & had followed his doctor's advice. He asked for proof of those averments. The arbitrator having refused in hoc statu to end compensation & allowed a proof of the workman's averments, the employers appealed:—Held: in view of the averments of the joint application for a reference, the referee's finding that the incapacity was not due to the accident was ultra vires compromissi, & the arbitrator was entitled to refuse in hoc statu to end compensation, & to allow the workman a proof of his averments as to his reasonable conduct under his own doctor's advice. Appeal dismissed.—M'NEILLY v. ARCHIBALD RUSSELL, LTD., [1933] S. C. 647; 26 B. W. C. C. Supp. 74.—SCOT.

3056a. —.]—Appct. was in receipt of a weekly payment on account of injuries received in the course of his employment. The employers gave notice of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground of recovery as certified by their doctor. The workman replied with a counter-certificate of his doctor. The matter was submitted to the medical referee, who certified that the man was fit for most forms of work. The employers ceased making the weekly payments, & the workman appealed to the county ct. judge as to the effect of the certificate. The judge, sitting with the same medical referee as assessor, who explained his certificate as being one of complete recovery, held the man was fit for work on the date when compensation ceased, but awarded compensation from the date of cessation of the weekly payment to the date of his award:—Held: (1) compensation was not payable after incapacity had ceased; (2) the certificate of the medical referee was sufficient & conclusive.—PULLEN v. ENTHOVEN & SON (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 248, C. A.

3056b. —.]—In a reference to a medical referee made under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 19 (2), the medical referee certified that the workman was fit to resume his ordinary occupation, but described it as being something different from what in fact it had previously been. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive, & received evidence as to the nature of the respective occupations, the parties having objected to the certificate being sent back to the medical referee for explanation or correction:—Held: the certificate being ambiguous was not conclusive, & the parties having refused the opportunity of the ambiguity being explained by the medical referee, the judge was entitled to hear the evidence tendered & act upon it.—*AUSTIN v. 3056c. —.]—A stoneman in a colliery was certified by a medical referee to be suffering from miners' nystagmus, & unable to do work which involved stooping. The county ct. judge, after hearing evidence, interpreted that certificate as meaning that the workman was unable to do work which involved continuous stooping, such as his old employment necessitated, & made an award on the basis of partial incapacity:—Held: the judge had properly treated the certificate as conclusive, & interpreted it rightly, & was justified in hearing evidence as to the amount of stooping that would incapacitate the man in order to make an award for the proper compensation.—TAYLDER v. LAMBTON, HETTON & JOICEY COLLIERIES, LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 115, C. A.

3056d. — As to possibility of recurrence.—A medical referee, to whom a dispute as to the condition of a workman who had sustained injuries by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment had been referred under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 19, after giving two certificates of partial recovery, certified that in his opinion the workman had completely recovered from the accident & was fit for his ordinary work:—Held: the medical referee must be taken to have directed his mind, not merely to the condition of the workman at the moment, but to the possibility of a recurrence of incapacity, & that his certificate was final & conclusive.

Where, therefore, upon an application by the employer to end the compensation, the workman lodged a minute informing the ct. that skiagrams taken since the last certificate of the medical referee had disclosed conditions not apparent on external examination, & that there was a reasonable probability of a recurrence of incapacity:—Held: it was not competent to the arbitrator, or, failing him, to the appellate ct., to direct an inquiry into the facts set forth in the minute, & that the only course open to the arbitrator was to end the compensation.—*WILSONS & CLYDE COAL Co. v. 3056e. —.]—A puller-up at a coal pit lost the index finger of his left hand while at work in Aug. 1933. He received compensation at 30s. a week until Jan. 1934, when a notice was served on him under sect. 12 (3) of his employer's intention to reduce the compensation to 7s. 6d. The workman served a counter-notice & the matter was referred to a medical referee who in Feb. 1934, certified as follows: "(1) The condition of the said Joseph Moore is as follows: He has recovered from the amputation of the left index finger & is fit for his ordinary work as 'puller-up'; (2) the incapacity of the said Joseph Moore has ceased." On this certificate the employer ceased payment. On Mar. 7, 1934, the workman returned to work but left on the same day on the ground that he was unable to do it. In May, 1934, he applied to the county ct. for resumption of compensation. The county ct. judge held that the medical referee's certificate was one of complete recovery & that it was impossible for him to award compensation. No declaration of liability was made or asked for. In Dec.

1934, the workman underwent an operation on his hand & in Jan. 1935, made a fresh application for compensation. The county ct. judge on this occasion held that the certificate of Feb. 1934, did not deal with future probabilities & awarded the workman compensation for partial incapacity. The employer appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge having given his decision in May, 1934, on the meaning of the medical referee's certificate, but finally determined the matter & could make no further award. Appeal allowed.—MOORE v. WALLSEND & HEPBURN COAL CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 174, C. A.

The county ct. judge, contrary to his own opinion that the man was not fit for work as a stevedore, held that the certificate was conclusive against the workman:—Held: the certificate was unambiguous & there was no misdirection.—MONTGOMERY v. GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 48, C. A.

3057d. Remit for fresh certificate.—A workman suffered an accident which caused dislocation of the right shoulder. Compensation was paid by the employer at first for total & then, on the return of the workman to light work, for partial incapacity. Notice to terminate was then given under sect. 12, & the matter proceeded by reference to the medical referee who certified that there was no disability except for a permanent liability to recurrent dislocation. The certificate ended with the words: "The incapacity consists entirely in the liability to recurrence. He is fit for his present employment with the proviso that the dislocation may recur at any time, however light the work." The workman claimed that the effect of this certificate was that he was totally incapacitated: the employer claimed that it entitled the workman to no more than a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge made an award of compensation for partial incapacity. The employer appealed:—Held: the certificate was ambiguous, the medical referee having failed to state in precise terms his answer to one of the questions referred to him, namely, the kind of employment for which the workman was fit.

3057 i. Ambiguous report—Duty of judge to clear.—Employers, who had been paying compensation to a labourer in respect of an injury to his eye, served upon him a medical certificate to the effect that he had recovered; & no counter-certificate having been received from him, they stopped payment of compensation on Apr. 5, 1927. In a subsequent application by the workman to have a memorandum of agreement recorded, the arbitrator, on the application of the employers, made a remit to a medical referee. On Feb. 2, 1928, the referee reported that the workman's condition was such that he was not "at present" debarred from doing labouring work. The arbitrator granted warrant to record the memorandum, but suspended compensation as from Apr. 5, 1927, until the further orders of the Ct.:—

3057e. ——— ——A driver of a steam truck was on Jan. 12, 1935, totally incapacitated as a result of the bursting of the boiler. Liability was admitted & compensation paid by the employer. On Sept. 27, 1935, a medical referee to whom the matter had been referred under sect. 19 certified that the workman's condition was a purely nervous one, that he should be given light work & would be fit for full work in two months' time. The employer then re-employed the workman at light work, paying him reduced compensation. The matter was again referred to the same medical referee, who on Feb. 20, 1936, certified that the scar had almost disappeared, that the workman could walk seven miles a day, that apart from this he could find no cause for incapacity & that he did not think that slight weakness of the legs would interfere with the workman driving. The certificate concluded, "the incapacity of William James Staff has in my opinion ceased." On this certificate the employer ceased to pay compensation. The workman filed an application for arbn. & in his answer the employer referred to the two certificates of the medical referee & contended that the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction to hear the arbn. On this preliminary point the county ct. judge held that the second certificate was unambiguous & conclusive & refused to hear the arbn. The workman appealed:—Held: the medical referee was bound by sect. 19 (3) to certify both as to the condition of the workman & his fitness for employment, & in this case had only certified as to his fitness for employment. The matter must therefore be sent back to the medical referee to certify as to the workman's condition by following the directions on the appropriate form as set out in the sched. to the regulations as to medical referees. Appeal allowed. Matter remitted.—STAFF v. FREEGUARD BROS. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 384, C. A.

3057f. Ambiguous certificate—Duty of judge.—Appcts., who had been paying resp. compensation in respect of an injury, applied for a medical reference. The medical referee granted a certificate which was ambiguous:—Held: (1) a judge, although he has power to do so, is under no duty to remit an ambiguous certificate to the medical referee for explanation; (2) if a certificate is ambiguous, it is wholly bad, & even an unambiguous portion cannot be conclusive evidence of matters certified therein. *MORGAN & CO. v. 1925 Act, s. 19 (2), referring a dispute to a medical referee. The application to the registrar had been made by the employers ex parte without notice to the workman contrary to the provisions of Workmen's Compensation Rules, r. 57 (2). On appeal, all parties being then before him, the judge confirmed the order & dismissed the appeal on the grounds that the merits of this case required a reference to the medical referee & no injustice had been caused by the failure to comply with the rules:—Held: the judge had power, under County Ct. Rules, Ord. 54, r. 24, to deal with the matter in this way. Appeal dismissed.—RIXON v. ASHFORD HOSPITAL TRUSTEES (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 518, C. A.

3080 i. — How far certificate conclusive.—A workman sustained an injury by accident necessitating amputation of his left index finger. He was paid compensation, at first for total, & later for partial, incapacity. In the course of a medical reference a remit was made to a medical referee to report (a) whether the workman had wholly or partially recovered from the effects of the accident, & if necessary, the kind of work for which he was fit, & (b) whether, or to what extent, his incapacity was due to the accident. The referee having reported (a) that the workman was fit for any work which did not involve gripping, & that his hand required use, & (b) that his incapacity was due to want of use & effort, the employers moved for termination of compensation. The workman thereupon lodged answers in which he averred that he had, on the advice of his medical practitioner, used his hand in all reasonable ways, & that, in spite of such use, he was still partially incapacitated. The arbitrator having allowed a proof of the workman's averments:—Held: the referee's statement in his report that the workman's incapacity was due to want of use & effort did not raise any question as to the reasonableness of the workman's conduct, but involved a purely medical question upon which the referee was final; & the arbitrator had, accordingly, misdirected himself in allowing a proof, & should have terminated the compensation.—ROSS v. MANOR POWIS COAL CO., [1936] S. C. 77.—SCOT.

sg. Duty to consider medical report of workman.—On Oct. 29, 1931, a workman applied for a medical reference in arbn. proceedings pending between him & his employers. The arbitrator refused the application, but that refusal was reversed on appeal, & in Oct. 1932, the Sheriff-Clerk remitted to the medical referee. The referee refused to consider a medical report obtained by the workman on Sept. 26, 1932, that is, after his application, which had not been included amongst the productions sent to him by the Sheriff-Clerk with the reference. The medical referee having certified the workman fit for his ordinary work, the employers moved the arbitrator to end compensation. The workman lodged objections, on the ground, inter alia, of the referee's refusal to consider the report aforementioned. The arbitrator having ended compensation, the workman appealed. In all the circumstances of the case the appeal was dismissed.—NICOL v. KINCAID & CO., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. Supp. 68.—SCOT.

—On Jan. 19, 1934, employers applied for a medical reference as to the condition of an injured workman. On Jan. 30, the workman not opposing, the matter was referred to the medical referee, who certified on Feb. 9 that the workman had recovered from his injury & was fit for his ordinary work. The employers thereupon lodged a minute moving the arbitrator to end compensation. The workman lodged answers stating that the procedure in the medical reference had been bad, & that the reference was null & void. He averred that on Jan. 25, 1934, at the request of the employer, he had submitted himself for X-ray examination to a doctor named; that the X-ray plate & a report upon it had been furnished to the employers; that they were bound to lodge that plate & report along with their application for a reference; & that they had not done so. It was later agreed that the plate had been sent by the employers to the medical referee on Feb. 6, but that the report had not been sent. The arbitrator having ended compensation, the workman appealed:—Held: in respect of the irregularities in the reference the arbitrator was not entitled to end compensation. Further, the X-ray plate had not been lodged, & could not have been lodged, as a production by the employers at their application, in terms of the Act of Sederunt, & could not be classed as a "statement" in terms of the Regulation. Appeal allowed.—BAIN v. SPRINGBANK QUARRY CO., LTD., [1935] S. C. 5; 27 B. W. C. C. Supp. 89.—SCOT.

sm. Right of employer to reference—Notwithstanding common law action by workman.—On Nov. 16, 1932, a stripper sustained injury during the course of his employment in a colliery, being burned by an explosion which occurred there. On Nov. 24, 1932, he gave his employers "notice & claim" at common law, under the Employers' Liability Act & under the Workmen's Compensation Act. On July 13, 1933, the employers applied to the sheriff-clerk for a medical reference, alleging that they had paid the workman compensation under the Act. On July 28, 1933, the workman raised an action at common law in the Ct. of Session against the employers, & on Aug. 1, 1933, he lodged objections to the employers' application for a medical reference, on the grounds that he had not accepted compensation under the Act & that he had raised a common law action. The sheriff-clerk &, on appeal, the Sheriff-Substitute, as arbitrator, refused the application for a medical reference. The employers appealed:—Held: the raising of an action at common law by the workman did not bar the employers, a claim under the Act having been served upon them, from obtaining a medical reference, the certificate in which might be useful at a future date. Appeal allowed.—RAE v. DUNLOP & CO., LTD., [1934] S. C. 438; 27 B. W. C. C. Supp. 35.—SCOT.

sp. — *A mine-worker, aged sixteen, was injured on Nov. 3, 1932. Very shortly after the accident he obtained a certificate from an infirmary & gave it to his brother to enable him to obtain money from his employers, which his brother in fact did obtain for some weeks, & the workman himself for a few weeks thereafter. In Jan. 1933, the workman stopped collecting these payments & on Jan. 5, by his solrs., intimated that he intended to claim damages at common law. On Mar. 30 & June 26, 1933, the workman submitted himself to medical examination at the instance of the employers. On June 12, 1933, the workman raised an action at common law in the Ct. of Session concluding for damages against his employers in respect of his injury of Nov. 3, 1932. At no time did he make a claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act. On July 3, 1933, the employers presented an application in the Sheriff Ct. for a medical reference under the Act, the application being accompanied by the two medical reports above mentioned. The workman lodged objection to the application on the grounds (a) that there was no agreement to pay or receive compensation under the Act, & (b) that proceedings at common law were pending in the Ct. of Session. The Sheriff-Clerk repelled the objections & allowed the reference. The workman appealed to the arbitrator. In the appeal, the employers amended their application to the effect of deleting their averment that compensation had been paid under the Act, as that matter was at that time sub judice in the Ct. of Session. The arbitrator refused the appeal, & the workman appealed to the Ct. of Session:—Held: notice of an accident having been given by the workman by service of the writ in the common law action, the employers were entitled to insist under sect. 17 on a medical examination, & the fact that the common law action was raised after the expiry of the statutory period was not a bar to the employers' application for a medical reference, in respect that the workman still had contingent rights under the statute, the assertion of which the employers were entitled to anticipate. Appeal dismissed.*

In Aug. 1926, the employers stopped compensation after serving notice under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, on the ground that the workman no longer suffered from the disease. A counter-notice having been served, the issue was referred by the registrar to the medical referee, who certified that the workman was totally incapacitated, but that such incapacity was due to other causes than nystagmus. On an application by the workman for an arbitration in Jan. 1929, evidence was tendered that nystagmus had once more become active, but the employers raised the preliminary objection that the medical referee's certificate was conclusive against the workman, & destroyed the effect of the certifying surgeon's certificate of Dec. 1925. The county ct. judge upheld the objection & made an order dismissing the application for arbitration. The workman appealed:—Held: the certificate of a medical referee being only conclusive as to the matters therein certified, & miner's nystagmus being a recurrent disease, the certificate was not of itself a bar to the claim of the workman for compensation, & it was for the county ct. judge to decide whether there had been in fact any recrudescence of the original disease.—*LEWIS v. 3061b. ———.]—A certifying surgeon certified that a workman was suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids & that the disablement commenced on Nov. 28, 1935. The employer appealed to the medical referee who, on Jan. 6, 1936, dismissed the appeal & certified that the workman "is not now suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids." The medical referee made no finding as to probability of recrudescence or as to increased susceptibility. The employer paid compensation for the period from Nov. 28, 1935, to Jan. 6, 1936. In Sept. another certifying surgeon certified that the workman was suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids & that the disablement commenced on Sept. 1, 1936. The employer appealed to the same medical referee who dismissed the appeal & certified that the workman "is still suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids & is thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed & I fix Nov. 28, 1935, as the date on which the disablement from the said disease commenced":—Held: the first certificate of the medical referee was not conclusive as to recovery & there was no inconsistency between the two certificates.—SCRUTTONS, LTD. v. RADONICICH (1937), 81 Sol. Jo. 611; 30 B. W. C. C. 303.

3062a. ——— Copy of medical certificate—Statutory requirements not complied with.]—A collier was injured while working & a big toe was amputated in consequence. After paying full compensation for a time & then part compensation, the employers proceeded under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, s. 12, & gave notice of termination of payments. A copy of the medical adviser's certificate as to workman's condition supplied with the notice contained nothing that was not in the original certificate, but omitted various matters included therein. The medical referee certified the workman as fully recovered & payments were terminated. Renewed trouble appeared at the seat of the amputation, shortly afterwards, & the workman applied for & obtained an award of compensation from the county ct. The employers appealed on the ground that the medical referee's decision was conclusive & binding, & the county ct. had no jurisdiction to inquire into the matter. A preliminary objection against the appeal was taken on the ground that the omissions in the copy medical certificate, served on the workman, were contrary to the express terms of sect. 12 (3), & that it & all subsequent proceedings based on it were a nullity:—Held: the omissions in the copy of the certificate of the employers' doctor were contrary to the express provisions of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, s. 12 (3), & all subsequent proceedings based upon it were invalid & a nullity. The appeal must therefore be dismissed & the parties left to take such proceedings as they might be advised.—HILL v. LADYSHORE COAL CO. (1930), LTD., [1930] 3 All E. R. 299; 155 L. T. 567; 80 Sol. 3076a. ———.]—A stevedore earning 65s. a week injured his knee on Mar. 14, 1928, & remained totally incapacitated until Mar. 16, 1929. He was then given light work, but left it on Aug. 1, 1929, stating that he was once more totally incapacitated. Correspondence followed between the representatives of the workman & the representatives of the employer; in the course of this correspondence the latter repudiated the suggestion that the workman was totally incapacitated but eventually agreed to pay certain sums to the workman as compensation, partly in the form of a lump sum for arrears & partly in the form of weekly payments for the future. In accordance with this agreement the workman on Jan. 21, 1930, signed a receipt agreeing to accept the sum, "being weekly compensation at the rate of £1 a week from Aug. 1, 1929, to Jan. 23, 1930." The wording of the receipt connot de facto been given by the workman, the employers' independent knowledge of the accident would have entitled them to make the application, on the ground that necessity of giving notice under the Act had been dispensed with.

tinued: "This weekly payment is to be continued during my partial disablement resulting from the accident in accordance with the provisions of the (Workmen's Compensation) Act, the amount of any payment due during decreased partial disablement to be settled hereafter." Weekly payments of £1 were paid to the workman under this agreement. On Nov. 5, 1930, the workman filed an original request for arbn. asking for compensation on the basis of total incapacity at 30s. a week from Aug. 1, 1929, & claiming the difference. The county ct. judge found that a binding agreement had been made between the parties as to the amount payable for partial incapacity, but on a finding that the workman was in fact totally incapacitated, he held that, though there had been no change in the workman's physical condition since Aug. 1, 1929, he could make an award for 30s. a week on the basis of total incapacity from that date, as the agreement did not purport to deal with anything but partial incapacity. On appeal by the employer the Ct. of Appeal held that the agreement dealt with the question of the extent of the incapacity as well as with the rate of compensation, & the judge could not disregard the agreement that the man was in fact only partially incapacitated, which was binding. They allowed the appeal & set the award aside with costs. The workman appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: the agreement precluded the workman from claiming compensation on the basis of total incapacity between Aug. 1, 1929, & Jan. 23, 1930, but it did not preclude him from applying for a review of the weekly payments paid under the agreement for any period subsequent to Jan. 23, 1930, on proof of "change of circumstances or knowledge" justifying such a review. The proceedings brought by the workman in the county ct. were misconceived & should have been by way of review & not by way of original arbn. Appeal dismissed with costs to applt. The Scheme only providing for compensation for total incapacity the employers ceased paying compensation from Dec. 31, 1931. The workman filed an application for arbn., which was heard & dismissed on Feb. 16, 1933. On Jan. 4, 1933, the workman filed another application for arbn., claiming compensation for total incapacity from Feb. 17, 1933. The employers raised the preliminary objection that the matter was res judicata. The county ct. judge held that the matter was not res judicata. The employers appealed:—Held: the cause of action was not the same as that in the proceedings which ended in the award given on Feb. 16, 1932, & therefore not res judicata.—NEWMAN v. THYNNE (H. & G.), LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 390, C. A.

3083a. Discretion to allow amendment of proceedings.—A coal porter who had lost his left middle finger as a result of an accident applied for arbn. The employer offered to take him back & start him at light work at his old wages. On this the county ct. judge made a declaration of liability. After a few months of light work, during which the workman only once attempted to do his old heavy work, the workman was discharged owing to slackness of trade. He then applied again for arbn. under sect. 21. At the hearing of the application the employer contended that the application should have been made by way of review under sect. 11, & the judge upheld the contention. He, however, adjourned the hearing until the afternoon to enable the workman to formulate the necessary amendment & to draft a statement of the change of circumstances which he alleged as justifying a review, & for the employer to apply for a further adjournment if necessary. The change of circumstances alleged was put into writing & was: "That since [the date of his return to work] applt. has attempted to do his pre-accident work but was unable to do so & was put on light work." Upon this the employer consented to the case being heard without further adjournment. The judge found that there had been a change of circumstances in that "the anticipation of the medical witnesses at the first hearing, that after a short period of light work the workman would be able to resume his full work, had not been realised." He therefore made an award for the workman of 12s. 6d. a week on the basis of partial incapacity. The employer appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had properly exercised his discretion in allowing the amendment, but had misdirected himself in finding a different change of circumstances than that stated in the amendment. Appeal allowed without prejudice to the workman applying for a further review if justified.—CURTIS v. RICKETT, COCKERELL & Co., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 16, C. A.

3098a. —.—An infant workman lost his left arm below the elbow as a result of an accident. The employers admitted liability, & paid full compensation. On Nov. 5, 1926, the workman signed a receipt for payments in the form of an agreement, by which he agreed that the payments were to be continued only so long as he was totally disabled, but that the amount of payment in respect of any subsequent partial incapacity should be settled if & when the question arose. In Jan. 1927, he applied for registration of an agreement in the terms of Form 24, that the weekly payments should continue during partial or total incapacity or until the same should be ended or diminished in accordance with 1925 Act. The employers objected to that agreement being recorded, on the ground that the terms of the real agreement of Nov. 5, 1926, were not therein correctly stated, & thereupon the workman filed a request for

arbn. on Feb. 23, 1927. The boy obtained work as a messenger boy on Feb. 11, 1927. The county ct. judge ordered the document of Nov. 5 to be recorded as the agreement between the parties, & dismissed the request for arbn.:—Held: a totally incapacitated workman in receipt of full compensation under an admission of liability was entitled, either to a recorded memorandum of agreement stating his rights in the terms of Form 24, or, if the employers objected to that, he was entitled, on the question so raised, to apply in arbn. proceedings for the judge to grant an award in such terms; the document of Nov. 5 did not give the workman his full rights as expressed in Form 24, & was not binding on the workman, being an infant, & when the employers objected to the recording of a memorandum in the terms of Form 24 a question was raised fit for arbn., & an award should have been made having regard to the terms of Form 24, & there was no power on the proceedings to order a memorandum of agreement to be recorded, & the case must be remitted for the proper award to be made to suit the circumstances of the workman having actually returned to work.—*PARKER v. 57. Case should not be determined on technicality.—A workman received compensation, at first for total & later for partial incapacity, in respect of injuries accompanied by severe nervous shock. The medical referee having reported that the workman, although still suffering from nervous symptoms, was fit to try his ordinary work, the arbitrator, on July 6, 1934, suspended compensation, against which decision the workman did not appeal. On July 18, 1934, the workman instituted new proceedings, in which he averred that he was still incapacitated, & that his former employers had refused to let him try his ordinary work. The employers pleaded that these averments were irrelevant, but stated no plea to the competency of the application. At adjustment, the workman added an averment that, subsequently to the date of his application, he had been employed at his ordinary work by another employer, but had been discharged in respect that, owing to his nervous condition, he was unable to do the work. The arbitrator having dismissed the workman's application as irrelevant, in respect that, as at the date of his application, he had not averred that there was any change in his condition:—Held: as there was no plea to the competency of the application, the relevancy of the workman's averments must be judged as at the date when the case came to be considered by the arbitrator; & as adjusted, these averments disclosed a relevant case for inquiry.

& repute. The workman applied for a new trial on the ground that the parties were under a mutual mistake of fact when they agreed that the dermatitis had come to an end. The county ct. judge granted the application. Six months later the employers applied for another medical reference on the ground that the workman was retarding recovery by declining to submit to an operation, & they produced a medical report which stated that removal of the left ring finger would improve the flexion of the middle & little fingers. The application was opposed by the workman, who tabled a counter certificate which expressed the view that removal of the finger would not improve the gripping power of the hand, & might result in septic poisoning. The sheriff-clerk having remitted to the medical referee to examine the workman & report on his condition & fitness for work, the arbitrator on appeal refused the reference on the grounds (a) that the

The employers applied for the termination or diminution of the weekly payments on the ground that the incapacity due to the injury had ceased. The county ct. judge sat with a medical assessor. In his award the county ct. judge said: "The medical assessor took the view, which was upheld by the ct., that, although there might still be disability due to resp.'s flat feet, this disability was not due to the accident, any disability due to that having come to an end." The workman appealed on the ground that the decision was that of the assessor & not the judge:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly taken the burden of the decision on himself & had not left it to the medical assessor. remit as made by the sheriff-clerk did not raise the real question on which the parties were at issue, namely, the actual cause of the workman's existing incapacity, & (b) that, in the circumstances, that question was not a suitable one for determination by the referee:—Held: as the real question upon which the parties were at issue was the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the workman's conduct in refusing to submit to an operation, the arbitrator was entitled to refuse to allow a reference.—*WILSON v. o i. ———.]—A workman, who had been injured by accident in 1935, was paid compensation by his employers until he returned to work, Sept. 7, 1936. On Sept. 11 he ceased work, & in Oct., instituted an arbn. in which he claimed compensation for incapacity due to the original accident. On Nov. 17, when the workman was not in fact receiving compensation, the employers, having obtained a medical certificate to the effect that he had wholly recovered from the accident served him with a copy of the certificate along with a notice that on Nov. 27 his compensation would cease. On Nov. 24, i.e. less than ten days after the notice, they applied for a medical reference. The arbitrator having allowed the reference:—Held: the arbitrator was entitled to allow the reference, in respect that, while the application for a reference purported to be based on, but was invalid as an application under sects. 18 & 12 (3), as compensation was not being paid, & as ten days' notice had not been given, it was nevertheless valid as an application under sects. 17 & 19 (2). Appeal dismissed.—MOSS v. HENRY ROBB, LTD., [1937] S. C. 611.—SCOT.

so. Duty to refer.—On application of party.]—Held: it was not for the

sp. Reference as to matters on which parties agreed.]—Employers who had been paying compensation to an injured workman as for total incapacity intimated, by notice under sect. 12 (3), their intention to reduce the weekly payments. A dispute having thereafter arisen as to the extent of the workman's recovery, & his fitness for work, the employers presented a minute of application for a medical reference, their material averment being "that the claimant is fit for light labouring work on the level, & that any condition from which he may suffer incapacitating him for such work is not due to the accident, which contentions the claimant denies & maintains that he is only fit for light sedentary work . . . & that his incapacity for any other kind of work is wholly due to the accident." By the remit, which was in the form provided by the Act of Sederunt of Feb. 28, 1933, the medical referee was directed to certify, inter alia, "as to the condition of the said claimant & his fitness for employment, stating whether the claimant has wholly or partially recovered from the injury by accident or scheduled disease. The medical referee reported that the claimant had wholly recovered from the injury by accident; that he was not fit for his own work but was fit for light employment; & that his incapacity was not due to the accident. The arbitrator having ended the workman's right to compensation:—Held: on a consideration of the minute of application, as the only question upon which the parties were at issue was as to the kind of light work for which the workman was fitted, the remit made by the Sheriff-Clerk, in so far as including matters, e.g. the question of total recovery, upon which there was not disagreement, was incompetent, & the report of the medical referee thereon without effect, & accordingly, the determination of the arbitrator could not stand. Appeal allowed.—STURROCK v. JAMES KEILLER & SON, [1937] S. C. 813.—SCOT.

sr. Construction of report.]—Following upon an accident, a workman received compensation from his employers for total incapacity until a medical referee certified that his incapacity was due mainly to arthritis which was not due to the accident. The referee expressed the opinion that not more than 20 per cent. of the incapacity should be attributed to the accident, & the arbitrator having reduced the compensation proportionately, the workman appealed to the Ct. of Session. The ct., holding that the referee's certificate did not clearly determine the real question, viz. whether the workman would, but for the accident, have been a disabled man, recalled the arbitrator's award & remitted to him to re-mit to the referee the question "whether the claimant's present total incapacity is due to the accident." The referee having in a supplementary report expressed the opinion that, if the accident had not occurred, the workman might have continued at full work for an indefinite period, the arbitrator awarded compensation as for total incapacity. In an appeal at the instance of the employers:—Held: as the referee could not say that the workman would have been a disabled man if there had been no accident, the arbitrator's determination was right.—*HUTTON v. The workman's application for resumption of the compensation was resisted on the ground that the incapacity, if any, was due, not to the accident, but to ulceration due to syphilis. The county ct. judge sat with an assessor to whom, after hearing the medical evidence, he addressed three questions which were stated to counsel & were not objected to. On receiving the answers of the assessor the county ct. judge made his award in favour of the workman. 3175a. —.]—An office cleaner earning 18s. a week was certified in May, 1935, by a medical referee to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids, to be disabled from earning full wages at the work at which she was employed, & to be unfit for any other kind of work. Her employers paid her compensation on the basis of total incapacity from May, 1935, until July, 1936, when a doctor reported that she was no longer suffering from dermatitis. The employers thereupon, after giving notice under sect. 12, stopped the weekly payments. In Apr. 1937, the workman filed an application for an arbn. in which she claimed compensation on the basis of total incapacity due to dermatitis from dust or liquids as from the date when payments were stopped. At the arbn. the judge sat with a medical assessor who was of opinion that the workman was at the date of the arbn. suffering from dermatitis: that the dermatitis prevented her from carrying out her employment, but that she was physically fit to do work if it did not entail the use of dust or liquids. The judge held that he was bound on that opinion to find that the workman was not totally incapacitated. He also found that the disease had been contracted though long-continued exposure to dust or liquids, but he also found that she could earn her pre-accident wages of 18s. a week if she could find the work at which to earn it & dismissed her application. At the arbn. no declaration of liability was asked for on the workman's behalf & no evidence was called in any way directed to the probability of the circumstances changing in the future. The workman appealed:—Held: the judge was entitled by using his experience & local knowledge to find that the workman was able to earn her pre-accident wage of 18s. a week in some suitable employment, & on that finding the workman was not entitled to any compensation. Nor was she entitled to a declaration of liability, such relief not having been asked for at any stage of the proceedings & no evidence having been called which was directed to that issue. Appeal dismissed.—BLADES v. WOOL EXCHANGE & GENERAL INVESTMENTS, LTD. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 395, C. A.

3184a. —.]—A workman, whose right arm was injured, was for some time paid compensation on the basis of total incapacity. The employers then applied for a review on the ground that he had partially recovered. At the hearing the workman was not called, but the county ct. judge examined his arm. The only evidence given was that of two doctors, one called by each side, who agreed that the workman was suffering from a 40 per cent. incapacity. The judge made an award diminishing the compensation payable, in which he said that he was unable to find on the evidence that the workman was either an "odd lot" or came within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The workman appealed on the ground that no sufficient evidence had been given that he had regained sufficient capacity to work to take him out of the category of "odd lot," & that, therefore, the onus was upon the employers of proving that there was in fact work available at which the man could earn wages which onus had not been discharged:—Held: taking into consideration the judge's power to use his own knowledge of the local labour conditions, there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—*GLADSTONE SPINNING CO. v. 3200a. —.]—A carpenter alleged in his application for compensation that he had fractured his skull nine months earlier by hitting his head against a tie-pole & then tumbling on to a concrete floor. The county ct. judge found that he had failed to establish the occurrence of any such accident, but allowed him to amend his application by alleging in the alternative that the fracture was due to hitting his head against the concrete floor. The county ct. judge again found against the workman, but in the course of his award said: "I adopt LORD SALVESEN'S reasoning in Wright and Greig v. M'Hendry (1918), 11 B. W. C. C. 402," & quoted a passage dealing with various possible causes for the falling down of workmen, some being causes arising out of the employment & some not. He also stated a sum to which the workman would be entitled if in law there had been an accident. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge, by the form in which he had given his reasons, had introduced a doubt into the award, & as it was possible that he might have held that there was some special risk incidental to the employment, the case must go back for re-hearing.—EVANS v. BIERUM & PARTNERS (1930), 23 B. W. O. C. 131, C. A.

3206a. Non-payment of calls.—A mutual indemnity society, by the terms of its memorandum & articles of association, protected a colliery co. against its liabilities under the Workmen's Compensation Act in respect of all workmen who had not contracted out of the Act. Originally the arrangement was that for the first eighteen months after any accident the co. in effect met all payments due to the injured workman, but upon the expiration of that period the liability in respect of each injured workman was to be actuarially assessed, & a call for such sum was then made upon the co. The eighteen months' indemnity period above referred to was later altered to five years. A receiver of the co. was appointed by debenture holders, & an injured workman thereupon claimed compensation from the indemnity society under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 7. The society repudiated this claim, on the ground that the calls from time to time made upon the co. in respect of the injured workman had not been paid at the date of the appointment of the receiver, which was found to be the fact:—Held: (1) during the indemnity period there was no contract of insurance; (2) in respect of the later period there was a contract of insurance; (3) the calls not having been paid, there was no subsisting contract of insurance at the date of the appointment of the receiver, & therefore the indemnity co. were under no liability to the injured workman under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 7.—WOODING v. Compensation was paid, but was determined upon the certificate of the employer's doctor that the workman was no longer incapacitated. In proceedings instituted by the workman medical evidence was given on his behalf that his grip was weakened, that the muscles were still tender, & that he was still partially incapacitated. The doctor called on behalf of the employers agreed that the grip was weak, but stated that the workman was capable of doing some work which would be beneficial. The county ct. judge found that the workman had fully recovered, & made a declaration of liability only:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding, & the case must be remitted for compensation to be assessed.—BUCK v. accident earnings, & his compensation was therefore reduced to a penny a week. In Jan. 1929, the pit was closed down. The workman was unable to obtain work & applied for compensation. The employers contended that the workman was fully able to work, & that his inability to obtain work was due to labour conditions. The county ct. judge made an award for 2s. 2d. a week. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence of partial incapacity & no misdirection.—WOODCOCK v. TYDESLEY COAL Co. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 502, C. A.

After a period of total incapacity he resumed his work as a wheelwright, but was unable to drive a van, & he was ultimately discharged for business reasons. In respect of his injury he obtained an award of compensation, first, for partial incapacity, & afterwards, on his application for a review in consequence of his inability to get work owing to his obvious disfigurement, for total incapacity. After he had become nearly blind owing to cataract in his right eye, the employers' insurance co. offered him employment as a cleaner in their office at a wage which was double the market rate of wages for that work, but the workman refused this offer by reason of his infirmity. Upon an application by the employers for a review terminating or reducing the compensation, the county ct. judge found that the offer of the insurance co. was a genuine offer & reduced the compensation to half the difference between the workman's pre-accident wages & the wages offered him by the insurance co.:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could properly find that the workman's proved inability to earn wages by reason of the loss of his left eye had ceased to exist, inasmuch as the offer of the insurance co., in the circumstances in which it was made, had no evidential value as a test of the man's earning capacity in the open market.—BIRCH BROS., LTD. v. 3228 ill. —.—]*—A workman was awarded compensation in respect of total incapacity in Feb. 1925. On May 13, 1926, he became fit for light work. He made efforts to obtain such work, but, owing to abnormal economic conditions, he was unable to do so. If he had obtained light work the effects of his injury would have worn off, &

he would have recovered full capacity by Sept. 13, 1926. Owing, however, to his failure to obtain light work he was still partially incapacitated at the latter date. Apart from this failure to obtain work, his condition was not due to any failure on his part to take reasonable measures to promote the recovery of capacity. The arbitrator having suspended payment of compensation as from Sept. 13, 1926:—

Held: the continuance of incapacity, not being due to any unreasonable conduct on the workman's part or to the intervention of any new cause apart from economic circumstances, was still attributable to the original accident; & accordingly, that the arbitrator was not entitled to suspend payment of compensation.—*KENNEDY v. not merely by apparent physical incapacity or incapacity to do work when obtained, but also by incapacity, owing to the injury, to get the work. It was therefore open to the county ct. judge to find on the evidence that incapacity existed, although the facts suggested that if work had been given to the workman he would have been able to do it; (2) the compensation to be awarded in such cases under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9, "a sum not exceeding 50 per cent. of the workman's average weekly earnings during the previous twelve months," refers to the twelve months previous to the accident, not to the twelve months prior to the award, & therefore the compensation should have been assessed on the footing of the wages being 19s. 6d. a week.—*BYWATER v. He brought a claim for compensation at the rate of 6s. 2d. a week, being one-half the difference between his pre-accident & post-accident earnings. The county ct. judge made a declaration of liability only on the ground that he found no loss of earning capacity due to the accident since the return to work. The workman appealed:—Held: the loss of earnings after the accident being entirely due to labour conditions & not to the fact that the workman was injured, the decision of the county ct. judge was right.—*LYON v. He then obtained work with the same employers as a pump engineman at wages higher than he had earned as a drawer, & compensation was suspended by agreement. The pit in which he was employed as a pump engineman having been closed, the workman was thrown out of employment. He was unfit, owing to his injury, for his former work as a drawer, but he was fit for various jobs, including that of pump engineman, at which he could earn his former wage. He was unable to find work owing to the state of the coal mining industry & not owing to his injury. On July 13, he obtained a certificate that he was disabled by the disease as from June 14. The county ct. judge held, although totally incapacitated from June 14, the workman would not, in any case, have been at work owing to the strike, & refused compensation:—Held: if a workman was totally incapacitated by an accident, it was immaterial that

Evidence was given on behalf of the resps. that appct. had been warned that consequence of the strike would be a curtailment in the staff of the co. After the strike appct. applied to the co. for reinstatement which was refused on the ground that as a result of the strike there was no work available for him. He was still partially incapacitated:—Held: (1) appct. was not entitled to compensation during the period of his refusal to work, i.e., during the strike & after the strike up to the time of his application for reinstatement; (2) he did not finally lose his right to compensation by his refusal to work during the strike; (3) the fact that the co. could not offer appct. work was due to the strike was immaterial except in so far as it was evidence of a general failure of the labour market for his type of labour. I., applied to any circumstances not personal to the workman himself. It dealt expressly with the case of the man who could not find work, & it set the criterion whether the failure to find work was due wholly or mainly to the accident, but failure to find work due solely to the state of the labour market was expressly excluded by the sect., & it was impossible to say that *Cardiff Corpn. v. 3243c. —.]—Applt., who was totally incapacitated by an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment by resps. whilst working as a fitter in the erecting department of their works, on becoming fit for light work, was employed by resps. in the gauge department of their works. A claim by him for compensation in respect of the difference between his pre-accident earnings & his present earnings was opposed by resps. on the ground that the full week's work in that department was five & a half days, but that owing to trade conditions the department was only working five days, & that, if applt. had worked a full week, as he was physically capable of doing, his earnings would have exceeded his pre-accident earnings. The arbitrator awarded compensation:—Held: on the facts, resps. had failed to prove that a normal week's work in the gauge department was more than five days & that the award was rightly made.

The question whether, where a partially disabled workman is actually earning wages, the compensation to which he is entitled is to be assessed by reference to the normal earnings under normal market conditions in that employment or by reference to his actual earnings in the conditions prevailing at the time was left open by the House.

Semle: it does not necessarily follow from Bevan v. Nixon's Navigation Co., No. 3243b, where a man is actually earning wages in a suitable employment & the wages which he is receiving are the wages usually paid at the time in that employment, that the arbitrator is bound to assess his compensation on the basis of what he would have been earning if the conditions of employment in that occupation had been more prosperous.—WHITE v. 3269a. ——. —.]—A collier suffered a succession of accidents, but was given work with partial compensation until, in 1921, he left the colliery & became a club steward at higher wages. In 1922 he was granted a declaration of liability against the colliery co. In 1928 he was dismissed from his position of club steward & failed at three clubs where there were vacancies to obtain the position of a club steward. He claimed that he was unfit to work as a collier at the coal face, & his old employers refused to employ him otherwise. He therefore made a claim for compensation against his old employers in the form of a review of the declaration of liability. The county ct. judge made an award in his favour of 7s. 6d. a week on the grounds that, although he could do surface work, he was unable to work at the coal face, & that the job of a club steward was not a well-known branch of the labour market, & should therefore be disregarded:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the work of a club steward was exceptional; it was a well-known class of employment in which the man was capable of working. The case must be remitted for a rehearing, taking this fact into consideration.—STATHAM v. OXCROFT COLLIERY CO., LTD. (No. 2) (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 330, C. A.

3269b. ——. After retirement.]—A workman lost the use of an eye by accident & wore a shade over it in consequence. Liability being admitted he received full compensation until he was able to do his ordinary work again. An agreement was recorded whereby the employers undertook to provide the workman with employment, & admitted their liability to pay compensation "as & when their liability shall arise." The workman continued doing his work without compensation until having reached the age of sixty-six he was compulsorily retired under his employers' superannuation scheme, but at the same time became entitled thereunder to a pension of 10s. per week. After his retirement the workman filed a request for arbitration, claiming to be entitled to be paid full compensation as from the date of his retirement. He gave evidence that he had tried to obtain work since his retirement but had failed. The county ct. judge held that although the workman was physically capable of performing his old work with his old employers, his age & the loss of the eye prevented him getting fresh work in the labour market. He made an award in his favour of 10s. a week. He found the workman's average weekly earnings before the accident to be £3 5s. & his post-accident earnings £2 2s. The first figure included payment for overtime & the second did not. Furthermore there had been a fall in the rate of wages since the accident. The employers appealed on the grounds that the workman was not incapacitated, & that, if he was, compensation had been calculated on the wrong basis, because the judge had not taken into consideration the question of overtime & fall in the rate of wages:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the workman was partially incapacitated, but, in arriving at the amount of compensation payable he had not taken into account the high rate of pre-accident wages & overtime. Also the question of pension must be considered.—STEVENS v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 311, C. A.

He left this work at the commencement of the stoppage due to a dispute in the coal trade in 1926, but was not re-employed at the conclusion of the stoppage, in Dec. 1926. In Feb. 1927, the workman applied to have his compensation increased, on the ground that the work on which he had been employed was a special kind of terminated & she later resumed her light work at her pre-accident wage. This light work had been open to her on the same terms throughout the period of her illness. The workman having claimed compensation for total incapacity from Nov. 14, 1932, to May 31, 1933, the arbitrator awarded compensation for partial incapacity during that period. The employers appealed:—Held: the arbitrator was not entitled to award partial compensation in respect: (a) the workman had not been entitled to, & was not in receipt of, partial compensation at the date when she became totally incapacitated by illness in no way connected with the accident; (b) the light work at pre-accident wages remained open for her throughout the period of her illness. He had recently been elected president of the committee of management of a co-operative society for a term of one year, the appointment carrying a salary of £12 per annum:—Held: as from the date of this appointment, he was entitled to compensation as for partial incapacity only, in respect that the salary received by him was earned "in some suitable employment or business," these words not being restricted to employments which fell within the scope of the Act. surface work found for him by his employers. The county ct. judge held resps. were not liable to pay compensation as claimed on the grounds set out in their particulars. He subsequently returned to work at the face, but in June, 1924, had another accident through which his left eye was injured, & he was paid compensation. In Mar. 1925, he returned to light work, receiving also a weekly sum by way of compensation. On July 1, 1925, the employers applied for a review & termination of the weekly payments. The workman stated in evidence that he was afraid to work below ground again, & the county ct. judge held work at the coal face was not suitable, & the man's refusal to do it was reasonable:—Held: the case must go back for the judge to decide whether the unsuitability of the work resulted from the first accident or the second, or both, & to assess the compensation payable only in regard to incapacity from the second accident.—*ASTON COAL CO., LTD. v. He was fitted with an artificial foot & given suitable employment until he came of age. His employers, being then unable to find him work in an adult grade, dismissed him. The workman claimed compensation as a totally incapacitated adult worker, but the employers refused to pay except on the basis of partial incapacity. The county ct. judge held that the workman was not entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated either as an "odd lot" or under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—BARNES v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 205, C. A.

3271 II. ——. Light work available—At pre-accident wage.]—On Dec. 11, 1930, a female workman, a presser in a steam laundry, sustained injury by accident arising out of her employment. She lost the index finger of her right hand & damaged the thumb of that hand so that she remained permanently partially incapacitated. The employers paid her compensation for total incapacity to Feb. 23, 1932, when they re-employed her at light work of a special character at her pre-accident wage, & stopped payment of compensation. On Nov. 14, 1932, the workman was totally incapacitated by illness in no way connected with her injury, & remained so till May 31, 1933, when indisposition due to her illness

An application by him for compensation was adjourned for him to try to do suitable work offered to him by his old employer. He was able to do the work & was paid his old wages, but after sixteen weeks had to be discharged owing to trade depression. He then made a further request for arbn., alleging that his left arm was useless. There was evidence that the workman had applied for many jobs, but there were no vacancies, & that he told one prospective employer that he had met with an accident & could only do light work. The county ct. judge held that the workman was entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated, & that, although he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment he had failed to obtain it. He therefore made an order under sect. 9 (4) as amended by the 1931 Act. The employer appealed on the point that the man had not taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment & there was not sufficient evidence to support a finding that he had done so:—Held: it was a question of fact for the county ct. judge & there was evidence on which the order could be made.—*HIGGINS v. He claimed 30s. a week under sect. 9 (4), as amended, on the ground that he had tried to obtain light work but had failed. He did not register at the labour exchange. The county ct. judge found that he had fulfilled the conditions of sect. 9 (4) except that he had not taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment, particularly having regard to the fact that he had not registered himself at the labour exchange. He made an award for 16s. a week. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—CRAWLEY v. GIBBIN (WILLIAM) & SON (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 408, C. A.

of slackness of trade. He again registered at the labour exchange but this time as a clerk. Six months after he had registered as a clerk he applied for compensation, basing his proceedings on the declaration of liability. During those six months he had made no applications for work either as a moulder or as a clerk. In his application he claimed that for the periods while he was out of work his partial incapacity should be treated as total under sect. 9 (4) as amended. The county ct. judge found that he had brought himself within the provisions of sect. 9 (4) & in particular that he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment. The employers appealed only as to that part of the award which covered the six months' period from the date when the workman had registered as a clerk:—Held: the question was one of fact & there was evidence to support the finding that the workman had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment. Appeal dismissed.—CHAPMAN v. MARSHALL, SONS & CO., LTD. (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 14, C. A.

3283f. — Condition precedent to treatment of incapacity as total.—In three of the four cases the injury which the workmen sustained was the loss of visual power in one eye, & in the fourth case it was the loss of three fingers, in each case by an accident arising out of & in the course of their employment in applts.' quarry. In every instance the workman had been totally incapacitated for a period & then been given light work at the quarry, receiving partial compensation. Subsequently the four men, with very many others, were discharged from the quarry, solely by reason of slackness of trade. Neither the damage to the eyes nor that to the fingers had anything to do with the men's dismissal. There were workmen still employed at the quarry who had lost eyes & fingers. Each of the workmen after discharge filed a request for arbn. in the county ct. under the Act, claiming that they were entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated under the provisions of sect. 9 (4) of 1925 Act, as amended by sect. 1 of 1931 Act. In each case the county ct. judge made an award for the workman on the ground that the position under sub-sect. (4), as amended by 1931 Act, was that the county ct. judge must treat partial incapacity on the footing of total incapacity if it appeared to him that, having regard to all the circumstances, it was probable that the workman would, but for the continuing effects of the injury, be able to obtain work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident, or that his failure to obtain employment was a consequence wholly or mainly of the injury:—Held: the county ct. judge had not considered proviso (i.) to sect. 1 (1) of 1931 Act. That proviso was directory to the ct. & a condition precedent to the operation of the sub-sect. The effect of the proviso was that the workman was no longer under the necessity of calling a number of employers to state that they had refused him work on account of his injury. Sub-sect. (4) of sect. 9, as amended by the Act of 1931, did not exclude the opportunity which was given under sub-sect. (3) (i.) of that same sect. for a man to receive compensation for partial incapacity.—HUGHES v. PENMAENMAWR & WELSH GRANITE CO., LTD. (1933), 148 L. T. 485; 26 B. W. C. C. 99, C. A.

PART XIV. SECT. 12, SUB-SECT. 8. A.

3283f i. — Condition precedent to treatment of incapacity as total.—A miner, who had suffered from nystagmus, had recovered so far as to be fit for his ordinary work, but was suffering from chronic nystagmus. In an arbn. it was found by the arbitrator, & admitted by the employers, that they had refused to employ him solely because he declined to sign a statement, always required by them, in common with other mine-owners, before employment of a miner, that he had not previously suffered from nystagmus. The arbitrator further found that the same result would have followed if the workman had applied for such employment at any colliery within an area reasonably accessible to him; & that the workman had taken all reasonable steps to find other employment & had failed to obtain it. The arbitrator awarded compensation as for total incapacity. It appeared from the arbitrator's note that, on a construction of sect. 9 (4) of the 1925 Act as amended by sect. 1 of the 1931 Act, he had based the two latter findings, not upon legal proof, but upon his own opinion of the particular circumstances of the case:—Held: (1) the workman's failure to obtain employment as a miner with his former employers was due to the latter's refusal to engage a miner who had had nystagmus, & was not "a consequence, wholly or mainly, of the injury"; (2) the arbitrator's finding, that the workman had taken all reasonable steps to obtain other employment & had failed to obtain it, was defective in respect (a) that it did not disclose that the failure was due to the injury, & that it did not cover employment other than mining, & (b) that in any event, it appeared from the arbitrator's note that the finding was based, not on evidence before him, but upon his own opinion; & accordingly (3) the arbitrator had misdirected himself & was not entitled to make any award of compensation. Appeal allowed.—DOCHERTY v. BAIRD (WILLIAM) & CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 89.—SCOT.

3283f ii. — Corroboration.—In an application by an injured workman under sect. 9 (4) as amended to have his partial incapacity treated as total incapacity in respect of his inability to find suitable employment, the only evidence led on either side as to his inability to obtain such employment was that of the workman himself. He deposed that, after being certified by a medical referee as partially recovered & fit for light work on the ground or floor level, he had applied unsuccessfully to various employers, other than his former employers, for light work suitable to his condition; that in the case of one of these he had filled up a printed form of application which they had acknowledged by a post card which he produced; & also that he had registered at the Labour Exchange, but had had no offer of employment. He was not cross-examined on these matters except as to an offer of work by his former employers (which the arbn. held not to be proved as an offer of suitable employment), & as to the kind of work for which he had indicated to the other employers that he was fit. The arbitrator refused to make the order asked for, upon the ground of law that the evidence of a single witness, namely, the appct. himself, was insufficient to satisfy the requirements of proof under sect. 9 (4). He, however, stated that, if he had considered himself entitled to accept the appct.'s evidence as sufficient & to apply his judicial knowledge of the limited market available to a man with the appct.'s disability, he would have been prepared to hold that the appct. had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment:—Held: the right to compensation as for total incapacity under sect. 9 (4) must be established by such legal evidence as would be necessary to establish any other ground of claim in an ordinary action of law. In the present case, while an arbitrator is not precluded from taking into consideration his own judicial knowledge, the necessary legal corroboration of the appct.'s evidence as to his efforts to obtain suitable employment was not supplied by (a) the arbitrator's judicial knowledge of local conditions, or (b) an implied acceptance of the appct.'s evidence by the employers in view of their abstention from a detailed cross-examination; & accordingly, that the arbitrator had rightly refused to make the order craved. Appeal dismissed.—MOORE v. HARLAND & WOLFF, LTD., CREANEY v. FAIRFIELD SHIPBUILDING CO., [1937] S. C. 707.—SCOT.

in Mar. 1928, & in May, 1928, the eye had to be removed & a glass eye fitted. He was given light work with payment of partial compensation until May, 1932, when he & a large number of other miners were paid off. Of four pits belonging to his employers, three had been closed down & one was working on short time. The workman had been employed until he was twenty-four years old on a farm, & applied in June & July, 1932, to three farmers for work, but work was refused on account of his injury. He registered at the Labour Exchange, & on four occasions during the next four months he made unsuccessful applications for work to his former employers. He continued to receive payment of partial compensation. On a claim for compensation on the basis of total incapacity under sect. 9 (4), as amended by the 1931 Act, the county ct. judge found that the workman's failure to obtain employment was mainly due to his injury, & that he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment. He therefore made an order that the workman's incapacity should be treated as total for six months only. The employers appealed. Shortly after the hearing in the county ct. the employers gave the workman employment in one of their pits:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. Proviso (i.) to sect. 9 (4) as amended imposes in effect a condition precedent, so that a workman must establish that he has taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment before he can obtain the benefit of the sect. —*DONACHIE v. 3283h. ——. ]—A labourer was injured by an accident in Jan. 1931. He was paid full compensation at 30s. a week until May, 1932, when he consented to a reduction to 15s. a week. In July, 1932, the workman applied for a review claiming a return to 30s. a week on the ground that he was entitled in the circumstances to be treated as a totally incapacitated man under sect. 9 (4) of the 1925 Act, as amended by the 1931 Act. The workman gave evidence of attempts to obtain employment, but admitted that he had not applied to his old employer for work nor had he registered at the labour exchange. The county ct. judge made his award for the employer. He based his reasons on sect. 9 (4) of the 1925 Act without considering the effect of the repeal of that sect. by the 1931 Act. He found that the workman had so far recovered as to be fit for employment of a certain kind, but had failed to satisfy him either that he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain such employment or that his failure to obtain such employment was a consequence wholly or mainly of his injury. The workman appealed:—Held: although there was misdirection the award being expressly made under the repealed sect. 9 (4) of the 1925 Act, no substantial wrong or miscarriage had been occasioned thereby within R. S. C., Ord. 39, r. 6, so as to justify a new trial. Though the words "If a workman . . . proves . . . he has taken all reasonable steps" have been altered to "If it appears to the judge that the workman has not taken all reasonable steps," such change in the wording of the sect. has caused no alteration in the onus resting on the workman of proving that he has taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment, & in this case the judge's findings would justify refusing an order either under the 1925 Act or the 1931 Act.—*HANCOX v. 3283l. ——. ]—A mechanic earning £2 17s. 4d. fell from a scaffold & dislocated both his wrists. For eighteen months he received £1 18s. 8d. a week as compensation for total incapacity. The employer then reduced the weekly payment to 10s. a week. The workman filed a request for arbn., claiming to be treated as totally incapacitated or, alternatively, as entitled to the benefit of sect. 9 (4), as amended. The county ct. judge held that the workman was partially incapacitated for work, but that he was not entitled to the benefit of sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge also found that the workman might, by accepting a reduced wage, get a job worth about 15s. a week. He, therefore, made an award for the workman of £1 1s. 2d. a week, being half the difference between 15s. & £2 17s. 4d. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—HORNSHAW v. MIDDLETON ESTATE & COLLIERY CO., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 620, C. A.

3283m. ——. ]—A tool & metal turner lost the tip of his right forefinger in a slotting machine. The employer, admitting liability, paid him 30s. a week for two & a half months, when he resumed his old work at the same rate of wages. After four months he was discharged by the employer as inefficient. He then obtained other work for six weeks at a lower rate of wages. After that he was out of employment & filed a request for arbn., claiming compensation on the basis of total incapacity, & asking for an order under sect. 9 (4) as amended. At the arbn. he said that he had applied to all firms having his class of work within forty miles, but had failed to obtain it. The county ct. judge said that the workman impressed him as being a truthful man, & that he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment. He made an order under sect. 9 (4) awarding 30s. a week. The employer appealed:—Held: the judgment of the county ct. judge did not contain sufficient to comply with the requirements of sect. 9 (4) as amended, & the award must be reduced to one for partial incapacity only.—WICKS v. KING & Co. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 310, C. A.

3283n. —.]—A steel-erector lost his left little finger by accident & was paid compensation. Compensation was stopped under the provisions of sect. 12, & the workman returned to work on the level for a few days. He complained of tenderness in his hand & was discharged. He claimed compensation for total incapacity or alternatively for partial incapacity to be treated as total under sect. 9 (4) as amended. The medical evidence at the hearing was to the effect that he needed a few months' work on the level preparatory to returning to his old work. The workman said he had tried to get light work. The county ct. judge found that he was fit for his old work except for nervousness, & made an award for 5s. a week. He also found that he was not entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated under sect. 9 (4) as he had not taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment. The workman appealed. On appeal it was alleged that the judge had given certain reasons for finding the workman had not taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment which were unsound:—Held: if the reasons alleged had been given, the finding under sect. 9 (4) could not be supported. Appeal allowed. Order for matter to be remitted for the judge to reconsider on the evidence already given, the question of making an order under sect. 9 (4). Each provision in the sub-sect. is a separate & important item & there must be evidence to show that each provision has been complied with before an order under the sub-sect. can be properly made. Appeal allowed.—

His claim was refused by the arbitrator, who, while finding that he was fit for light work, that he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment, & that, if he had not been injured, he would probably have been at his pre-accident job, further found that it was not proved that, being certified as fit for light work, it was probable that, but for the continuing effects of his injury, he would have been able to obtain work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident, & that it was not proved that his failure to obtain employment was a consequence wholly or mainly of the injury:—Held: (1) the workman's claim did not fall within the scope of sect. 9 (4) (i), in respect that it had not been found that it was probable that, but for the continuing effects of his injury, he would have been able to obtain work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident; & a finding that, if he had not been injured, he would probably have been at his pre-accident job was not equivalent thereto; (2) the workman's claim did not fall within sect. 9 (4) (ii), in respect that the arbitrator had expressly found in fact that it was not proved that the failure to obtain employment was a consequence wholly or mainly of the injury.—*WISHNEY v. At the end of that period he was re-employed by the corp. at light work, & received compensation for partial incapacity. He was paid full compensation until Apr. 1927, & thereafter he was paid compensation as for partial incapacity until Apr. 1928. In Nov. 1928, he was refused further compensation, on the ground that he was able to earn & was in fact earning as a hatchmouth man, wages equal to his pre-accident wages, & a suspensory award was made, as there was a likelihood that his hand might become worse in the future. In 1935, the workman claimed compensation as for total incapacity, on the ground that he had failed to obtain employment in consequence of the accident. After hearing evidence, an arbitrator found that the workman's failure to obtain employment was mainly due to his injuries, & he awarded compensation as for total incapacity, holding that there was an onus on the employers to establish that the workman had not taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment, which onus the employers had failed to discharge:—Held: although the workman was bound to prove his failure to obtain employment, he could do so by evidence short of proof of taking all reasonable steps to obtain employment, for the effect of the amendment was to remove from the workman the onus of proving that he had taken all such reasonable steps. In the circumstances, therefore, he was entitled to compensation.—MCLAUGHLIN v. CALEDONIA STEVEDORING CO., LTD., [1938] A. C. 642; [1938] 3 All E. R. 72; 107 L. J. P. C. 77; 159 L. T. 217; 54 T. L. He proved the onset of only one definite attack, but not its duration, & the arbitrator refused to award compensation as for total incapacity in respect of any period. The arbitrator had, however, in previously fixing the rate of compensation for partial incapacity, taken into account that, owing to the nature of the infection, there were recurring short periods of total incapacity:—Held: while the workman, if he had proved the existence of total incapacity during definite periods, would have been entitled to awards of compensation for total incapacity in respect of these periods, the arbitrator, in the absence of such definite evidence, had, in fixing compensation for partial incapacity, rightly taken into account that there were, from the nature of the disease, short recurring periods of total incapacity.—*FITZSIMMONS v. 3284a. —.]—A hewer was injured in 1921 by a runaway truck, & had his right thigh broken. He was paid full compensation at the rate of 35s. a week. In 1924 his employer offered him work in the lamp cabin which he accepted, receiving compensation at 20s. a week with reduced wages. In 1931, by which time he had been discharged owing to trade conditions, he was medically examined, & his compensation reduced to 7s. 6d. a week. The medical question was referred to a medical referee, who certified that he was unfit to do his pre-accident work, but was able to do light work such as lamp-cabin work. In May, 1932, the workman filed an application for compensation at the rate of 35s. a week, alleging that an agreement had been come to between the parties for the payment of that sum to him. The county ct. judge found that there was an agreement as alleged by the workman, & made an award for 35s. a week. He made no finding as to whether the workman was totally incapacitated or not. The employer appealed on the question of the agreement & on quantum, & the workman appealed on the failure to find total incapacity :—Held : there was no evidence of the alleged agreement, & the matter must go back for the county ct. judge to find whether the workman was totally incapacitated as an "odd lot," or was only partially incapacitated. 3288b 1. Application of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1931 (c. 18), s. 1—No right to compensation during receipt of unemployment benefit.—A workman who had been in receipt of compensation as for total incapacity was found by a medical referee to have so far recovered as to be fit for employment of a certain kind. His employers having thereupon reduced the payment of compensation to 5s. weekly, the workman, who had tried but had been unable to obtain employment, applied for & received unemployment benefit. He thereafter brought an application for an award of compensation as for nystagmus, & was paid compensation at the rate of 35s. a week until Feb. 17, 1929, when the compensation was reduced to 10s. a week on the ground that he was fit for surface work. On Feb. 5, 1932, the employers stopped the reduced weekly payment on the ground that their doctor had certified that he was free from nystagmus when examined under the severest tests. The workman applied for work from his old employers, but they refused to give it to him on the ground that he might have a recurrence of the nystagmus if he went below. Other collieries refused to employ him because he had had nystagmus. He then made genuine efforts to obtain work at various other places, but without success. He filed a request for arbn., claiming 35s. a week from Feb. 5, 1932, onwards. The medical evidence given in the county ct. was to the effect that the workman had recovered in the sense that the signs & symptoms had disappeared, but that if he went down the pit he would probably have oscillations of the eyes. It was, however, admitted that he was, at the moment, absolutely fit to go & do his old work at the coal face. The county ct. judge found that the attack of nystagmus had made the workman more susceptible to another attack & therefore he had not wholly recovered from the disease. He further found that the man was unable to get work at the coal face at other collieries by reason of the policy of the coal owners in that district in refusing to employ miners who had suffered from nystagmus. He therefore held that as the fact that he had suffered from nystagmus was the cause of his inability to earn wages he was entitled to be paid compensation on the basis of total incapacity. The employers appealed on the ground that the evidence established that the workman had fully recovered & therefore was entitled to no compensation:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the workman had not completely recovered, but there was no evidence to show why he was unable to obtain employment elsewhere than at collieries, or that his failure to obtain such employment should be attributed to nystagmus.

Appeal allowed in part without costs. Case remitted for a new trial on the question whether the workman's failure to obtain employment at places other than collieries should be attributed to nystagmus & consequent reassessment of compensation.—*MORTON v. His inability to sign the declaration, & not the continuing effects of his injury by the attack of the disease, prevented him from getting work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident by disease:—Held: his failure to obtain work was not due to the continuing effects of his injury by the disease, & he could not claim compensation on the basis of total incapacity.—*FRENCH v. (2) The county ct. judge has a discretion under the section to attach such conditions total incapacity. The sheriff substitute, having found that the workman's failure to obtain employment was a consequence of his injury, ordered that his incapacity should be treated as total incapacity, & awarded com-

penetration therefor as from the date when the employers reduced the payment, on the workman undertaking to refund the sums paid to him as unemployment benefit:—Held: the sheriff substitute was not entitled to

3288h. — — — — —.]—A carpenter was seriously injured by an accident for which his employer admitted liability & paid him full compensation. He was subsequently given light work, sitting on a bench making boxes, the materials being brought to him. It was work which had to be done in the normal course of the employer's business, & was done satisfactorily. On an application for compensation he was awarded 4s. a week, & received this in addition to the wages paid to him for the light work. After a year & a half he had to be discharged owing to trade depression. After his discharge he applied for & received unemployment benefit & was still receiving it at the date of the hearing of an application by him for the review of his weekly payment of 4s. by an increase to 30s. At the arbn. the medical evidence was to the effect that the workman was in the same condition as when he was awarded 4s. a week, but he claimed an increase to 30s. a week on the ground of total incapacity. The county ct. judge found that the workman was as capable of doing work as when the award for 4s. a week was made, but that owing to trade conditions he had lost his employment & had since drawn, & was still drawing, unemployment pay on the ground that he could do the work if he could get it. He found he was not an "odd lot," & further held that the 1931 Act had rendered it impossible for the workman to obtain an increase, & made his award for the employer. The workman appealed:—Held: the award was unsatisfactory as it might be read as meaning that the receipt of unemployment benefit by the workman before the date of the hearing had disentitled him from claiming full compensation, contrary to the decision in *Goodman v. 3288o. — — — — —.]—Condition for cesser of compensation on employment.]—On a claim by a partially incapacitated workman that his incapacity should be treated as total, the county ct. judge made an order based on the wording of Form 24B in the Appendix to the Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926. He first of all ordered that the workman's incapacity should be treated as total incapacity for three months only; then that the employer should pay compensation at the full rate during the total or partial incapacity of the workman or until review proceedings were taken; & finally that in the event of the workman being incapacitated for work or unable to earn full wages as a result of his injury, he should be entitled to compensation in accordance with the Acts. The employer appealed on the grounds that there was no evidence on which the judge could make the order & that he was wrong in doing so:—Held: there was evidence on which the order could be made & no misdirection, but the wording of the order, by reason of the wording of Form 24B, was inconsistent & failed to state the intention of the judge or carry out the provisions of the Act, & must be amended generally so that the benefit of the order should only continue during so much of the three months as the workman remained unemployed.

New order drafted by the Ct. of Appeal & observations on inadequacy of wording of Form 24B. Appeal dismissed.

Semble: until Form 24B is altered a condition should be added to every order under sect. 9 (4) to the effect that the order for payment of compensation for total incapacity only continues operative while the workman remains unemployed.—*DARRACQ MOTOR ENGINEERING CO., LTD. v. 3288p. — — — — —.]—A painter's labourer lost half the second finger of his right hand by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. The employers admitted liability & paid compensation for eight months. They then served a notice to terminate the compensation, together with a doctor's certificate in accordance with sect. 12, on the workman on a Sat. On the same morning the workman applied to his old employer for work, but no suitable work was available. On the following Mon. he filed a request for arbn. claiming compensation on the basis of total & permanent incapacity. In his answer the employer admitted that the workman was partially incapacitated. The workman did not register at the Labour Exchange. The county ct. judge said that he thought the workman ought to be treated as totally incapacitated having regard to the 1931 Act, & made an award on the basis of total incapacity. The employer appealed:—Held: the application had not been framed under sect. 9 (4) of the 1931 Act, & was bad. Further, there was no evidence to support an award on such basis. The compensation should have been assessed on the basis of partial incapacity. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—PAULLEY v. AVELING & PORTER, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. 567, C. A.

3288q. —.]—A waggon shunter employed in locomotive works at an average wage of £2 17s. 7d., severely injured his left hand while firing a boiler in May, 1929, as a result of which several fingers were damaged & the grip was very much weakened. After receiving full compensation for some time he did a certain amount of work. On being discharged, in Oct. 1931, he claimed compensation on the basis of total incapacity. The county ct. judge found that the workman's labour was an "odd lot," & that he was entitled to compensation on the basis of total incapacity. He awarded him full compensation from Oct. 1931, & added the words "this order shall cease to be in force if the workman receives unemployment benefit," but there were no findings in accordance with sect. 9 (4) as amended. Between Oct. 1931, & Nov. 1932, the only employment which the workman was able to obtain was one day's work as a painter, & there was no evidence that he was unable to do that work or that he was unable to obtain any other work on account of his injury. The employers appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had failed to keep separate the different considerations involved in "odd lot" labour & partial incapacity treated as total under sect. 9 (4), & had therefore failed to direct himself correctly.—BAVERIDGE v. STEPHENSON (ROBERT) & Co., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 316, C. A.

3288r. —.]—A workman whose hand had been injured claimed to have his partial incapacity treated as total under sect. 9 (4) as amended. In the arbn. he proved that he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment & in giving evidence as to fifty-two unsuccessful applications for work he said that he sometimes did, & sometimes did not, show his injured hand to prospective employers. The county ct. judge in giving judgment, found that it was probable that the workman would, but for the continuing effects of his injury, be able to obtain work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident & in coming to this conclusion he applied his own knowledge of the conditions of local industry. He also stated in his judgment that on the evidence the workman's failure to obtain employment was not a consequence, wholly or mainly, of the injury. In his award, however, he found that the workman had satisfied him both under para. (i) & para. (ii) of sect. 9 (4). The employer appealed:—Held: as to para. (i), there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find as he did; as to para. (ii) the view expressed in the award was the right one, & not that expressed in the judgment, as the latter view would be inconsistent with the evidence. Appeal dismissed.

Sect. 9 (4) (i) means, in my opinion, that, if the workman shows that, but for his injury, he is competent for work, i.e. a decent workman, & that there is no reason why he should not get work as before, & that the state of trade is comparable with what it was when he was previously in employment, that is enough to constitute prima facie evidence within the meaning of the sub-sect. Being thereby partially incapacitated for work, he made application to an arbitrator to have his partial incapacity treated as total incapacity within the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, s. 9 (4), as amended. The arbitrator decided in resp.'s favour, having found that (a) he had so far recovered from the accident as to be fit for light work, (b) he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment, (c) he had failed to obtain employment in his former work because of the injury, & (d) it was probable that, but for the continuing effects of the accident, he would have been able to obtain work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident. Applts. contended that, resp. having been found to be incapable of engaging in his former employment & to be fit only for light work, the said sections of the Acts of 1925 & 1931 did not apply to his case:—Held: (1) the words in the sub-sect. "has so far recovered from the injury as to be fit for employment of a certain kind," do not mean that the subsect. is applicable only to a workman fit in every respect to engage in his former employment but are to be construed so as to apply to a workman rendered unfit for his former employment but fit for light work; (2) as the findings in fact of the arbitrator were such as to satisfy the provisions & requirements of the Acts, he was entitled to treat resp.'s incapacity as total incapacity.—*ADDIE (ROBERT) & SONS' COLLIERIES, LTD. v. 288u. —.]—A workman was employed for fourteen years in a brewery, which was situated in an agricultural district, first as a maltster & later as a foreman barley roaster, work which brought him into contact with heat, dust & steam. Only two foreman barley roasters were employed in the brewery. Having become disabled by dermatitis produced by dust or liquids the workman was paid 30s. a week compensation, which was subsequently reduced to 15s. a week when he had become sufficiently recovered to do work which did not involve contact with heat, dust or steam. The workman commenced arbn. proceedings claiming an increase of the rate of compensation & also an order that his partial incapacity should be treated as total. The county ct. judge granted an increase in the rate of compensation but refused to make the order asked for on the ground that, although the workman had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment, there was still a large field of work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident open to him & his failure to obtain employment was not a consequence, wholly or mainly, of the injury. The workman appealed:—Held: there was misdirection, as the only work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident was that of a foreman barley roaster.

Appeal allowed. Case remitted to another county ct. judge to find whether it was probable that the workman would, but for the continuing effects of the injury, be able to obtain work in the same grade in the same class of employment as before the accident. —A miner who had lost the sight of his right eye in an accident recovered sufficiently to be fit to resume his old work. Although he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain work as a miner or quarryman, he failed to obtain any. The sheriff-substitute found that the workman's failure to obtain employment was mainly a consequence of the injury & treated his incapacity as total under sect. 9 (4). On appeal to the First Division of the Ct. of Session the decision of the sheriff-substitute was reversed on the ground that sect. 9 (4) did not apply to a case where the workman had recovered sufficiently to be fit for his former employment. The workman appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: the words "employment of a certain kind," in sect. 9 (4) are applicable although the employment which the workman is fit for & is attempting to obtain is his pre-accident employment.—TANNOCH V. 3290a. —.]—In May, 1923, a miner suffered a permanent injury by accident to his left foot & was paid compensation. In May, 1924, he was given by his employers light employment as a signalman, together with compensation for partial incapacity, & he continued to do the work satisfactorily until the general stoppage in 1926. His services were then dispensed with, & he was unable to obtain employment elsewhere. At the hearing it was proved that the workman could not do work which involved activity of the feet. The sheriff-substitute found that the workman was fit only for a special & limited class of work which he would have no chance of obtaining in the competitive labour market, & awarded him compensation for total incapacity. On appeal this decision was affirmed by the First Division of the Ct. of Session. 3291a. Charitable employment given by employer.]

—An hotel employee was in 1922 injured by an accident which converted him for all practical purposes into a one-armed man. He received compensation until 1926, when, as a result of an arbn., the county ct. judge made an order that the employers were liable to pay him compensation, & that he was at liberty to apply to the ct. "should he at any time be so advised." No other award was made, as the employers undertook to find him employment at 30s. a week. The employment found for him was to stand in the street holding a sign advertising the hotel. In 1930 he was dismissed for pilfering & applied to the ct. for compensation by way of review. The county ct. judge made an award in his favour on the basis of total incapacity. The employers appealed:—Held: (1) the award of the county ct. judge must have been made on findings that the workman was totally incapacitated & that the employment found for him by his employers was only a charitable employment, & there was evidence to support these findings; (2) the workman, being found to be in the category of "odd lot" labour, the fact that he had been dismissed for misconduct was irrelevant in coming to a decision as to whether or not there was incapacity for work. Appeal dismissed.—JENSEN V. JONES (R. E.), LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 518, C. A.

3291b. One hand becoming useless.]—As a result of an accident a workman lost the third finger of his left hand, the second & fourth fingers were shrunken, & the thumb & first finger became weak, thus making the hand practically useless. The county ct. judge found that the workman was an "odd lot," & also that he should be treated as totally incapacitated under 1925 Act, s. 9 (4).

The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed. — EVANS v. THOMAS W. WARD, LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 364, C. A.

3291c. General discharge of workmen—No notice to injured workman.—A miner employed on a week's notice lost the ring finger of his right hand in an accident. He received compensation for total incapacity. While he was absent from work owing to his injury his employer discharged 500 men, choosing for purposes of dismissal men from the district in which the injured workman lived. When the workman ceased to be totally incapacitated the employer applied to have the weekly payments diminished. The workman resisted the application on the ground that he was entitled to an order treating his incapacity as total under sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman, having never received a week's notice as the discharged workmen had done, would probably, but for the continuing effects of the injury, have been able to obtain his old work. On this finding, & being satisfied that the workman had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment & failed, he refused the employer's application for a review, & made an order under sect. 9 (4) for total incapacity. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—FIRBECK MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD. v. HOPEWELL (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 607, C. A.

3291e. —.]—A miner, who had been employed by the same employer for twelve years, was certified on Jan. 1, 1934, as being disabled by miner's nystagmus & as being only fit for light work. Liability under sect. 9 (4) was admitted & full compensation paid at the weekly rate of 26s. 4d. Compensation was reduced from Jan. 20, 1934, to May 19, 1934, to 8s. 4d. a week on the ground that the workman was drawing unemployment benefit. On May 19, 1934, when the workman ceased to draw unemployment benefit, the weekly rate of compensation was restored to 26s. 4d. until Sept. 11, 1934, when a notice to terminate his employment with the employer took effect. It was thereafter continued at the reduced rate of 8s. 4d. a week. The workman applied to have his compensation restored to the full rate during the two periods of reduction on the ground that he was entitled to the benefit of sect. 9 (4) as amended by the 1931 Act. In a short judgment the county ct. judge said: "The facts appeared to me to be indistinguishable from those in the case of Ingham's Thornhill Collieries, Ltd. v. Barstow, No. 3291d. . . . I have, of course, taken into consideration the state of the labour market" & refused to make an award increasing the rate of compensation for either period. The workman appealed:—Held: the termination of the contract of service on Sept. 11, 1934, marked a difference between the two periods of reduced compensation. The county ct. judge was entitled on the evidence to hold that the workman had failed to satisfy him that he was entitled to the benefit of sect. 9 (4) & Ingham's Case applied in regard to the second period, but there was nothing in the judgment to show that he had considered the effect of the continuance of the contract of service during the first period & there must be a new trial on the issue in regard to such period. Appeal allowed in part.

Decision reserved on the question whether, on an application by a workman for an order under sect. 9 (4), the county ct. judge is entitled to take into consideration the fact that unemployment benefit is being drawn.

3291f. —.]—A disabled miner was in receipt of compensation for total incapacity. The employers gave notice terminating his contract of service, & afterwards brought proceedings to review & diminish the weekly payment. The manager of the colliery said in evidence that if the miner had not had nystagmus he would probably have been working for the employers; that he made a practice of re-engaging old workmen if he needed them; & that he was instructed to give the workman notice in consequence of the House of Lords' decision in Barstow v. Ingham's Thornhill Collieries, Ltd., No. 3291d. The county ct. judge, nevertheless, was not satisfied that the workman would have been employed, or that he was unfit to do the work by reason of nystagmus, or that his failure to obtain employment was consequent either wholly or mainly on his injury. He therefore reduced the amount of the compensation:—Held: the evidence that, in spite of the notice terminating employment, the workman would have been re-employed took the case out of the class represented by Barstow v. Ingham's Thornhill Collieries, Ltd., No. 3291d. This evidence established the probability that the workman would, but for the continuing effect of the injury, have been able to obtain the same class of work as before, & the workman must receive his old rate of compensation.—*EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. 3295a. ———.]—In 1911, a workman lost his right arm as a result of an accident. From 1913 to 1922 his employers engaged him on light work. In 1922 it was agreed that he should in the future be paid 7s. 6d. a week compensation in respect of the estimated difference between what he could earn at light work & what he would have been earning if he had not been injured. After 1924 he was given the work of record-keeping. On Dec. 24, 1927, he was discharged, the works being closed on account of trade difficulties. On Jan. 9, 1928, after sixteen days, he was re-engaged on light work on the terms of the 1922 agreement. The workman received unemployment benefit for the period he was unemployed & also the weekly compensation of 7s. 6d., & did not try to obtain other employment. On May 13, 1928, he filed an application for arbitration, claiming an increase of compensation during the period he was unemployed on the basis of total incapacity. It was agreed that the amount recoverable in these proceedings, if successful, was 55s., being two sums of 35s. a week less the two payments of 7s. 6d. The arbitration was begun in Aug. 1928, & continued in Oct. In his evidence the workman said that he was "a storekeeper plus messenger," & that he could act as a watchman-gatekeeper. At the hearing in Oct. the county ct. judge intimated that he was prepared to accept the argument put forward on behalf of the workman that he was an "odd lot," but again adjourned the case to Feb. 1929, for further consideration. In Feb., after hearing further argument, the county ct. judge found that the workman was partially incapacitated, that there were classes of employment in which he could earn his pre-accident wages, & that 7s. 6d. was sufficient compensation during the two weeks in question. The workman appealed:—Held: the findings of the county ct. judge amounted to a finding of fact that the workman was not an "odd lot," & there was evidence to support such a finding & no misdirection.—EVANS v. EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 274, C. A.

3295b. ———.]—A partially incapacitated workman in receipt of reduced compensation was unable to obtain work & claimed compensation on the basis of total incapacity on the ground that the injury was responsible for the fact that he was now only fit for light work, which was in fact unobtainable. The county ct. judge found that the workman was neither an "odd lot" nor within 1925 Act, s. 9 (4), but fit for light work. He also found that his failure to obtain employment was due to industrial conditions & not to his physical disability, & that the employers were right in reducing the compensation. The workman appealed:—Held: the findings of the county ct. judge were the exact findings in the case of Cardiff Corpn. v. Hall, No. 3284, which was approved in Bevan v.

Nixon's Navigation Co., Ltd., No. 3243b, & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—WILLIAMS v. WATSON (H. J. & S. A.) (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 151, C. A.

3298a. ———.]—A wood-working machinist cut his hand on a circular saw. He was paid full compensation for over two months, but when the cut had healed the compensation was stopped & he applied for continuance of the compensation. After filing the application he obtained a job with fresh employers & cut himself again. At the hearing, at which it was alleged that the workman was suffering from traumatic neurasthenia, the county ct. judge found that he was able to do light work on the ground in the open air, but away from machinery, if such work could be found, but that he was quite unfit to go back to his old job. On the ground that there was no evidence that there was any light work available of that particular limited kind, the judge awarded him continuance of compensation at the full rate from the date when it had been stopped. The employers appealed:—Held: there was no evidence to justify an award for payment of compensation at the full rate. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—ATKINS v. SPRECKLEY (CHARLES) & CO., LTD. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 59, C. A.

3299a. ———.]—A workman met with an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment which resulted in the loss of his right arm. He received full compensation based on total incapacity for some time, when it was reduced. Owing to failure to obtain work he again claimed full compensation. Arbn. proceedings having taken place, the county ct. judge made an award based on partial incapacity, holding that the failure to obtain work was not "wholly or mainly" due to the injury, but to the state of the labour market:—Held: there was material upon which the county ct. judge could base his decision. The workman having failed to prove that his failure to obtain work was a consequence, wholly or mainly, of the injury, & there being no misdirection, the appeal failed.—MOTHERSDALE v. CLEVELAND BRIDGE & ENGINEERING CO. (1930), 99 L. J. K. B. 261; 142 L. T. 541; 23 B. W. C. C. 47, C. A.

3299b. ———.]—A press-worker, aged fifty-seven years, lost the second & third fingers of his right hand in an accident while at work. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge held that owing to the man's age & to the fact of there being two million unemployed in the labour market, it was quite impossible for him to find work of any description, & therefore his labour was an "odd lot." The employer appealed:—Held: there was misdirection. Appeal allowed. New trial.—TAYLOR v. DANKS (EDWIN) & CO. (OLDBURY), LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 486, C. A.

compensation until he was re-employed at full wages at his old work in Mar. 1925. In Aug. 1925, he was discharged owing to slackness of trade & received unemployment benefit for a year. He was unable to give any clear evidence of what he had done subsequently, but from Oct. 1928, to June, 1929, he was employed by the guardians. From June, 1929, he was again in receipt of unemployment benefit. He made a claim for compensation in Aug. 1929. Evidence was given that he had applied three or four times to his old employers for work, but unsuccessfully, & that he had been unsuccessful in his applications for work to two other firms. The employers alleged that the only reason why they had been unable to re-employ him was because he had always applied for work at times when there was no work to be had, but that there had been work available for him in the past, & there was work available for him at the date of the hearing. There was no evidence that the refusal of work by the other two firms was due to the fact that he had lost an eye. The judge found that the workman had failed to obtain employment wholly or mainly in consequence of his injury, & made an award in his favour under sect. 9 (4) on the basis of total incapacity. The employers appealed on the ground that there was no evidence of either partial or total incapacity & no evidence to bring the case within sect. 9 (4):—Held: there was misdirection & no evidence to support a finding of incapacity due to the injury.—HUGHES v. PWLL-HELI GRANITE CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 637, C. A.

—J—A case maker sustained an injury to an eye, resulting in the removal of part of the iris. The injury was an obvious one, but did not prevent him doing his old work. He was paid compensation until his employer stopped the weekly payments on the ground that the workman was able to do his ordinary work. The workman claimed full compensation on the ground that he ought to be deemed to be totally incapacitated under sect. 9 (4) as amended by the 1931 Act. He alleged that he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment which he was capable of doing. He called two employers as witnesses on the hearing of his application for arbn., who said that they preferred not to employ him as not being a fit man. The county ct. judge found that the workman had sufficiently recovered as to be fit for his former employment, but was not satisfied that he came within either clause (i.) or clause (ii.) of sect. 9 (4) of 1925 Act as amended by the 1931 Act. The workman appealed:—Held: the conclusion to which the arbitrator had come was one of fact & there was no jurisdiction.—Fox v. GREAT WESTERN SAWMILLS (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 621, C. A.

3301a. Ability to do work in ordinary course of employer's business.—On Jan. 5, 1923, the workman, who was at the time of this appeal fifty-nine years old, while working as a general labourer, was injured by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment by resps. His left foot & leg thickened & swelled, & ever since he has walked with a

limp with the aid of sticks, & been unable to do any work involving standing up. In Jan. 1924, an award was made in his favour for full compensation on the ground that his injuries left his labour as an "odd lot," but on resp.'s undertaking to give him some work suitable to his impaired powers & to pay him a wage equal to his pre-accident earnings, the only award made was a declaration of liability. He was given the work of cleaning valves to do, for which he could sit at a bench, & he continued so to work till Nov. 1929, when, owing to slackness of trade, he, with many other able-bodied & injured men, was discharged. Since that time he had been unable to obtain any work, employers having told him they were slack & had nothing to suit him. Appls, having refused to pay him compensation, he filed a request for arbn. & the county ct. judge awarded him full compensation on the basis of total incapacity on the ground that he was the class of man for whom employers were called upon to find special jobs of light work, & that consequently his labour was an "odd lot":—Held: the workman being able to do, & having done, the job for six years, of cleaning valves, a job necessary to be done in the ordinary course of business of his employers, his labour was not an "odd lot," that was to say, he was not only able to do certain very special jobs depending on finding a very special employer who either from compassion or because he had a special job was able to give him employment, therefore he was not totally incapacitated.—*EARL v. 3301b. Occasional unemployment.—A workman recovered from an injury by accident sufficiently to return to his old work though he was unable to do all that he could do before the accident. After his return he was occasionally without work, owing to slackness of trade. While still employed he made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that he was fit only for light work but had failed to obtain employment wholly or mainly in consequence of his injury, & held that under the 1931 Act his incapacity must be treated as total. He ordered payment to him by his employer of £1 10s. a week from the date of his return to work, & to continue. The employers appealed:—Held: the award could not be supported. Appeal allowed. 3305a. —.]—An omnibus conductor suffered injury to an arm by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. After he had been in receipt of compensation for two years, the employer applied for a review requesting diminution or termination of the weekly payments. The employer's medical evidence was to the effect that the workman was fit to do his pre-accident work. The workman's medical evidence was to the effect that the workman was only able to do light work of a special kind. The county ct. judge in a short judgment said that the onus was on the employer to prove his case on the issues raised & he had failed to discharge it. He therefore made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: having regard to the evidence given before him, the county ct. judge must have intended to find in his judgment that the workman was so disabled that his earning capacity was only that of an "odd lot" in the labour market. Appeal dismissed.—CROSVILLE MOTOR SERVICES, LTD. v. JONES (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 179, C. A.

3315a. —.]—A workman was employed as a seaman on a fishing-boat at £3 a week. On Feb. 11, 1926, his finger was cut by a rope, & he was paid compensation until July 2, when he was certified fit for light work. He then obtained a situation on a trawler, until Sept., payment being on a profit-sharing basis, & his share of the profits being £21. He next worked on another trawler until Feb. 1927, payment being on the same basis, but there were no profits. On Nov. 5, 1926, he filed a request for arbn. claiming half the difference between his pre-accident wages & what he was able to earn on the trawlers on the profit-sharing basis. The county ct. judge assessed his weekly earning capacity since July 2, 1926, at £2 5s., & awarded him 7s. 6d. a week compensation:—Held: (1) there was no evidence that the workman suffered any loss of earnings by reason of his injury, & no evidence to support the award; (2) the workman had not discharged the onus of showing a reasonable probability that incapacity would ensue in the future, & was not entitled to a declaration of liability.—MCLEOD v. 3324a. How calculated—Death after receiving weekly payments—& sum in redemption.—A workman entitled to compensation after receiving weekly payments amounting to £115 10s., was paid a sum of £750 in redemption of all further payments. He subsequently died as the result of the injuries from the accident for which he had been paid compensation:—Held: in calculating the amount payable as compensation under sect. 8 of the Act to his widow & children, under sect. 8 (2) (iii), the amount paid to him weekly must be deducted from the lump sum payable to the widow, which was £300, so as not in any case to reduce that sum to less than £200. Then under sect. 8 (3) (iii), the sum of £200 left must be deducted from the redemption sum of £750 & the remainder of the £750, namely, £550, must be deducted from the amount of the children's allowance, which, calculated in accordance with sect. 8 (3) (i), was £788 2s., & the amount therefore payable on the death of the workman was £238 2s.

Per ROMER, L.J.: The literal construction of the words "lump sum payable" in sect. 8 (3) (iii) must be rejected & the words read as meaning the lump sum which would have been payable if there had been no redemption of the weekly payments.—SWAN v. sf. Disfigurement—No evidence of difficulty in obtaining employment.—The employers of a dock labourer, who had lost his left index finger by accident in their employ & had been receiving compensation, obtained a medical reference as a result of which the referee reported that the workman had again become fit for his ordinary work. It was, however, not in dispute that the workman was permanently disfigured by the loss of his finger. In arbn. proceedings brought by the employers, the arbitrator refused a motion at their instance that he should end compensation, & pronounced a suspensory award, on the ground that the workman's disfigurement might make it difficult for him to obtain employment. The workman tendered no evidence to show that his prospects of employment had been prejudiced by the disfigurement:—Held: in the absence of evidence showing that the workman's disfigurement would make it difficult or impossible for him to secure employment, the arbitrator was not entitled to make a suspensory award, but was bound to end compensation.—MAVOY v. 3331 i. What may be taken into account—Transitional benefit.—A workman was killed as the result of an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He lived in family with his father & mother, one brother, & three sisters, one of whom was a mental defective. The family was supported for the ordinary necessities of life out of a family fund, the only contributions to which were the father's transitional benefit & the deceased workman's wages. In computing the father's transitional benefit the Unemployment Assistance Board allowed a certain sum weekly for the maintenance of each unemployed member of the family, amounting to 32s. for the father, mother, & three younger children, & 7s. 6d. for the defective, but, owing to the Assistance Regulations which prevented an award of transitional benefit exceeding what could have been awarded as unemployment benefit, the actual weekly benefit received by the father amounted to 32s. only. The arbitrator having held that the defective was totally dependent upon the deceased workman's wages, in respect that, owing to the method of computation by the Board, the allowance for her maintenance out of the father's benefit had never actually been received by him, having been counter-balanced by the surplus of the deceased workman's earnings over the cost of his maintenance:—Held: (1) the father's transitional benefit fell to be regarded as belonging to him as his contribution to the fund to be distributed for the maintenance of the family; (2) although the Unemployment Assistance Board, for the purpose of computing the father's benefit, had allocated it among the members of the family, there was no evidence that the family fund had been expended upon the maintenance of the family in accordance with such allocation; (3) the arbitrator had, accordingly, misdirected himself in finding that the defective was not dependent upon her father's benefit; (4) as the presumption that every claimant on a common fund is partially dependent upon each contributor thereto had not been displaced, the defective should be treated as partially dependent on her father's contribution & partially on the deceased workman's earnings. Appeal allowed.—FORRESTER'S CURATOR v. NESS & Co., [1937] S. C. 441.—SCOT.

3339 i. From what sum deducted—Not from children allowance.—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, enacts that weekly payments of compensation made to the workman before his death shall be deducted from the lump sum, but not from the children's allowance:—Held: such payments fell to be deducted from the lump sum prior to its aggregation with the children's allowance, & not from the aggregate of the lump sum & the allowance; & accordingly, such portion of the children's allowance, calculated according to the rules, as was necessary to raise the aggregate to the maximum of £600, fell to be added to the lump sum after deduction from the latter of any payments made to the workman.—*FAHRELL v. 3348 iv. Contributions from unemployment benefit.—A workman who was fatally injured in his employment was, at the time of his death, living in family with his father, mother, & two sisters. The family was maintained out of a common fund, to which the workman, his father, & other members of the family contributed weekly, the whole fund being expended upon necessities. During the year preceding the workman's death, his father was in employment only for eleven weeks; during the remainder of the year his father's sole contribution to the fund consisted of unemployment benefit. The workmen's own contribution to the fund during the year amounted to rather more than one-third of it; his wages averaged £1 13s. 9d., & he contributed to the fund, on an average, 13s. 9d. more than he received from it. The other members of the family were all partially dependent on his contribution; & on his death, they claimed compensation:—Held: the compensation payable to claimants fell to be measured by the extent to which the workman's death had in fact deprived them of the ordinary necessities of life.

Opinions that, in determining the extent of the claimants' partial dependency on the workman's earnings, the arbitrator was entitled to take into account the father's contributions to the common fund from unemployment benefit.—*POLLOCK v. The magistrate found that the cost of the keep of deceased came to more than the amount which he paid into the family & that applts. were not dependent on him:—Held: the magistrate was entitled to find that applts. were not dependent on deceased.—*EDMONSTONE v. The arbitrator took the loss of the father's earnings into consideration in assessing the lump sum payable to the dependants. 3359d. — Amount of lump sum.]—A workman died as the result of an accident, having previously received from his employers £65 5s. 5d. in weekly payments as compensation. On his death his employers paid into ct. £534 14s. 7d., made up of £234 14s. 7d., i.e., £300 less £65 5s. 5d., for the lump sum payable to the widow, & £300 for children's allowance. The total amount to which the children would have been entitled, if not limited in any way, was calculated to be £617 14s. The county ct. judge decided that the amount paid in was reasonable &, at the request of the widow, made an order for payment out of part of the amount :—Held : (1) the amount paid into ct. by the employers was insufficient, & the dependants were entitled to the full £600, since if the lump sum calculated under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 8 (2), was reduced below £300, then, if the figures warranted it, the children's allowance under sect. 8 (3) might exceed £300, provided that the lump sum & the children's allowance together did not exceed £600; (2) the widow was not deprived of her right of appeal by having accepted payment of part of the amount paid in, because, although she might have approbated the order on her own behalf, she had reprobated it in the interests of her children. (3) Seem : a request for arbn., & not an appeal, was the proper procedure for the widow.—MALCOLM v. BARBER, WALKER & Co., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 470; 20 B. W. O. C. 516, C. A.

3362a. Two accidents—Statutory maximum inapplicable.]—A workman who had been partially incapacitated by an accident & was in receipt of 19s. 6d. a week compensation was, whilst in the employment of the same employers, totally incapacitated for two months by a second accident in respect of which the compensation, calculated according to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, was 22s. 6d. a week :—Held : that there was nothing in the Act of 1925 which restricted the total liability of the employers for compensation in respect of the two accidents to the 30s. mentioned in proviso (c) to sect. 9 (1) of the Act; that proviso was confined to the weekly payment in respect of the particular accident then under consideration; & the workman was therefore entitled to the two sums of 19s. 6d. & 22s. 6d.—THOMPSON v. 3377a. Accident occurring before operative date of 1923 Act—Compensation to be calculated by reference to 1906 Act.]—A workman earning £1 18s. 6d. a week was injured by an accident on July 10, 1923. Liability was admitted & compensation paid. The 1923 Act did not come into operation until Jan. 1, 1924. In Sept. 1924, he resumed work at lighter employment, but was in receipt of higher wages. In Dec. 1928, he was discharged. In June, 1929, he filed an application for arbn. The county ct. judge found that he was still partially incapacitated & made an award for a weekly payment of £1. The employers appealed :—Held : the accident having occurred before Jan. 1, 1924, compensation for partial incapacity should have been awarded in accordance with the 1906 Act, & the judge, in making the award he did, must have applied the principles of the later Acts.—WILLIAMS v. 3374 i. — Offer of suitable work—As non-union worker.]—Held : as the employers had not discharged the onus of proving that acceptance of the condition in their offer would not have

—A workman was injured on Feb. 6, 1929. Out of the fifty-two weeks prior to that date he had been in work for twenty-three weeks & out of work for twenty-nine. He had been employed by the same employer since 1914, but owing to bad trade his contract of service had since 1921 become terminable at a day's notice, & it was the practice of the employer to put up notices from time to time announcing that the particular mill in which the workman was engaged would cease work on the following week. Whenever he was thus thrown out of work the workman attempted to get other work, but always failed & had to draw unemployment benefit. He would, if the mill happened to have reopened, apply at the works on the chance of being taken on again. Liability for the accident was admitted by the employer, but a dispute arose as to the amount of the average weekly earnings on which the rate of compensation should be calculated. The county ct. judge held that the total earnings during the fifty-two weeks should be divided by twenty-three, representing the number of weeks of employment. There was no evidence before the judge that the irregular cessation of work was a normal incident of the workman's employment beyond the statement of the workman that employment had been irregular since 1921. The employer appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had not computed the workman's average weekly earnings in the manner best calculated to give the rate per week at which the workman was being remunerated. Appeal allowed. Case remitted for reconsideration on the basis of 1925 Act, s. 10 (i), & the proviso thereto.—McGEE v. UNITED STEEL COMPANIES, LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 273, C. A.

3377c. —.]—At the hearing of an arbn. at which the county ct. judge found partial incapacity only, a dispute arose as to the average weekly earnings of the workman, a stevedore. The workman claimed that they amounted to £5 10s., but the employer contended that they were £3 10s., being the actual weekly amount paid by them to the workman while in their employment. The county ct. judge, without considering the provisions of 1925 Act, s. 10, in calculating the average weekly earnings, took the figure of £5 10s. for the purpose of assessing the amount of compensation. The employer appealed:—Held: average weekly earnings must be calculated in accordance with 1925 Act, s. 10. Appeal allowed. 3390a. —.]—A miner, in 1913, sustained a fracture of his right leg & was wholly incapacitated, for which he received full compensation at 35s. a week. The employers subsequently claimed to reduce the compensation to 3s. 5d. a week, on the ground that he was then capable of earning wages as a clerk, storekeeper, or lampman. The workman filed an application for arbn. claiming the continuance of compensation for total incapacity. The judge referred certain questions to the medical referee who, in his replies, stated that the workman suffered pain in his right leg which would prevent him standing eight hours as a storekeeper or lampman; but which would not prevent him doing the full work of a clerk. The judge examined letters written by the workman & found that he was sufficiently well educated to earn 30s. a week as a clerk &, on the answers given by the medical referee, made an award for 7s. 8d. a week with costs. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of fact & no misdirection.—YEOMAN v. GREAT WESTERN COLLIERY CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 547, C. A.

3392a. Lack of accommodation for workman's family.]—A workman employed by a railway co. as a foreman ganger, living in a village in Lincolnshire with his wife, whose lungs were delicate, & his four children, was partially incapacitated as the result of an injury from an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. His average weekly earnings before the accident amounted to £3 1s. 11d. The co. offered him, first at B. & then at S., work which he was capable of doing & in which he could earn £2 6s. 9d. a week; & they made him weekly payments of 7s. 7d. The workman refused the employment offered as not being "suitable" on the grounds that, as he alleged: (a) in neither of the places mentioned could he find accommodation for his family, & (b) that his wife's health would suffer if she had to live in either of them; & he applied to the county ct. for an award of compensation:—Held: the lack of accommodation for the family of the workman & the possible or probable injury to his wife's health were irrelevant to the question whether available employment was "suitable."—*BROUGHTON v. 3401a. — Statutory duty to make contribution.]—A teacher, while teaching a class, met with an accident which resulted in her being permanently incapacitated & having to retire. She was accordingly awarded by the Board of Education an annual superannuation allowance under Teachers (Superannuation) Act, 1925 (c. 59). Under that Act both the teacher & her employers had been compelled to make contributions towards superannuation allowance. These contributions were paid into the Exchequer, but did not represent the whole of the moneys required for the ultimate payment of the superannuation allowance, which was made up out of State funds. The superannuation allowance was paid out of the Exchequer to the Board of Education, which paid it to the workman. The employers claimed to deduct from the weekly payments of compensation a sum equivalent to the proportion of the superannuation allowance contributed by him, as being a payment, allowance or benefit received by the workman from the employers during the period of his incapacity within sect. 9 (1) (b). On a claim by the workman for the sums deducted, the county ct. judge made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: although there was a statutory obligation on the employers to make certain contributions to the Exchequer, the allowance was received by the workman from State funds which had never been in the employer's possession or under his control & must therefore be disregarded in computing the weekly payments. Appeal allowed.—CARTWRIGHT v. CROSSLEY & PORTER ORPHAN HOME & SCHOOL, GOVERNORS (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 476, C. A.

3401b. — Must be paid in respect of incapacity.]—By Local Government & other Officers' Superannuation Act, 1922 (c. 59), s. 6 (3), where a servant of a local authority adopting the Act has attained the age of sixty-five, he shall cease to hold his employment, provided that the local authority may, with the consent of the servant, by resolution extend the period of employment for one year or any less period & so from time to time as they may deem expedient. A dustman, aged sixty-seven, employed by a local authority which had adopted the above Act was injured & became entitled to be paid compensation. He was paid full compensation for a short time & then given a small weekly pension. The workman claimed compensation on the basis of total incapacity. There was no evidence as to whether the employment of the workman had been extended by resolution, or as to whether the pension was paid in respect of the incapacity. The county ct. judge found partial incapacity & held that the pension was being paid by the employers in respect of such incapacity. He, therefore, made an award of compensation for partial incapacity, reducing the weekly payment by the amount of the weekly pension. The workman appealed:—Held: there were insufficient materials before the county ct. judge to enable him to come to a proper decision as to whether the pension was in respect of incapacity or not. Appeal allowed. Case remitted for rehearing.—YATES v. HEMSWORTH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 649, C. A.

3423a. Payments received under part-time agency agreement.]—A workman was employed as a fitter by a firm of engineers, & at the same time was acting under an agreement with a benefit society as their part-time agent. Under this agreement he agreed to obey the orders of the society & perform all his duties in accordance with official instructions. He was to be paid a weekly salary calculated on a percentage basis. The workman suffered an accident in the course of his employment as a fitter. The county ct. judge, in order to compute his average weekly earnings, added together the weekly payments received from both sources. The employers appealed on the ground that the relationship between the society & the workman was that of principal & agent, & not master & servant, & that his payments under the agreement should not be taken into account:—Held: the judge had rightly construed the agreement as establishing the relationship of master & servant between the society & the workman.—*ROBERTS v. He was also paid 1s. 3d. a meal in respect of meals obtained by him when engaged at a distance on his employer's business. The county ct. judge found that the allowance for meals was a sum paid to cover a special expense within the meaning of sect. 10 (iv.), & refused to reckon it as part of the workman's average weekly earnings. The workman appealed:—Held: the finding was one of fact & there was no misdirection.—GREGORY v. WADDINGTON & Co. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 590, C. A.

3431a. —.]—A cotton spinner earning £3 19s. 7d. a week was disabled by an industrial disease. In Apr. 1926, he obtained an award for a weekly payment of £1 a week as compensation based on an estimated earning capacity of £1 19s. 7d. a week. He remained in fact unemployed except for a short time in Oct. 1929, when he obtained work as a labourer at £1 18s. a week. In Apr. 1932, he obtained work as a bookmaker's clerk at £1 5s. a week. The work was seasonal, intermittent, & for part of a day only. He applied for a review & an increase of the weekly payments. At the arbn. the workman gave evidence that he had attempted to obtain more lucrative work but had failed. This evidence was not contradicted by the employer. The county ct. judge found that the work of a bookmaker's clerk was part-time work & of such a nature as afforded no criterion as to the amount the workman was able to earn. He therefore dismissed the application on the ground that there had been no change of circumstances sufficient to justify a review of the amount that the workman had already been found able to earn. On appeal by the workman the Ct. of Appeal held, on the uncontradicted evidence of the workman, that there had been a change of circumstances, as the workman had proved by taking proper steps to obtain employment that his earning capacity was in fact less than had been estimated when the original award was made, & an award must be made on the basis that the workman was only able to earn £1 5s. a week. The employer appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: the words in sect. 9 (3) (i) "the average weekly amount which he is earning or is able to earn in some suitable employment or business after the accident"

are alternative, & the qualifying words "in some suitable employment or business" must be excluded from the first alternative, so that the sect. should read "the average weekly amount which, after the accident, he is earning, or, in some suitable employment or business is able to earn."

In this case 25s. a week was all that the workman was actually earning after making bond fide efforts to obtain work suitable to his condition. Those earnings were fixed as a fact & the county ct. judge had no power to increase the amount for the purpose of assessing compensation.

I see no justification for reading into the words 'the average weekly amount which he is earning,' any such phrase as 'for full time employment' or 'for a full week's employment.' These words stand unqualified, as the first alternative. They are not qualified, as in the second alternative, by the words 'in some suitable employment or business.' In my opinion, the Act provides a simple method, though it may not be a logical one, as the actual earnings of the workman are presumably conditioned by the existing economic position of the labour market—an element which falls to be excluded in assessing the amount which he 'is able to earn' (LORD THANKERTON).—*DELTA MILL (1919), LTD. v. 3455c. Occasional increased wages when working away from home.]—The workman, a ganger, aged fifty-five years, met with an accident in the course of his employment & two fingers of his right hand were injured. After receiving compensation on the basis of total incapacity for about four months, he resumed work with his old employers. He was afterwards discharged & was out of work for about two months. He then obtained work with a municipal authority, his weekly wages varying from £2 to £3 1s. 6d. He claimed compensation under the Act, on the basis of partial incapacity, alleging that his average weekly earnings before the accident were £4 & that he was able to earn £2 10s. 8d. after the accident. At the hearing he stated that his average pre-accident weekly earnings as a ganger when at home amounted to £3 15s., & when not at home £5. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the workman of £1 a week to take effect from the date of the accident. The county ct. judge said that he thought he had arrived at that figure by taking into account the workman's occasional pre-accident earnings of £5 a week:—Held: there was no ground for interfering with the award of £1 per week, as the county ct. judge had not considered anything irrelevant. The award must therefore be affirmed.—FORD v. WELLERMAN Bros. (1930), 99 L. J. K. B. 600; 143 L. T. 590; 23 B. W. C. C. 183, C. A.

(c. 58). On these occasions he was paid for each day he was so engaged a day's wage out of the checkweigh fund, a fund contributed to by his fellow workmen in the mine. He also was employed as a branch official of his local trade union to collect subscriptions of members, for which he received remuneration. On the days on which he was engaged in one or other of these capacities he was absent from the mine with the consent of the colliery co., but received no payment from them. The workman, having met with an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, commenced proceedings for compensation, & claimed that the amount received in respect of the foregoing employments ought to be taken into account in estimating the amount of his weekly earnings. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the workman on the basis of the compensation claimed. On appeal by the employers:—Held: the payments were made to the workman in respect of concurrent contracts of service within sect. 10 (ii.) of 1925 Act, & therefore he was entitled to have them taken into account in computing the amount of his average weekly earnings as a collier.—*UNSWORTH v. 3479a. Due to spread-over arrangement.—A collier was certified to be partially disabled by the industrial disease of silicosis as from Feb. 14, 1933, & later to be totally incapacitated. During the twelve months preceding the disablement work had been slack at the colliery & during part of the time a spread-over system was instituted with the consent of the senior workmen in the colliery, who otherwise would have been in continuous employment under a seniority rule which gave them a preference in employment. As the result of the spread-over the collier, who was a senior workman, was employed during its continuance at first for one week in three & later for alternate weeks. For the purpose of computing his compensation it was necessary to ascertain his average weekly earnings during the twelve months preceding his disablement:—Held: the spread-over system regulated the conditions of the workman's

Applt., who was employed by resps. as a riveter on piecework, received notice, on Sept. 3, 1926, owing to the coal strike of that year, that there was no more work available for him. He accordingly ceased to work till Dec. 8, when he was re-employed by resps. On Jan. 11, 1927, he met with an accident causing total incapacity. On an application for compensation, the county ct. judge held the interruption was a normal incident & there was no break in the employment, & he awarded compensation on the basis of applt.'s earnings for the twelve months prior to the accident.—Held: the interval was not one of the incidents of a discontinuous employment, & there was a break in the employment, & the case must go back to the judge to assess compensation on that basis.—*GARDNER v. 3488a. Workman "stood off."]—A roofer received, in addition to his wages, a "board allowance" of 28s. a week to cover his expenses when working away from home. This was paid to him whether he was in fact away from home or not. He was "stood off" for two months, & on his return was re-engaged on the terms that he received in addition to his wages 12s. a week travelling allowance when he was living at home & 28s. a week board allowance when he was living away from home. He was injured by accident a few days after his return to work. He was at first paid compensation at 30s. a week, but as he recovered the compensation was reduced by stages. He objected to the basis of average weekly earnings on which the compensation for partial incapacity was being paid, & claimed that his allowances should be reckoned as part of his earnings. The county ct. judge held that there was a break in the employment when the workman returned after being "stood off," & that the allowances paid after the break were special expenses not to be reckoned as part of the earnings. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—WOODHOUSE v. TURNERISING ROOFING CO., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 326, C. A.

promoted boatswain of a steam trawler, owing to the illness of one of the vessel's officers just before she left harbour. Within twenty-four hours of putting to sea, the workman suffered an accident. In the course of subsequent proceedings regarding the payment of compensation, an issue was raised between the parties as to whether the weekly payment should be calculated on the earnings of a boatswain or a deck-hand. The county ct. judge held that at the time of the accident the workman was employed in the grade of a boatswain, & awarded compensation on that basis. The employers appealed:—Held: the judge had rightly directed himself as to the grade of the workman at the date of the accident.—MARCHANT v. CHAR STEAM TRAWLING CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. 3502a. Employment by local authority under scheme of relief.]—Applt. council had employed a workman under a scheme for the relief of unemployment. Under this scheme, men who had been unemployed for a considerable time were employed for a period of nine weeks, after which it was unlikely that they would be further employed by appls. for a considerable time. During the ninth week of such employment, the workman met with an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, & died. It was contended for appls. that this employment was of a casual type, & was of such short duration that it could not afford a basis of assessment of average weekly earnings, so that the case came within the proviso to Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 10:—Held: (1) nine weeks was an ample period of time upon which to base an assessment of average weekly earnings, & the case came within sect. 8 (2) of the Act; (2) the ct. must look at the nature of the employment, & not at the motive actuating an employer when he employs a workman.—*SUMMERS v. 3524a. —.]—A wood machinist & cabinet-maker lost the index finger of his left hand by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He recovered sufficiently to be able to do his pre-accident work, & the employers applied for termination of the weekly payments. At the arbn. the only evidence before the county ct. judge was to the effect that the workman would suffer no loss of capacity for his work in the future, & on that evidence the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments. No declaration of liability had been asked for at the arbn. but the workman appealed on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to justify a finding of complete recovery & that, in view of the fact that the left index finger was missing, a declaration of liability should have been granted:—Held: the workman having produced no evidence that by reason of his accident he had either been rendered ineligible for employment with any employer or would probably in the future be incapacitated for work, no grounds existed for granting a declaration of liability. Appeal dismissed.—BRYAN v. UPLAND (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 221, C. A.

3530b. —.]—A miner had his right eye injured by a splinter of coal while working at the coal face & was paid compensation therefor. The employers subsequently applied to terminate the weekly payments. At the hearing the medical evidence was conflicting, & accordingly the judge referred certain questions to the medical referee, who answered that the workman was fit for work at the coal face & that he did not think that there was any greater danger to either eye from such work than there would be if the vision of the right eye were normal. The judge thereupon terminated the weekly payments, but made a declaration of liability. The employers appealed:—Held: there was no evidence of any reasonable probability of incapacity arising at a later day, & therefore, no ground for making a declaration of liability.—WEST LEIGH COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. MCNEIL (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 541, C. A.

3530c. —.]—A dyer was certified as suffering from dermatitis due to dust or liquids. The employers denied liability on the ground that the disease was not contracted through long continued exposure to dust or liquids in dyeing & that he was only disabled for employment in the process of dyeing. The county ct. judge awarded compensation to the date of hearing & granted a declaration of liability, but not in the terms set out in McNicholas v. West Leigh Colliery Co., Ltd., No. 3545b, post, stating that there was a reasonable probability of future disability. The employer appealed. On the appeal the matter was referred to the county ct. judge for inquiry on this point. The county ct. judge replied that there had not been established either the probability of a fresh attack without repetition of exposure, or that the probability of a fresh attack would be due to the last attack:—Held: there was no evidence to support the granting of a declaration of liability.—PEARSON v. JOHN WALTON OF COLLYHURST, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 106, C. A.

3530d. Admission by employer of partial incapacity.—On Sept. 26, 1926, a workman was kicked on the knee by a horse & injured. He was paid full compensation until May 5, 1927, when the employers gave notice of their intention to reduce the weekly compensation to 10s., & did in fact so reduce it. The workman applied for 30s. to be continued. The employers in their answer submitted to an award of 10s. a week to continue. The county ct. judge found that the man was able to do his full work on May 5, 1927, but ordered that compensation should be paid at 30s. up to July 4, 1927, & then terminate altogether:—Held: the award was inconsequent, & the case must be sent back to the judge for a rehearing.—SHEAVY v. TITE (B. W.) & SONS (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 616, C. A.

3530e. Continuing incapacity solely due to pre-accident disease.—A carter fell from his cart & was injured. The employers paid him compensation until they caused him to be examined by a doctor who reported that the effects of his injuries had passed away & that his continuing incapacity was due solely to disseminated sclerosis from which the carter had been suffering before the accident. The employers accordingly ceased paying compensation. On a claim for continued compensation, the county ct. judge held that the

A dispute having arisen as to the workman's fitness for employment, the employers, in 1934, presented an application for a medical reference, which stated that appots. "aver that the claimant is now fit for his ordinary work, which contention the claimant denies & maintains that he is only fit for light work." A reference in the form prescribed by the Act of Sederunt of Feb. 28, 1933, was thereafter made by the Sheriff-clerk to a medical referee, who was directed to "give his certificate as to the condition of the claimant & his fitness for employment, stating whether the claimant has wholly or partially recovered from the injury by accident." The medical referee certified that the claimant, although still lame, "is wholly recovered from the injuries by accident, & is, in respect of these, fit for his usual work":—Held: the nature of the dispute which had arisen between the parties warranted a reference to the medical referee in the form adopted by the sheriff-clerk, & on the facts as stated, the arbitrator was entitled to end the workman's right to compensation. Appeal dismissed.—OLIVER v. UNITED COLLIERS, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. Suppt. 165.—SCOT.

sb. Incapacity continuing — Unreasonable conduct of workman.—A brusher in a colliery, who had sustained injury to his back through an accident in 1928, was paid compensation as for total incapacity until Sept. 1929, when a dispute arose as to his right to further compensation. After sundry remits to the medical referee as to the workman's incapacity, the employers, in July, 1931, obtained a further reference on the questions whether the workman was fit for his ordinary work, &

"whether, & to what extent, claimant's incapacity (if any) was due to the accident. The referee reported that the workman was not fit for work as a brusher, but was fit for light labouring work. He further reported that the workman's incapacity was primarily due to the accident in 1928, from which he had not recovered, but that it remained owing to his failure to do his part in exercising the bruised back muscles. The workman offered to prove that he had carried out his own doctor's instructions as to the exercises to be taken, but the arbitrator refused to allow further inquiry, & ended the workman's right to compensation:—Held: as the real question raised was whether in the circumstances the workman's conduct was reasonable or unreasonable, the arbitrator should not have ended compensation without inquiring into the whole facts regarding the alleged failure of the workman to take the necessary steps to effect a cure.—*MORRIS v. In Nov. 1932, he was incapacitated by dermatitis due, as found by the county ct. judge, to long-continued exposure to dust or liquids, but had recovered in Apr. 1933, & was then out of employment until Sept. 1933. On Sept. 6, 1933, he returned to his old work with resps., but after doing six intermittent days' work broke out in a rash again, & the medical referee, on Oct. 17, 1933, certified that he was suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids, & thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed, & that as a result of previous attacks there was a reasonable probability of a recurrent incapacitation through recrudescence of attacks of the disease. The workman made a claim under 1925 Act, as extended by orders of the Secretary of State, for compensation for an accident resulting from disablement by dermatitis. The county ct. judge awarded him a certain amount of compensation for the period he was disabled, but found that after that period he was fit for anything but dusty work & refused to grant him a declaration of liability against the employers in the event of any future incapacity from a recrudescence of the disease:—Held: a workman had no absolute right to a suspensory award that was to be a declaration of liability, & the county ct. judge had a discretion to grant or refuse such a declaration & had not wrongly exercised that discretion.—*HOLMES v. On a claim for a continuance of compensation the county ct. judge on Dec. 10, 1930, found that by Nov. 3, 1930, the workman had become capable of earning as much as before his accident, though he should not for the present resume work as a guillotine cutter or attend machinery, & awarded him a lump sum representing compensation from Sept. 22 to Nov. 3. The award stated that the lump sum was "in full satisfaction & discharge of all claims for" compensation. No request was made in the county ct. for a declaration of liability. The workman appealed:—Held: the award should be varied by deleting the words "in full satisfaction & discharge of all claims for" & adding a declaration of liability in the terms of *King v. The employers admitted liability to pay compensation, & paid the workman on the basis of total incapacity until Aug. 1932, when they ended the weekly payments in accordance with notice given by them under sect. 12. The workman did not serve a counter notice, but filed a request for arbn. claiming that he was still totally incapacitated. On the evidence the county ct. judge gave judgment to the effect that he was not satisfied that the workman's condition was the effect of the original accident, nor was he satisfied that he was incapacitated; but he was satisfied that there had been an accident arising out of & in the course of the employment, the result of which might lessen his earning capacity in the future. He therefore granted a declaration of liability, but made his award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the award & no misdirection. (1) Where a county ct. judge, upon a certificate of a medical referee that a workman who has been injured has entirely recovered & is fit for his usual employment, not containing any suggestion of the possibility of a recurrence of incapacity due to the injury at a future date, makes an order terminating the compensation, there is no jurisdiction to make a declaration of liability. (2) The fact that the certificate does not refer, one way or the other, to the possibility of future recurrence or complications, does not make it in any way ambiguous. Liability was admitted & compensation paid until she was able to resume her former employment. After she had resumed her employment for a month she filed a request for arbn., claiming a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge refused the declaration on the ground that there was no evidence "at this stage" to support the application, but stated that he was making an award protecting her in the future should anything unforeseen arise. He thereupon made an award dismissing the application for a declaration of liability, "there being no evidence at this stage to support the application." The workman appealed:—Held: by refusing a declaration of liability but inserting in his award the words "at this stage," the county ct. judge had safeguarded the workman by not prejudicing any future application that might be made in different circumstances, & there was evidence on which in this case he could properly do so. —In Nov. 1926, a seaman was moving planks during heavy weather in the Channel, when, owing to a lurch of the ship, he was thrown down & at the same time struck by one of the planks. He complained of injuries & was examined by a doctor when the ship called at R. No serious injury was discovered & he proceeded with the ship to B. On the voyage to B. he became so ill that he was only able to take his turn at the wheel by sitting in a chair. At B. he was operated on for hernia & his back was put into a plaster jacket. He returned home in Apr. 1927, & in June, 1927, his employers agreed to pay him full compensation. In Apr. 1928, he underwent a second operation for hernia, which was completely successful. In Dec. 1929, the employers applied for a review of the weekly payments, specifying in their application that they asked only for diminution. The county ct. judge, sitting with a medical assessor, found that he was no longer incapacitated by the hernia, but that he was incapacitated by osteo-arthritis not due to the accident. On those findings he made an award of a penny a week. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & the judge was justified in diminishing the compensation to a penny a week.—WATTS, WATTS & CO., LTD. v. HOLE (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 119, C. A.

3541e. Effect—Subsequent incapacity.]—The workman, aged eighteen, whilst working in a colliery slipped & fell. Immediately afterwards he found that the sight of his left eye had gone & he remained under this disability for four months. He filed a request for arbn., but on Apr. 28, 1936, before the case came on for hearing, he recovered his sight. The county ct. judge made an award of weekly payments to cover the period while the sight was lost, on the ground that the blindness was accelerated by the fall, & also granted a declaration of liability in the form suggested in King v. Port of London Authority, & which ran as follows: "It is hereby declared that appct. has received an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment but inasmuch as the evidence has not established that after Apr. 28, 1936, appct. has, as a result of such injury, been incapacitated for work but has on the other hand established that there is reasonable probability that such incapacity may ensue, it is ordered that this arbn. shall stand adjourned reserving to each of the parties hereto liberty to make such further application in the matter of this arbn. as he or they may be advised." After the hearing the workman had another attack of blindness in the same eye & this disability lasted for a month. When he recovered he was unable to obtain employment. Later he suffered a third attack which rendered him blind in the left eye for one day only. Neither of these last two attacks was associated with any fall. He then filed a request for arbn. based on the original declaration of liability & claimed to be treated as totally incapacitated under the provisions of sect. 9 (4) as amended. At the second arbn. evidence was given that the workman was suffering from "spontaneous recurrent hæmorrhage" or Eales' disease to which young men were liable & which was caused either by some weakness of the blood vessels in the eye or by some condition of the blood. The county ct. judge held that the hæmorrhages on the last two occasions were not causally connected with the original accident & refused to award compensation. The workman appealed: Held: the question was one of fact & the county ct. judge was in no way bound by the original declaration of liability to award further compensation. Appeal dismissed.—TILLINGS v. LANCASTERS STEAM COAL COLLIERIES, LTD. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 114, C. A.

3545a. Order giving liberty to apply.]—Employers having paid a workman full compensation for some months for an accident in their employment, applied for a review of the weekly payment & for termination, but offered to accept a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge held they were not entitled to terminate the weekly payments, as the workman was still partially incapacitated, but such payments should cease, & no such payments should be made so long as they employed & continued to employ the workman at a wage equivalent to his pre-accident wages, with liberty to either party to apply. He also ordered the employers to pay the costs:—Held: (1) the order was a right order, as liberty to apply carried out the effect of a declaration of liability; (2) the employers having failed to establish their right to termination of the weekly payments, the judge rightly exercised his discretion in ordering that the employers should pay the costs.—SIDNEY LEE (EXETER), LTD. v. JAMES (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 220, C. A.

3545b. —.]—A workman had an eye removed as a result of an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, but was able to return to his old work without any loss of earning capacity. On a claim for a declaration of liability the county ct. judge found that the workman was perfectly healthy with no fear of sympathetic trouble in the uninjured eye, that he was capable of any work a one-eyed man could do & that there was no evidence of his opportunities of employment being restricted. On these findings he refused to grant a declaration of liability, while expressing in his reserved judgment the view that such refusal did not debar the workman from making an application under sect. 9 (4), as amended by the 1931 Act, if he chose to do so. The formal award read, "I decline to make a declaration of liability in the above-mentioned matter." The workman appealed:—Held: the formal award debarred the workman from making any application under sect. 9 (4) &, it being the expressed intention of the county ct. judge that he should not be so debarred, there should be added to the formal award the following words: "without prejudice to the right of the appt. to make further application for compensation, declaration of liability or otherwise."

Where the arbitrator desires a matter to be kept open for the benefit of the workman but there is no evidence before him which would entitle him to grant a declaration of liability, the above form of words should be used in the award rather than the words "at this stage" which appear in the award made in the case of O'Neill v. Ford Shapland & Co., Ltd. No. 3541b. Appeal allowed.—ATHEY v. UNITED STEEL CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 435, C. A.

3545c. —.]—A gas operator was injured by the bursting of a safety valve, as a result of which numerous fragments of glass penetrated his body & he lost the little finger of his right hand. Many fragments of glass were removed & the remainder appeared to be quiescent. Owing to the loss of the little finger, the grip of the right hand was reduced by 15 to 20 per cent. In an award made three years after the accident the county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was able to do his pre-accident work & refused to grant a declaration of liability. The workman appealed & asked that the award should be amended in the form prescribed in Athey v. United Steel Co., Ltd. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 435; Digest Supp.:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection & no grounds for adding the form of words suggested in Athey v. United Steel Co., Ltd. supra. Appeal dismissed.—WEBB v. NEWPORT & SOUTH WALES TUBE CO., LTD. (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 172, C. A.

3545d. Industrial disease.]—A miner was on Apr. 13, 1928, certified by a certifying surgeon as being disabled by miner's nystagmus, & was paid compensation for his disablement. On Mar. 3, 1931, he was examined by a medical referee who certified that he was not suffering from nystagmus, that he was fit for his ordinary work, & that no incapacity existed. The employer ceased to pay compensation on Mar. 17, 1931. The workman having been examined on Feb. 1 & May 11, 1932, by medical men who reported that he was suffering from nystagmus, filed an application claiming compensation at 10s. a week to start from Mar. 17, 1931. The arbn. took place on July 15, 1932, when the county ct. judge sat with the medical referee who had given the certificate of Mar. 3, 1931, & who made a personal examination of the workman at the hearing & advised the judge that there was then no nystagmus. The county ct. judge made an award for the workman for 8s. a week from Mar. 17, 1931. The employer appealed. The Ct. of Appeal adjourned the appeal for the medical referee to answer certain questions. The questions with their answers were as follows: "(Q.) What did the medical referee intend to convey by his certificate dated Mar. 3, 1931? In particular, is there in the man himself any constitutional susceptibility to nystagmus? (A.) On my examination on Mar. 3, 1931, I could find no signs of miner's nystagmus, but on previous occasions I had found signs. (Q.) Has the effect of the attack of Apr. 13, 1928, completely passed away? (A.) On my examination on Mar. 3, 1931, I could find no signs of nystagmus, but there may have been something latent, & therefore in my opinion it is impossible for me to say whether the attack of Apr. 1928, had completely passed away. (Q.) If nystagmus supervenes, will that arise as a repetition of the nystagmus certified on Apr. 13, 1928, or from a fresh onset of the disease? (A.) A repetition of the nystagmus certified in 1928. (Q.) Is there or is there not a probability of a recurrence of nystagmus owing to the fact that the original conditions caused by the first attack have not completely passed away? (A.) Yes":—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could make an award of weekly compensation either from Mar. 17, 1931, or at all, but in view of the answers given to the ct. by the medical referee, the workman was entitled to a declaration of liability. 3558a. —.]—A coppersmith was injured by an accident which caused permanent partial incapacity by loss of the left index finger & was paid full compensation for a short period. He was then re-employed, earning an average weekly amount equal to his pre-accident wages. Help was given him where heavy work was involved, but his capacity was nearly as good as before the accident. From time to time his employers before the accident had to stand men off from work as the amount of work varied, & after the accident the workman was stood off work in the same way for periods of two & six weeks in 1928 & of seven weeks up to the middle of June, 1930. Alleging that he had been stood off more than other men on account of his injury, the workman made a claim for varying amounts of compensation as from the date of his first return to work & for a declaration of liability. The employers submitted a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge found that the workman had not been stood off more than other workmen, that he was receiving his pre-accident rate of pay, & that that rate of pay was really being earned by him. He therefore held that the workman was only entitled to a declaration of liability. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—DOUGHTY v. BRAITHWAITE (H.) & Co., LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 437, C. A.

3558b. — Recurrence of incapacity.—In 1915 appct. met with an accident & rupture supervened. Resps. paid him compensation. In Dec. 1916, the rupture was operated upon. Appct. returned to work, but shortly afterwards the rupture broke down again & appct. left his work. After a short absence he again returned to work at reduced wages & received compensation on a sliding scale according to the amount he was able to earn. In Dec. 1921, he left resp.'s employment to take up a position as steward of a club for which he received approximately the same wages as he had earned with resps. before the accident. About five months later he claimed a declaration of liability. Resps. contended that application was too late, & as the man was able to earn the same wages as before the accident & there was no evidence that these wages would cease or the appct. would be unable to earn the same wages in the future, there was no evidence upon which a declaration could be granted. The deputy county ct. judge said that the injury being a rupture which had in fact broken down once after operation for so called radical cure, appct. was entitled to a declaration:—Held: there was evidence upon which the judge was entitled to grant a declaration of liability.—*STATHAM v. 3559a. —[A workman having been injured, the employers entered into an agreement with him, which was duly recorded. This agreement gave the workman 30s. a week for total or partial incapacity "or until same shall be ended, diminished, increased or redeemed." Later the workman returned to work at his old wages, on the express agreement contained in correspondence that his rights under the registered agreement were kept alive, & that if the work was not continued & old wages paid, he should go back to such rights. As he was able to continue at work, the employers applied for a review to diminish or terminate the payments payable under the registered agreement. The workman claimed that he had not been paid his full old rate of wages under the second agreement & was entitled to have them made up to the old rate, & further, that by reason of this agreement the employers had no power to review the payments payable under the registered agreement. The county ct. judge held the employers' application to review was in breach of the agreement in the correspondence, & dismissed the application:—Held: the employers had expressly reserved their rights under the registered agreement to have the weekly payment reviewed. The workman's attempt at work having been successful, the employers' application to review was a proper one, & the judge was wrong in dismissing it. The right order on the facts was to discharge the registered agreement & direct a declaration of liability to be recorded.—HITCHENS & CO., LTD. v. HART (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 609, C. A.

3562a. — Dismissal on closing down of works. —A workman was injured by accident in Oct. 1929, & received 30s. a week until July, 1930, when the compensation was reduced by the employer to 15s. a week. In consequence the workman began arbn. proceedings. The arbn. was heard in Oct. 1930, when the county ct. judge found that at that time the workman was able to earn his pre-accident wages at work which was offered to him by his old employers. He awarded 30s. a week from July to Oct. The man was re-employed at his old wages & remained at work until Jan. 1931, when he was dismissed with others on the closing down of the factory. In Feb. 1931, he began fresh proceedings, claiming a declaration of liability. In his answer the employer raised the defence of res judicata. It was agreed that subject to this defence the workman was entitled to a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge held that the doctrine of res judicata did not apply, & made an award in favour of the workman for a declaration of liability. The employer appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had never intended the first arbn. to operate as res judicata, & the fact that the workman had obtained employment at his old rate of wages did not prevent a subsequent original application for a declaration of liability. Appeal dismissed.—BREWER v. FIRESTONE TYRE RUBBER CO. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 366, C. A.

3562b. — Prevented by general fall in wages. —A workman who was employed sometimes as a casual, sometimes as a general labourer, & sometimes as a bricklayer's labourer, lost his left eye by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment & received compensation for some years. The employers applied for a review, seeking termination or, alternatively, diminution. In his evidence the workman said, "I can work just as well as I could before, & the only diminution is due to the drop in wages." On this evidence the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments & refused a declaration of liability. The workman appealed:—Held: on the evidence before him the county ct. judge had rightly refused to make a declaration of liability & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—UNION COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. v. POOLE (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 1, C. A.

3564 i. Declaration of liability to be made. —In an application for compensation at the instance of a miner who, in Mar. 1933, had practically lost the sight of one eye as the result of an accident in the course of his employment with a colliery co., the arbitrator found that incapacity had ceased as at Sept. 30, 1933, & he terminated the workman's right to compensation as from that date until the further orders of the ct. It appeared that, since Sept. 30, the workman had been physically fit for his former employment at the coal face, & that the loss of the sight of the eye had not appreciably diminished his efficiency. He was in fact employed by the co. on light work as a repairer at a lower wage. His former work had been suitable work for him since he had become accustomed to one-eyed vision; but, owing to the risk of injury to his remaining eye, he was unwilling to resume his former work, notwithstanding that injuries involving loss of sight were uncommon. Employment at his former work had not been asked for by him, or offered to him by the co. There were no averments, & no evidence was led as to the effect which the loss of the sight of his eye might have upon his position in the labour market. On an appeal by stated case the employers contended that the arbitrator ought to have made a final award terminating the right to compensation:—Held: in the circumstances, there was material before the arbitrator which entitled him to make the award suspensory. Appeal dismissed.—FERGUSON v. NEW CUMNOCK COLLIERIES, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. Suppt. 1.—SCOT.

PART XIV. SECT. 15, SUB-SECT. 1.

eg. Agreement by minor—Necessity for concurrence of curator. —On Nov. 3, 1932, a mine-worker, aged sixteen, sustained injury by accident by having his right hand caught in the haulage apparatus in the colliery in which he was employed. The employers made weekly payments of what they alleged was compensation under the Act for the first few weeks to the workman's brother, & then for three weeks to the workman himself. Thereafter the workman stopped accepting these weekly payments & raised an action at common law in the Ct. of Session against the employers. The minor workman had a curator, his father, who was in the same employment. In their defence to the workman's action the employers pleaded that the workman had claimed & accepted compensation under the Act, & was therefore barred from insisting in the action. The workman pleaded that no payments had been made or accepted as compensation under the Act, & that the payments had been made without the consent & concurrence of the pursuer's curator & while the pursuer was in ignorance of his legal rights. After a proof on these preliminary pleas the Lord Ordinary repelled the defenders' plea, holding (a) that no agreement to accept compensation under the Act had been proved, & (b) that the minor workman had no capacity to conclude such an agreement without the consent of his curator, which had not been obtained. The employers reclaimed:—Held: (1) in respect an agreement to accept compensation under the Act was not a contract in the ordinary course of the minor's trade, business, or employment, it fell within the general rule of Scots Law that contracts made by minors who have curators without the consent & concurrence of those curators are void; (2) an agreement to accept compensation under the Act had not been proved. Appeal dismissed. Reclaiming Note refused.—O'DONNELL v. BROWNESIDE COAL CO., LTD. (No. 1), [1934] S. C. 534; 27 B. W. C. C. Supp. 87.—SCOT.

3571a. Consideration for agreement—Sufficiency.]

—An underground colliery workman left his employment in Mar. 1921, on account of illness. On July 18, 1922, he was certified to be suffering from nystagmus, the disablement, according to the certificate, being deemed to commence on that day. The workman applied for compensation, & the employers paid full compensation for total incapacity for four years, & then ceased payment. In proceedings for an award, instituted by the workman, the case was treated by both parties on the basis of an agreement to pay compensation as for total incapacity having been made, but the county ct. judge held there had been no consideration on the part of the workman for the agreement, & as the workman was not entitled to any compensation since he had not been employed by resps. during twelve months prior to the date of the certificate, the agreement was outside Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), & could not give jurisdiction within the Act:—Held: there had been good consideration, inasmuch as the workman had forborne to take steps, either by applying to the certifying surgeon, or by appeal to the medical referee, to get the date of the certificate of disablement altered, & the agreement was binding upon resps., & the workman was entitled to an award.—REES v. IMPERIAL NAVIGATION COAL CO., LTD. (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 287, C. A.

3580a. — — — — —.]—A workman injured by accident in Dec. 1927, was paid compensation at the rate of £1 2s. 3d. a week, this rate being based by the employers on the supposition that the pre-accident wage was £1 18s. 10d. a week. These payments were accepted by the workman until Dec. 1928, when the payments were reduced to 15s. a week. In Jan. 1929, the workman was given light work at a weekly wage of £2 1s. 8d. He then claimed a review of the weekly payments on the ground that his pre-accident wages were £2 10s. 3d., & that he was therefore entitled to £1 5s. 1½d. during the period of his total incapacity instead of the £1 2s. 3d. which he had been paid & had accepted, & 4s. 4½d. a week from the time he was given light work. The county ct. judge held that the payment of the compensation over so long a period implied an agreement between the parties on the terms that the rate of compensation should be £1 2s. 3d. a week based on a pre-accident wage of £1 18s. 10d. & that since there had been no change of circumstances & no question had arisen within the meaning of the Act, the workman was bound by that agreement. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge, having found on the evidence that there was an implied agreement, was right in holding that the parties were bound by it.—LEWIS v. CAMMELL, LAIRD & CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 410, C. A.

—.]—On May 19, 1931, a workman was injured by the collapse of a crane, his face was severely disfigured & he suffered other injuries. Liability was admitted by his employers, who paid him compensation at the rate of £1 3s. 9d. a week on the supposition that his pre-accident earnings were £2 5s. 6d. It was said that he had taught the violin in his spare time. He accepted compensation at that rate until June 24, 1932, when the employers reduced it to 5s. a week, after serving notice under sect. 12. On Oct. 6, 1932, he filed a request for a review & increase of the weekly payment on the ground that whilst he was able to do suitable light work he had failed to obtain employment, although he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain it. It was then discovered that he had been employed for seven weeks in Nov. & Dec. 1931, playing the violin in a cinema, & had been employed as a salesman at an average weekly wage of £2 7s. 10d. since Aug. 2, 1932. The workman then changed his solr., & a large number of amendments were made in the request for arbn. He also claimed that any compensation payable should be paid on the basis that his pre-accident earnings, including his earnings as a musician, were £3 10s. 2d. At the hearing it was proved that from Feb. to Aug. 1932, the workman had been drawing unemployment benefit. The county ct. judge refused to hold that the payment & receipt of £2 5s. 6d. for total incapacity constituted an agreement between the parties, & found as a fact that the workman's pre-accident earnings were £3 10s. 2d. Adopting that figure he treated the workman as having been totally incapacitated from the date of the accident until June 24, 1932, & partially incapacitated from June 24, 1932, & made his award for the workman accordingly. The employers appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge was entitled to find as a fact that there was no agreement to be implied between the parties, but on the evidence the award could not be supported. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered in another county ct.—STANDISH v. NEWTON CHAMBERS & CO., LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 142, C. A.

eg. Liability of lump sum for sums paid in poor relief.]—A workman, who was injured by accident in Aug. 1933, received weekly compensation at an agreed rate until May, 1934, when his employers gave notice to diminish the rate of payment. The workman refused to agree to the diminution, & payment of compensation was suspended pending the settlement of this dispute. In Feb. 1936, the dispute was settled by the employers agreeing to make a lump sum payment of £200 in redemption of the workman's claim. This sum covered both arrears due to the workman & liability for the future, but no allocation was made between past & future liability. From May, 1934, till Feb. 1936, while payment of compensation was suspended, the workman received out-door relief. The relieving authority, in terms of sect. 41, claimed from the employers repayment of the relief paid, amounting to £125, out of the lump sum agreed to be paid to the workman:—Held:

(1) the relief had been granted "pending the settlement of the workman's claim," rejecting a contention for the workman that his claim was "settled" when liability to pay compensation was originally admitted by the employers; (2) (dis. LORD MONCHIEFF) the lump sum payment of £200 was chargeable with repayment of the sums paid as relief, in respect that it was a sum which the employers were "liable to pay as compensation."—*LOTHIAN COAL CO. v. bkpcy. continued the weekly payments until the workman tendered a proof in the bkpcy. for £1,000, being, as he alleged, the lump sum required to redeem the weekly payments. The trustee rejected the proof on the ground that he was unable to estimate its value until the county ct. had assessed the amount of the liability. The workman moved the ct. for an order directing the trustee to admit the proof:—Held: the proper practice was for the motion to stand over in order that the trustee might apply to the county ct., in the name of the bkpt., for an award fixing the amount of the lump sum to which the workman was entitled, & the trustee must then decide whether to admit the proof for that, or some other, & what amount; & if the workman was dissatisfied with the trustee's decision he could then apply to restore the motion.—*Re WISE, Ex p. 3630a. To set aside award—Previous refusal to set aside—Fresh application on different ground.]—A workman having been certified as disabled in Nov. 1932, by dermatitis, applied for compensation on the basis of the certifying surgeon's certificate. At the arbn. held in Feb. 1933, a witness was called who gave evidence that the workman could not have come into contact with lime which was alleged to be the cause of the dermatitis. The workman's application for compensation was dismissed. In Jan. 1934, the workman applied under Workmen's Compensation Rules, r. 85 (4), for leave to apply to set aside the award. The county ct. judge dismissed the application. The witness who had given evidence in the county ct. was subsequently tried at assizes for perjury & was acquitted, but in the course of the trial made certain admissions which indicated that there was a possibility that the workman might have come into contact with lime. In consequence of these admissions the workman, in Nov. 1934, made a second application for leave to apply to set aside the award. The employers contended that in view of his previous refusal in Jan. 1934, the county ct. judge was functus officio. The county ct. judge, however, gave leave & held that there was reasonable cause for not having made an application to set aside the award within six months, as the trial for perjury took place after the expiration of the six months & provided fresh evidence not previously available. The employers appealed:—Held: the fact that the county ct. judge under rule 85 (4) had on one occasion refused leave to make an application to set aside the award did not preclude him from granting leave on a later occasion, as the two requests for leave were based on different grounds. If the first application, however, had been for a new trial under rule 85 (1), the county ct. judge's decision would have been final & he would then have been functus officio. Appeal dismissed.—BOYLE v. UNION COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 49, C. A.

He was able to return to work at the beginning of Feb. 1928. On Mar. 14 & 20 he had epileptic fits, & on the latter date gave up work, receiving compensation in respect of the accident. In July, 1929, the employers requested a review of the weekly payment, but in Sept. 1929, an agreement was made between the parties whereby the workman agreed to accept £350 & costs in redemption of all further payments. Both the registrar & the county ct. judge, who had certificates before them of three doctors that the epilepsy was due to the accident, refused to record the agreement on the ground that the sum was inadequate & compensation was therefore continued. On Mar. 13, 1931, the weekly payments were stopped under sect. 12 after a doctor had reported that the epilepsy was not due to the accident. The workman filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge, sitting with a medical assessor, held that the workman had not proved that there was any connection between the accident & the epileptic condition. The abortive agreement was not mentioned at the arbn. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge was free to decide in favour of the employer on the evidence before him & was in no way fettered by his previous refusal to record the agreement between the parties.—*EMSLEY v. Order of county court judge to registrar.]—A coal hewer was employed in a colliery for which there existed a joint committee representative of the employer & his workman. In Dec. 1930, the workman was certified by a certifying surgeon to be disabled by miner's nystagmus. Liability was admitted & compensation paid under the certificate. In Nov. 1931, the employer alleged that the workman had recovered. In Dec. 1931, both parties agreed that the question of recovery should be referred to an ophthalmic surgeon, that the surgeon's report should be laid before the representative committee & that both parties should be bound by the decision of the committee thereon. The surgeon reported that the workman had completely recovered from miner's nystagmus. Before the committee met, the workman once more obtained work in the colliery, but on Feb. 10, 1932, was again certified by a certifying surgeon to be disabled by miner's nystagmus. On Feb. 11, the workman's solr. wrote to the employer enclosing the certifying surgeon's certificate & also a notice of objection by the workman to the jurisdiction of the committee. The notice of objection began with the words: "I hereby give notice that on & after the of Feb. 1932, I contract out of the compensation agreement." The committee met on Feb. 29, 1932, & made an award terminating the liability of the employer in respect of the certifying surgeon's first certificate of Dec. 1930, as from Dec. 5, 1931. A memorandum of the award authenticated by the signatures of the chairman & joint secretaries of the committee was sent to the local county ct. to be recorded. The registrar refused to record the memorandum on the ground that he had received notice of objection from the workman's solr. In a subsequent letter the registrar stated that in his opinion an objection that the award was ultra vires the committee was a notice disputing the genuineness of the award. The employer took proceedings in the county ct. to obtain an order from the judge directing the registrar to record the memorandum, but later withdrew his proceedings. The High Ct. was then moved on behalf of the representative committee & an order nisi was obtained directing the registrar to show cause why he should not record the memorandum. On the matter coming on for argument:—Held: (1) the proper remedy in this case was not an order in the nature of mandamus, but an order of the county ct. judge under W. C. R. 48, directing the registrar to record the memorandum of award; (2) an award is not "genuine" within the meaning of sect. 23 if it is made without jurisdiction.

(3) By AVORY, J., it is open to any party interested to dispute the genuineness of a memorandum of award made by a representative committee, although the memorandum may be authenticated by the proper signature, & in such a case W. On Aug. 8, 1932, the workman's solr. intimated that an application might be made to have the memorandum removed from the register under sect. 25 (5) on the ground of fraud, undue influence or improper means. On Oct. 12, 1932, the solr. wrote to the employers' insurers enclosing notice of an application which he asked them to accept by post. This notice reached the employers' insurers on Oct. 13, & ran as follows: "Take notice that I intend to apply to the judge . . . on Oct. 26, 1932 . . . for a reconsideration of the memorandum of agreement recorded in this matter on Apr. 12, 1932." The application was heard by the county ct. judge on Oct. 26, & refused. The workman appealed:—Held: the application was properly dismissed. If the application was intended to have been made under sect. 25 (5), the workman had used neither the proper form nor the proper procedure for that purpose.—*PEPPERELL v. An agreement was then made between the parties that the employers should employ the workman at his pre-accident average weekly earnings, & that an award should be made for one penny a week to continue during such period as the workman should be so employed or until the same should be ended, diminished, increased or redeemed. The award was duly made by consent on Nov. 9, 1906. The workman remained at work until Sept. 7, 1929, when the employers closed down their works. The workman then claimed his arrears of 1d. a week & applied for leave to levy execution for these arrears. The county ct. judge made the necessary order. The employers appealed:—Held: there having been no variation of the award for a penny a week the workman was entitled to issue execution for the accumulated arrears. Appeal dismissed.—*SEDGWICK v. 3668c. ——— What is sufficient memorandum relating to future payments.—The workman, having suffered an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, was paid by appls., his employers, full compensation for a time. On Mar. 10, 1930, notice to end the compensation was given by the employers under 1925 Act, s. 12, based on a certificate of complete recovery. The workman replied with a counter certificate, & the question was referred to a medical referee. Meanwhile the employers paid four weeks' compensation into ct. An agreement was then come to between the employers & the workman under which the money in ct. was to be paid out to the employers, & the compensation was fixed at 18s. 6d. a week to be paid by the employers as from the date when they stopped the compensation until further review of that amount. This agreement was sent to the registrar & was recorded by him. The registrar then made an order for payment out of the sum in ct. to the employers. Subsequently, again proceeding under sect. 12, the employers reduced the weekly payments, & the workman, not continuing the proceedings under that sect., applied for leave to issue execution under r. 82 of the Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926. The county ct. judge gave leave to issue execution, & the question arose whether, having regard to the agreement & the order of the registrar, the compensation was owing under a memorandum, award, or certificate within the meaning of r. 82:—Held: agreement between the parties on which the registrar made his order was a memorandum within r. 82 relating to the future as well as the past, & therefore execution was properly leviable as to the future weekly payments.—*ALLEN v. In Apr. 1930, an agreement was recorded under which he was paid compensation at an agreed rate. In July the employers obtained a certificate from their doctor that the workman had practically recovered from the accident in 1929, & served upon the workman a notice of their intention to terminate the compensation under 1925 Act, s. 12. The workman did not follow the procedure prescribed by that sect., but applied under r. 82 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, for leave to issue execution under the recorded agreement. The county ct. judge refused the application:—Held: (1) under the recorded agreement a workman was in the position of a judgment creditor, & was entitled under r. 82 to apply for leave to issue execution, notwithstanding the fact that the employers had already commenced proceedings under sect. 12 to terminate or reduce the weekly payments under the recorded agreement; (2) the employers could always apply under r. 82, sub-r. (5), for an adjournment of the application to enable them to proceed under sect. 11 of the Act by way of review; (3) leave to issue execution ought to be allowed, but execution ought to be suspended for one month to enable the employers to apply for a review; (4) the decision of the question whether sect. 12 extended to anything but payments made under agreements that are not recorded was reserved.—*HAYTER v. In Jan. 1931, the employers, following the procedure prescribed by sect. 12, served upon the workman a notice, in accordance with a certificate of a medical practitioner which stated that the workman had partially recovered, that they would from & after the expiration of ten days therefrom reduce the weekly payment of 30s. under the recorded agreement to 11s. 1d. The workman did not follow the procedure open to him under the proviso to sect. 12 (3), but applied to the registrar under r. 82 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, for leave to issue execution under the recorded agreement. The matter was referred by the registrar to the judge, who held that the workman was entitled to leave to issue execution unless the employers applied for a review. On appeal by the employers:—Held: leave to issue execution ought to be granted, as the certificate of the employers' doctor, on which they relied as a ground for ending the compensation, was not final & conclusive, & did not establish partial incapacity, & therefore they were in default in making weekly payments under the recorded agreement within the meaning of r. 82, sub-r. The workman applied by way of original application for arbn. to have his compensation restored. The employers objected that the procedure was out of order, but the county ct. judge, having found as a fact that the workman was still totally incapacitated, made an award in the workman's favour. The employers appealed:—Held: the procedure laid down in sect. 12 (3) applies only to weekly payments made where there is no award or recorded memorandum of agreement. When a memorandum of agreement to make weekly payments has been recorded, & an employer purports to end or diminish the weekly payment under sect. 12 (3), the proper course for the workman to adopt is to apply for leave to issue execution under rule 82 of the Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926.—*FRANCIS v. It was subsequently alleged that the employers had broken their agreement to provide employment & were indebted to the workman to the extent of over £22 in wages. The workman applied under rule 82 for leave to issue execution for this sum. The county ct. judge refused the application on the ground that rule 82 only allowed execution to issue for compensation or costs, & arrears of weekly wages were neither of these. The workman therefore brought an action at common law for damages for breach of the agreement & the county ct. judge gave judgment for plff. for the amount claimed. The employers appealed & contended that such an action was not maintainable as an agreement registered under Workmen's Compensation Act could only be enforced under that Act. At the same time they alleged that as rule 82 did not provide for execution in regard to arrears of wages, the particular term of the memorandum with regard to the provision of light work at a minimum weekly wage was not so enforceable:—Held: the two contentions were mutually destructive, & these being the only grounds of appeal, the appeal must be dismissed.—*STUBBS v. 3886 I. Limit of preferential payment—Under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, s. 5 (3)—Not where liability accrued prior to liquidation.—Held:

the workman was entitled to the whole of the amount due to him for compensation as a preferential debt, without any limitation to £100 as mentioned in s. 5, sub-s. 3, Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the liability for such man admitted that the incapacity had ceased on Sept. 3, but claimed compensation up to the date of the award:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, to award any payment after the incapacity had ceased, & he ought to make a retrospective award terminating the weekly payments as from the date of recovery.—*OCEAN COAL CO. v. 3701b. ———.]—A workman was injured by an accident & was paid compensation by his employers for total incapacity. On receipt of their doctor's report that the workman was fit for light work, the employers made two offers of light work to the workman at the same rate of wages as before his accident. After the second refusal, the employers ceased to pay compensation. The county ct. judge held the workman was unreasonable in refusing the offers of light work &, applying Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies, No. 3701, ante, the employers were entitled to stop payment of compensation when they did:—Held: the evidence supported the findings, & the judge had correctly applied *Ocean Coal Co. v. 3701d. ———.]—A boiler-maker's riveter whose compensation for the loss of his right finger had been stopped under 1925 Act, s. 12, filed a request for arbn. The employers in their answer offered to submit to an award on the basis of partial incapacity, but at the same time gave notice that they denied liability. An award was consequently made for an agreed amount until the same should be ended or diminished. Eleven months later the employers applied to review with a view to termination of the weekly payment on the ground that the workman had completely recovered. The county ct. judge found as facts that the workman could do his pre-accident work, but that his physical condition was the same in all material respects as at the time of the previous award & refused to terminate the weekly payments. The employers appealed:—Held: the two findings of fact were wholly inconsistent with each other, but once the county ct. judge had found that the workman could do his

pre-accident work, all right to compensation ceased.—FAIRFIELD SHIPBUILDING CO., LTD. v. HARRIS (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 110, C. A.

3701e. ———.]—Workman malingering.—A workman, in Jan. 1932, suffered a fracture of his arm by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Liability was admitted & compensation paid. In May, 1932, his employer offered him work which he said he was unable to do. In Sept. 1932, the weekly payments were reduced by an award of the county ct. judge. In Oct. 1932, the employer again offered work which was refused. In Sept. 1933, the employer applied for termination of the weekly payments. The county ct. judge repeatedly adjourned the arbn. to enable the workman to try suitable work. The workman was on some occasions medically examined before & after the trials of work, & on one occasion the county ct. judge inspected the work himself. Finally the county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was malingering & he terminated the weekly payments. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—MALLANDAIN v. HILL (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 177, C. A.

3701f. Failure by workman to adopt procedure.—Application for review—Right to amend.—Employers, using the machinery provided by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, stopped weekly payments to a workman on their doctor's certificate. The workman did not avail himself of sect. 12, but began fresh proceedings for an arbn. by way of review, asking for an order that the weekly payments should be continued. At the arbn. the employers, at the close of the workman's case, objected to the method adopted by the workman & submitted that there was no case to answer. The workman applied for leave to amend, to turn the proceedings into an original appln. under sect. 21 of the Act, but the county ct. judge refused to allow this, & upheld the employers' objection, making an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge should have allowed the amendment, so that the case could have been considered on its merits.—ROBINSON v. VICKERS-ARMSTRONG, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. 3701g. ———.]—No amendment—Right of judge to treat proceedings as arbitration.—A workman was voluntarily paid compensation at the rate of 25s. a week in respect of an injury by accident. The employers served a notice on the workman under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, s. 12 (3), & in due course reduced the weekly payments to 17s. 6d. No counter-notice was served & for 6 months the workman accepted the weekly payments of 17s. 6d. During those 6 months correspondence passed between the solrs. acting for the parties & there were negotiations for a lump sum settlement, but no complaint was made as to the reduction in the weekly payments. The workman then applied for a review & for a restoration of the weekly payments of 25s. The county ct. judge declined to infer an agreement between the parties that the workman should receive compensation at the reduced rate, & he held that the workman's condition was the same as at the date of service of the employers' notice under sect. 12 (3). He found the measure of the workman's incapacity at that date to be £1 a week, & treating the proceedings as an original application for arbn., he awarded compensation at the rate of £1 a week. No formal amendment of the proceedings was, however, made. The employers appealed:—Held: (1) the county ct. judge was entitled to allow the application for review to be treated as an application for arbn.; (2) the fact that the workman did not serve a counter-notice on the employers did not preclude him from bringing arbn. proceedings in opposition to the diminution of the compensation paid; (3) the county ct. judge was entitled to decline to infer an agreement that the workman should receive compensation at the reduced rate.

Per SLESSER, L.J.: where a county ct. judge thinks fit to give leave to amend the proceedings particularised, either in whole or in part, the amendment ought to be made then & there, so that if any question subsequently arises, the Ct. of Appeal can see exactly what case was made before the county ct. judge.—*HARDING v. 3702a. — — —.]—A workman met with an accident, which he alleged caused an inguinal swelling. He was paid full compensation until Sept. 20, 1926, when the payments were reduced. The workman filed an application claiming compensation at the old rate, & the employers filed a counter-application for termination of compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman had entirely recovered on Sept. 20, 1926, & that the swelling from which he suffered at the date of the trial was not a result of the accident, & made an award for the employers on both applications:—Held: the employers, by paying compensation, were not estopped from saying that the injury was not caused by the accident, & there was evidence to support the judge's findings, & no misdirection.—*THORPE v. 3702b. — — —.]—On May 15, 1927, a trimmer met with an accident on board a liner causing hernia. He received compensation until Nov. 12. On receipt of a medical report that he was fit to resume work, his employers gave notice on Nov. 2, that the weekly payments would be terminated. The workman did not obtain a counter-certificate, but, on Nov. 24, his solrs. wrote suggesting that he had not been examined for hernia, that an operation would be necessary, &

that the notice of Nov. 2 should be cancelled. The employers thereupon requested the workman to present himself for further examinations, & as a result of these examinations again repudiated liability to pay compensation. The county ct. judge found that there was no incapacity on Jan. 7, 1928, but he made an award of compensation for eight weeks from Nov. 12, 1927, on the ground that compensation was not properly terminated on that date, in that the employers by subjecting the workman to further examinations had shown that they did not rely on their first medical report. He estimated the period during which the employers were satisfying themselves after Nov. 12 as to the workman's condition at eight weeks:—Held: the workman had not discharged the onus of proving incapacity after Nov. 12, 1927. The judge, in awarding compensation to the workman, in fact, for the trouble he had been put to by the employers after notice of termination had been given, had misdirected himself.—*DODD v. While the county ct. proceedings were still pending, pltf. brought an action, alleging that he had not recovered from his injury, & claiming (1) a declaration that under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, defts. had committed a breach of their duty by stopping the payments otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement or arbn., & (2) an injunction restraining a continuance of the breach:—Held: under sect. 21 the only tribunal to determine the question of incapacity was the county ct., & as that question had not yet been determined by that tribunal, pltf. could not show that his incapacity was continuing since the date when defts. stopped the weekly payments, & the action failed.—*CARTON v. o i. — On return to work.—The employers of a workman, who had been injured by accident, paid compensation, as for total incapacity, without any award having been made or any memorandum of agreement having been recorded. After a time the workman started work again with the same employers, not at his former work as a machine moulder, but as a labourer. The employers ceased payment of compensation as from the date of the workman's re-employment, without having served any certificate or notice under sect. 12 (3). The

but there was no award or recorded agreement. The workman had not returned to work, & his employers had not served on him a notice under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12 (3). On the termination of the payments the workman, on the ground that his incapacity was still continuing, applied for an award of weekly compensation & for an interim award of weekly compensation until the question of the liability of his employers should be decided. The arbitrator made an interim award of a weekly payment, & authorised the employers to pay the money into ct. instead of paying it to the workman:—Held: under sect. 12 the workman was entitled to an interim award, & the arbitrator had no power to authorise the employers to pay the money due thereunder into ct. instead of paying it to the workman. —ANCHOR DONALDSON, LTD. v. workman brought an application for an award of compensation as for partial incapacity from the date of the cessation of payments, & moved the arbitrator to make an interim award of compensation. Subsequently, having obtained other work, he agreed to the compensation being terminated, with the making in his favour of a declaration of liability. On Dec. 3, 1931, his solrs. wrote to the employers' solrs. informing them that the workman had attained his majority on July 6, 1931, & adding: "I shall be glad to know whether your clients are prepared to pay my

On Jan. 18, two days after receiving the medical certificate, the employer served it upon the workman, along with notice that his weekly payments would be ended. In arbn. proceedings the workman maintained that the employer was not entitled under sect. 12 (3) to end his weekly payments, because he had failed to serve the certificate within six days after the medical examination, & he contended that the six days' time-limit under the provisions of sect. 12 (3):—Held: the employer had ended the workman's weekly payments in compliance with sect. 12 (3). —M'GEE v. st. Power to diminish payments—From what date.—A dock labourer, who, in consequence of injuries to both ankles, had been found by an arbitrator to be in a permanent state of partial incapacity, was paid compensation up till June 7, 1930, at a weekly rate of 25s. On May 23 his employers served upon him a medical certificate to the effect that he was fit for light work, & intimated their intention to diminish his weekly payments to 7s. 6d. per week. The workman served a counter certificate to the effect that he would never be fit for any but sedentary work. On June 2 his employers offered him light cleaning-up work. Thereafter they applied for, & obtained a medical reference; & on Aug. 9, the referee reported that the workman was fit for light cleaning-up work on a level surface. Subsequently the workman accepted the light work offered. The employers having thereafter applied to the arbitrator to diminish the weekly payments to 7s. 6d. per week as from June 7, the workman contended that, as the referee had made no finding upon his condition before Aug. 9, there was no evidence to justify the arbitrator in diminishing the payments prior to that date. The arbitrator having diminished the weekly payments as from June 7:—Held: as no change in the workman's condition between June 7 & Aug. 9 had been alleged to the referee or to the arbitrator, the arbitrator was, in the circumstances, entitled to treat the referee's report as conclusive of the workman's condition as from June 7, & to diminish the compensation payable to him as from that date. —DOCHERTY v. client compensation on the basis of partial incapacity." The workman subsequently, on Jan. 18, 1932, gave notice of his intention to apply to the ct. under sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act to award him increased weekly payments of compensation, in view of his having attained full age. The employers contended: (a) that whereas by sect. 1 of 1926 Act, the claim under sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act should have been made by "application for the review . . . before or within six months after the workman attains the age of twenty-one years," it had not been made until Jan. 18, 1932, twelve days after the prescribed period; & (b) that sect. 11 (2) being for the review of "any weekly payment" it was not applicable to a case where no weekly payments were being made:—Held: (1) the words "application for the review" in sect. 1 of 1926 Act were not restricted to a formal application to the ct. An application within the section could be made informally to the employer, & this had been done by the solrs.' letter of Dec. 3, 1931; (2) the declaration of liability which had been made, being in lieu of the old order for payment of 1*l.* a week, was a declaration intended to keep open the rights of the parties, & took effect as if there were a weekly payment which was at the moment in abeyance.—*VICKERS-ARMSTRONG, LTD. v. 3708b. Reasonable steps to obtain employment.—A woman who by reason of injury by accident arising out of her employment had suffered the amputation of three fingers of her right hand was paid full compensation until 1934, when the employers were advised that she was then only partially incapacitated. She applied for an award, & the county ct. judge awarded compensation for partial incapacity treated as being total, under the above sub-sect., finding that she had taken all reasonable steps to obtain work, but had failed. In May, 1936, the employers applied to review & diminish the payment, alleging that, though the condition of the hand remained static, she was able to do certain work & had made little or no effort to obtain any work. The county ct. judge held that the employers had failed to show any change of circumstances, that he could not take into consideration the question whether the woman had or had not endeavoured to find work upon an application to review the payments, & dismissed it:—Held: as the workwoman had admitted that she had given up making any attempt to obtain suitable employment, this fact was a change of circumstances since the previous hearing which the county ct. judge was entitled to take into consideration on the application for a review for the purpose of deciding whether the conditions mentioned in sect. 9 (4) of Workmen's Compensation Act still obtained, & the case must be remitted to him to be reheard.—UNITED DAIRIES (LONDON), LTD. v. STIRLING, [1937] 1 K. B. 402; [1936] 3 All E. R. 272; 106 L. J. K. B. 468; 80 Sol. Jo. 1014; 29 B. W. C. C. 317, C. A.

3708c. Award for fixed period under 1925 Act, s. 9 (4)—Partial incapacity continuing beyond fixed period.—A workman was injured in June, 1928, & received full compensation until June, 1929. In July, 1929, he applied for the restoration of compensation on the ground of continuing incapacity. The county ct. judge heard the application in Oct. 1929, & ordered that the workman's partial incapacity should be treated as total incapacity under sect. 9 (4). Under this order he awarded full compensation until Jan. 7, 1930. On Jan. 7, 1930, the employers ceased payment. In Apr. 1930 the workman applied for review but subsequently altered his application to one to restore the proceedings begun in July, 1929, to deal with the amount of compensation payable for his partial incapacity after Jan. 7, 1930. The county ct. judge in Nov. 1930 refused to assent to this application. In consequence the workman once more filed an application for review. On this application the county ct. judge held that he was by virtue of sect. 9 (4) entitled to review the matter, although no liberty to apply was expressly given under the award made in Oct. 1929, & made an award of £1 a week for partial incapacity from Jan. 7, 1930. The employer appealed on the ground that there could be no right of review of a weekly payment that did not exist. The workman cross-appealed on the ground that the judge was wrong in refusing to restore the original proceedings:—Held: as the award made in Oct. 1929, dealt solely with matters referable to sect. 9 (4), there still remained the issue of partial incapacity considered apart from sect. 9 (4) &, although the award appealed from was made in review proceedings, it should properly be treated as an award made in the proceedings initiated in July, 1929, which the workman was entitled to have restored, the court having had seisin of the matter throughout. Appeal dismissed. Cross-appeal allowed.—WILLIS v. HOWIE (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 352, C. A.

3710a. —A miner was certified on Nov. 22, 1919, as suffering from nystagmus & received compensation. After some years the employers requested a review, on which the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments as from Aug. 21, 1925, the date of his award, on the ground that the workman had recovered from his disablement & was able to do his ordinary work as a miner. There was no appeal by the workman from this award. Three years later, on June 12, 1928, the workman obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate to the effect that he was suffering from nystagmus, & thereby disabled from earning full wages at his old employment. The date of the commencement of disablement not appearing on this certificate, the workman went to the medical referee, who issued a certificate confirming the certificate of the certifying surgeon, & fixing Nov. 22, 1919, as the date of the commencement of disablement. The medical referee also certified that the workman was only fit for surface work. On that the workman commenced arbn. proceedings, claiming compensation for partial incapacity as from 1925 & a declaration of liability. The employers contended that the matter was res judicata, & this contention was accepted by the county ct. judge. The workman appealed:—Held: the award of Aug. 21, 1925, was final between the parties & could not be affected by the certificate of the medical referee.—*WILLIAMS v. CRAWSHAY BROS. 3716b. ————.]—A workman was injured in Mar. 1933, & underwent an operation for the removal of cartilage from his knee. He was paid compensation as for total incapacity until Nov. 1933, when he returned to light work & was paid compensation as for partial incapacity. In Mar. 1934, payments were stopped, & the workman applied for an arbn. At the hearing in Jan. 1935, the workman's doctor said that the workman was not fit for his old work, the employers' doctor saying that he was fit for such work. The latter in his evidence referred to the probability that there was "some loose body which occasionally gets nipped between the bones of the joint," but he said there was no X-ray evidence of such loose body. The county ct. judge awarded compensation as for partial incapacity up to the date of the hearing & granted a declaration of liability. The workman applied to his foreman for his old work, but this was refused in the absence of a certificate of fitness from the workman's doctor. The doctor refused such a certificate & the workman continued at light work. In June, 1935, trouble developed, due to the nipping of a piece of cartilage which had not been removed. In Aug. 1935, the workman applied for a review. The county ct. judge came to the conclusion that the workman was more disabled than he had thought in Jan. 1935, "due to change of circumstances," & made an award for compensation on the basis of partial incapacity. The employers appealed:—Held: the finding that there was a change of circumstances was founded upon additional positive evidence of fact not before him at the first hearing & the matter was not res judicata.

He was paid full compensation for a year & then went back to his old work. He left work after two days, alleging that he was unable to do the work, & made a claim for compensation based on total incapacity. The county ct. judge found that the injury had left no incapacity & made his award in favour of the employers & refused to grant a declaration of liability. The workman gave notice of appeal from that award but did not proceed any further. Seven months later the workman applied for a review alleging that though he had recovered & was capable of work he had found that he was unable to obtain employment owing to the disfigurement caused by the loss of his eye. The employers took the preliminary points that the matter was res judicata & also that there could be no review as there were no weekly payments & no declaration of liability to review. These second proceedings came before another county ct. judge, who refused to allow leave to amend the proceedings & held that the decision of the first county ct. judge was binding on him & final against the workman. He therefore dismissed the application. The workman appealed:—Held: the first county ct. judge having made an award in favour of the employers, finally terminating all liability, & there having been no appeal from that award, the second county ct. judge had rightly held in the second case, which raised exactly the same issues, that the matter was res judicata. The result must have been the same whether the second proceedings had been by way of original application or review.—SMITH v. CUTLER (SAMUEL) & SONS, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 408, C. A.

3726b. —.]—A painter fell from a ladder & injured his foot. Compensation was paid to him for some months under an award. His employer applied for a review of the weekly payments on the ground that he was fit for work. The county ct. judge found on the evidence taken as a whole that the workman was no longer suffering from any diminution of wage-earning capacity, & made an award terminating the weekly payments. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to justify the award, & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—WRIGHT (R.) & SON v. BURDON (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 594, C. A.

3726c. —.]—A workman suffered an injury by accident to his back & was thereby incapacitated. A memorandum of agreement was filed. On an application for review of the weekly payments payable under the agreement, the employers sought to prove by calling four medical men that the workman was now suffering from locomotor ataxy & not from any result of the accident. The county ct. judge found that the workman was not suffering from any constitutional disease, but was still incapacitated by the accident & dismissed the application. The employers appealed:—Held: the matter was a question of fact for the county ct. judge.—SMEATON & SONS, LTD. v. TAYLOR (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 369, C. A.

3726d. —.]—Employers paid a workman who had sustained a fractured skull in July, 1928, full compensation until Nov. 1929, when they reduced the weekly payments in accordance with the provisions of sect. 12 to 11s. 9d. on the basis that he could earn 30s. a week at light work. In Jan. 1933, the workman bought a grocery business with a beer off-licence, & the employers applied for a review by termination or diminution of the 11s. 9d. a week on the ground that he was able to earn in some suitable employment as much or more than his average weekly earnings before the accident, or alternatively that he had such earning capacity as entitled them to relief. The only evidence called at the arbn. was to the effect that the workman's condition had improved, but that he had to lie down with headaches for a few hours. The county ct. judge said that he formed the conclusion that there was no material change in the workman's working capacity since Nov. 1929. He then went on to find that the workman & his wife shared the profits of the grocery business, & that the share of the profits would be about 30s. a week, so that the existing compensation of 11s. 9d. a week would be correct. The employers appealed on the ground that there was no evidence for the various findings:—Held: there being evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the employers had failed to prove any change of circumstances, that alone was sufficient to justify him in dismissing the application to review, & the other matters did not therefore arise.—STEEL PEECH & TOZER, LTD. v. LAMBERT (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 579, C. A.

3726e. —.]—A workman suffered injury by accident in Dec. 1932, & was under treatment until Aug. 1933, when he underwent an operation. Compensation was paid on the basis of total incapacity from Dec. 1932 until Apr. 1934, when payments were discontinued. An application for compensation was then made. The employers denied liability on the ground that since the date of the application the workman had not been incapacitated for work by reason of the jury, but they submitted to a declaration of liability. The judge found in favour of the workman & made an award on the basis of total incapacity. In Feb. 1936, the employers applied for a review. Evidence was given that the workman would have had to undergo the operation even if there had been no accident & the employers contended that at the time of the review it could no longer be shown that the incapacity was due to the accident. The judge allowed the application & terminated the employers' liability. The workman appealed:—Held: as the employers, by submitting to a declaration of liability, had made an unqualified admission that the incapacity was due to the accident, it was not open to the judge, without a change of circumstances, to hear new evidence on a matter which had already been decided.—LONDON POWER CO., LTD. v. LAMB, [1936] 3 All E. R. 392; 29 B. W. C. C. 281, C. A.

3726f. —.]—A workman struck his skull against a scaffold while at work & claimed to be incapacitated by traumatic neurasthenia. At an arbn. in Dec. 1936, medical evidence was called on behalf of the employers to the effect that the incapacity was due to arterio-sclerosis & not to traumatic neurasthenia. The county ct. judge accepted the medical evidence called on behalf of the workman & made an award for partial incapacity. The employers applied for a review, which took place in Nov. 1937. At this arbn. the employers called a doctor who had given evidence at the first arbn. & who now said that the condition of arterio-sclerosis from which the workman had, in his opinion, been suffering had now become definitely worse, as fresh symptoms of the disease had now manifested themselves in the form of parkinsonism. Another doctor was also called by the employers. The county ct. judge having heard this evidence stated that it did not show such change of circumstances as would falsify his previous conclusion, or justify him in retrying the original medical issue, or in finding that the continuing partial incapacity should now be regarded as not being due to the accident but to an aggravated condition of arterio-sclerosis, & dismissed the application to review. The employers appealed:—Held: the question was one of fact for the county ct. judge & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—HOLLAND & HANNEN & CUBITTS, LTD. v. BRIGHT (1938), 31 B. W. C. 3733a. —J—A workman was certified to be disabled by an industrial disease contracted whilst employed as a mule spinner, & in 1926 was awarded compensation of £1 a week on the basis that he was fit for any work not in the spinning trade & should be able to earn £1 19s. 7d. a week, his pre-accident average weekly earnings being £3 19s. 7d. After being unemployed for some two years he obtained work at a wage of £1 18s. a week for a year, when he was again unemployed for nearly two & a half years until Apr. 1932. In Apr. 1932, he obtained employment as a clerk to a commission agent, being employed for each afternoon while racing was proceeding at £1 5s. a week. The work was seasonal from Apr. to Nov. in each year. Whilst so employed, in Oct. 1933, he applied for a review of the weekly payment of £1. The county ct. judge held that there had been no change of circumstances since the award of 1926 which would justify a review of that award, & that he could not regard the £1 5s. earned for part-time work as any criterion. The Ct. of Appeal set aside the award of 1926 & substituted the actual wage of £1 5s. for the estimate of £1 19s. 7d. & made an award for £1 7s. 3½d. a week :—Held : the words “ he is earning or is able to earn ” in sect. 9 (3) (i), were strictly alternative, & the first alternative was not qualified by the words “ in some suitable employment or business.” Assuming that the £1 5s. a week was derived otherwise than from “ a suitable employment or business ” it still was an average weekly amount which the workman was earning after the accident within the meaning of the first alternative, & as there was no evidence that that amount was not really what he might earn if he took proper steps to get the most remunerative employment he could find, he must be charged with the 25s. & no more.—*DELTA MILL (1919), LTD. v. 8734a. Workman generally more fit for work.]—
A colliery repairer had a series of hernia & operations for hernia commencing in 1922. In 1927, on the workman's appln. for compensation, the county ct. judge found as a fact that he was not fit to do the work of repairer, & awarded compensation. In 1928, the employers applied to terminate the weekly payment, & the matter was referred by the judge to the medical referee, who reported that the workman was fit for his former work as a repairer. The judge said that, on this occasion, he accepted the evidence of the employers' doctors which he had rejected at the former hearing & made an award terminating the weekly payments. The workman appealed on the ground that the judge had merely reversed his first decision without any change of circumstances. In view of this argument, the judge was written to & asked what change of circumstances he found which justified him in coming to his decision in 1928. In reply the judge said he had found that the workman was generally more fit for work :—Held: there was evidence that the man was fitter generally, & there had been, therefore, such a change of circumstances as justified the later award.—PARTRIDGE, JONES & PATON JOHN, LTD. v. SULWAY (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 423, C. A.

3734b. Injury to right eye—Subsequent blindness in left eye unconnected with accident—Inability to work.]—A first helper at a blast furnace was in Aug. 1929, injured by reason of a piece of molten metal entering his right eye which was in consequence removed. He returned to work & though he could not do it properly by reason of his injury, he was able to carry on for three years with help & was paid his full former wages. In Nov. 1933, he had to cease work on account of a cataract unconnected with his injury having developed in his left eye, & subsequently resumed work at reduced wages. In Apr. 1935, he applied for review of a declaration of liability which had previously been recorded. The county ct. judge held that, in spite of some physical disability resulting from the accident, the workman would have been earning his pre-accident rate of wages at the date of the arbn. but for an event not connected with the accident & that he had not proved a change of circumstances since the date of filing the declaration of liability. He therefore made his award for the employers. The workman appealed :—Held : the cessation of work in 1933, although due to a reason unconnected with the accident, was a change of circumstances entitling the workman to ask for a review. The workman was entitled to have compensation for his partial incapacity assessed. Appeal allowed. Case remitted for assessment of compensation.—DRURY v. APPLEBY IRON CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. Energlyn Colliery Co.*, No. 3366, ante, for computing the weekly payment in cases of partial incapacity, where there has been a fluctuation of wages since the accident, have been incorporated in Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), to a limited extent by sect. 11 (3). Apart from that sect. the principle does not apply to cases under the Act, the provisions of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I. After weekly payments under the agreement had been made for some years, the rate of wages having fallen, the employers applied to have the payments reviewed under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I., s. 16:—Held: a change in the rate of wages, being one of the events contemplated & provided for by the agreement, was not such a change in the circumstances as entitled either party to have the weekly payments reviewed.—*BARBER, WALKER & Co. v. He registered with the Labour Exchange & for some months received unemployment benefit, together with a proportionate amount of compensation from his late employers. When the unemployment benefit ceased he claimed full compensation, proving that he had made genuine attempts to obtain work but had failed owing to his injury. The county ct. judge awarded a sum, less than the full compensation, to date from the application for review & not from the cessation of the unemployment benefit:—Held: the workman was entitled to compensation on the basis of total incapacity as from the date when the unemployment benefit ceased.—*KING v. In Mar. 1929, the workman applied for an increase by way of review. The county ct. judge held that there had been no change of circumstances & refused the application. The workman later renewed his application, alleging that a change of circumstances had been created by the combined effect of the state of the labour market & his own injury, & claimed to come within sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge found that the workman had not really tried to obtain employment, & again held that there had been no change of circumstances that would justify a review. The employer then applied to terminate the weekly payments but submitted to a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments & a declaration of liability was recorded. The workman within three months applied for a review on the ground that he was entitled to the benefit of the 1931 Act. The county ct. judge found that the workman had in fact obtained two jobs from which he had been dismissed for wilful clumsiness, although he could have done the work. He therefore held that there had been no change of circumstances since the award terminating the weekly payments, & that he had not brought himself within the 1931 Act:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—*FEW v. He developed nervous weakness of the heart & neurasthenia. In 1927 an award for 35s. a week was made & filed. In Apr. 1932, an application by the employer to diminish the weekly payment was refused, but the medical witnesses agreed that the workman was fit to do suitable light work. The employer thereupon offered the workman a job as a watchman at a weekly wage of 30s. in a colliery which was in the process of being dismantled, & the offer was accepted. The workman then received 30s. a week as wages & 6s. 4d. as compensation. In July, 1932, the employer again applied to diminish the weekly payment. The workman contended that there had been no change of circumstances since Apr. 1932, entitling the employer to review, the watchman's job being a job specially created by the employer for the purpose of the review. The medical referee certified that the workman was fit for light work only, but added that his unfitness was not due to the accident, the effects of which had completely passed off, but to rheumatic fibrosis. On June 24, 1930, he was given light work, & in addition to his pay for this work received 8s. 3d. a week as compensation. He was discharged on Dec. 3, 1930. He became twenty-one on June 30, 1931. In Nov. 1931 certain correspondence passed between the employers' insurers & the workman's solrs. whereby it was agreed that the sum of 8s. 3d. a week should be paid to the workman as compensation. This letter said, "We think it will be necessary to record an agreement to show the review by consent of the post-infancy basis of compensation. Before doing so, however, we shall be glad to know whether you are prepared to settle this case." The workman never signed this agreement nor was it recorded. He received 8s. 3d. a week for three weeks only, when he was taken back to work at £2 4s. a week. On Jan. 4, 1932, an application was filed by the workman for arbn. by way of review on the ground that, but for the accident, he would have been earning £3 0s. 6d. a week. The county ct. judge held that no agreement capable of being recorded was contained in the letters, & that the application for review was out of time. The workman appealed, & also instituted proceedings to record a memorandum of agreement:—Held: without deciding whether any agreement was in fact contained in the letters, & without prejudice to the proceedings to record a memorandum of agreement, the application for review was out of time. Appeal dismissed—JOHNSON

8753d. ———.]—An infant suffered an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment on Dec. 16, 1926. Liability was admitted & compensation of £1 a week paid by the employer until May 17, 1927, when a declaration of liability was filed. The workman was given light work which he was able to do, but after six weeks he left of his own accord. The workman came of age on June 12, 1931, & on Aug. 17, 1931, a letter was written by his solr. to the employer, discussing the amount of compensation payable now that the workman had attained the age of twenty-one & requesting payment of an increased amount. A request for arbn. was filed on Mar. 10, 1932, & at the hearing the county ct. judge upheld a preliminary objection of the employer that the application for review was out of time having regard to sect. 11 (2), as amended by sect. 1 of the 1926 Act:—Held: the point was already decided in Vickers-Armstrongs, Ltd. v. Regan, No. 3753c, ante, that an informal application for review if within time is sufficient to comply with the sect. Appeal allowed.—DARBY v. ALLEN (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 328, C. A.

3753e.     -]-A girl aged seventeen lost her left index finger while working as a farm hand & subsequently earned higher wages as a domestic servant. She obtained an award of a declaration of liability. On obtaining the age of twenty-one she applied for a review both on the ground that there had been a change of circumstances in her physical condition & earning capacity & on the ground that she had attained the age of twenty-one. The county ct. judge found that she had shown no change in her physical condition & earning capacity & held that there was nothing in the fact that she had attained the age of twenty-one years which entitled her to a review. The workman appealed :—Held : there was evidence to support the findings of the county ct. judge & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.     LEE v. PINKERTON (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 168, C. A.

22. Recovery of workman.—No jurisdiction to increase payments.—A farm labourer under twenty-one years of age, who had lost an eye by accident arising out of his employment, & had been awarded compensation, brought proceedings for review: & in the course thereof a medical reference was obtained, as a result of which the referee certified that the workman had again become fit for his ordinary work. At a proof subsequently taken in the review proceedings it was established that, if the workman had remained uninjured, he would probably have been earning more during the whole period under review than he had been earning at the time of the accident. The employer thereafter moved the arbitrator to end compensation at the date of the referee's certificate, but the arbitrator refused to do so, on the ground that the workman was, in virtue of 1925 Act, s. 11 (2), entitled to compensation in respect of his earning capacity being as a result of the accident less than it would have been had he not been injured; & he awarded a weekly payment as for partial incapacity until further order of the ct. :—Held: the workman having fully recovered capacity, the arbitrator was bound to end compensation as from the date of the referee's certificate, subject to the workman's right to have the award made suspensory; & the arbitrator was not entitled to award further weekly payments in virtue of sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act, in respect that sect. 11 (2) only warranted the increase of weekly payments to which a workman in minority was already entitled, & had no application in cases where the right to compensation had terminated.—*M'ILWRAITH v. 3754a. —.]—An infant workman at fifteen years of age commenced work at 8s. a week. At sixteen years of age when he met with an accident he was receiving 12s. a week, & received compensation based on that figure. When he was twenty years old he applied for a review of the weekly payment, his evidence being that three years earlier he had been offered a post on a liner. The county ct. judge found that the workman was not suitable for a post at sea, & apparently without considering whether the man might have obtained work elsewhere at an increased wage, he further found that at the date of the hearing the workman would probably have been earning, if uninjured, no more than the amount which he was earning when he met with the accident. The workman appealed:—Held: the reasons given by the county ct. judge for his award were unsatisfactory & the case must be remitted for further consideration. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—MILLER v. TAYLOR & SON (1931), 100 L. J. K. B. 641; 145 L. T. 539; 24 B. W. C. C. 237, C. A.

3754b. — Question of fact.]—An infant workman met with an accident while employed as a motor-lorry driver's mate & received compensation. On attaining twenty-one the workman asked for a review of the weekly payment, alleging that but for the accident he would now have been able to earn wages as a motor-lorry driver. At the hearing of the arbn. the workman called evidence to show that he had learned to drive a motor lorry, but the county ct. judge disbelieved this evidence & made an award in accordance with an offer submitted to by the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the question was purely one of fact & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—RUSTON v. RYBURN (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 101, C. A.

3756a. — Effect of criminal conviction.]—An infant, aged nineteen & a half, while employed as a railway porter lost his left arm in May, 1913, by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Liability was admitted under the 1906 Act, & a weekly payment of 10s. was made from May to Dec. 1913. In Dec. 1913, he was employed as a signalman at 23s. a week, & was promoted from time to time so that in 1930 he was being paid at the rate of 65s. a week. On Sept. 8, 1930, he committed a criminal offence totally unconnected with his employment, & served a term of imprisonment from Sept. 30, 1930, to July 26, 1931. It being a rule of railway cos. that persons who have been convicted & imprisoned shall not be employed by them the workman was unable to obtain his former employment. In Jan. 1932, he applied for a review of the original payment of 10s. a week. The county ct. judge assessed his earning capacity in the open labour market at 20s. a week, & held that, had he been uninjured, he would probably have been earning not less than 65s. a week at the date of the review. He therefore made an award under Sched. I. (16) of the 1906 Act increasing the compensation to 20s. a week, but ordered that such increase should not commence to operate on Sept. 8, 1930, but be suspended until July 26, 1931. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could exercise the discretion given to him by Sched. I. (16) of the 1906 Act, & he had exercised his discretion judicially. Appeal dismissed.—WEBB v. SOUTHERN RY. CO. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 521, C. A.

3761a. Time for application.]—An infant, who was apprenticed under a seven-year contract to the deft. firm of shipbuilders, was injured in an accident on Aug. 31, 1932. A declaration of liability was made by consent. Upon an application for review, heard on Oct. 8, 1937, it was proved that he was earning 30s. per week working for his mother, & as he had therefore suffered no loss of earning capacity, no order was made. On Dec. 8, 1937, six days before the workman attained the age of twenty-one years & six months, his solr. wrote notifying defts. of his intention to apply for a further review. At that date, appct. would still have been under his contract of apprenticeship, had he not been injured, but by Feb. 24, 1938, he would have qualified as a shipwright, & would have been earning about £3 per week. He was at that time earning 35s. per week. It was contended by the employers that the application for review must be bad on the ground that, at the time it was made, appct. was earning as much as he would have done had he not been injured, & therefore he had lost nothing:—Held: (1) the solr.'s letter was an application for review within the meaning of sect. 11 (2); (2) an application for review is not necessarily bad solely because it is one under which the workman, upon the facts proved to have been existing at the date of the application, cannot succeed; (3) the date of a review is the date on which any change made at the review begins to operate, which may be any date prior to the hearing of the application, & therefore a date subsequent to the date of the application itself, so long as it is prior to the hearing; (4) the infant was entitled to compensation as from Feb. 24, 1938, on the footing that he would then probably have been earning £3 per week.—BURTON v. DOBSON SHIP REPAIRING CO., LTD. [1938] 3 All E. R. 410; 54 T. L. R. 1006; 82 Sol. Jo. 583; 31 B. W. C. C. 294, C. A.

3762a. What court has jurisdiction.]—Where an arbn. is heard in a county ct. in the district of which both workman & employer reside, & an award is made capable of being reviewed, it is competent for either party to apply for a review in another county ct. in the district of which the accident happened, & the judge of the second county ct. has jurisdiction to hear & determine the case, & is under no obligation to transfer the proceedings to the first county ct. 3762b. —.]—A claim for compensation was heard by the county ct. judge of the district in which both employer & workman resided. An award was given in favour of the workman & recorded in that ct. The employer then applied for a review, in the county ct. of the district in which the accident happened, having first obtained a certified copy of the award & filed it in the second ct. The county ct. judge of the second ct. refused to transfer the proceedings to the first ct. & found that the workman had recovered & made an award ending the weekly payments. The workman appealed, alleged that the second judge had no jurisdiction to hear the review:—Held: the word “shall” in 1925 Act, s. 27, is not mandatory but is qualified by the words “subject to rules of ct.” & by rule 89 of Workmen’s Compensation Rules, 1926, the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to hear the review. He also had jurisdiction by virtue of County Ct. Act, 1919 (c. 73), s. 10 (1). Appeal dismissed.—THOMAS ALLEN, LTD. v. HAGGER (No. 3) (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 513, C. A.

3766a. Particulars—Contents of.]—Upon an application by an employer to review a weekly payment & diminish it, or terminate or diminish it, the appropriate form is Form 5, under which certain particulars are to be given. These do not include particulars of the extent to which diminution is asked for, but the county ct. judge has a discretion to order or to refuse such further particulars under r. 29 (2). His decision on the point is not a decision on a question of law, & there is no appeal therefrom. Semble: such particulars ought to be sparingly ordered, & not with the object of compelling the county ct. judge to give costs to one side or the other, & there is much greater reason for asking for particulars of the extent of diminution of a weekly payment where termination is not asked for, than where the employer is asking for termination* or diminution.—*VICKERS, LTD. v. The workman applied for further & better particulars stating the amount they claimed that the payment should be reduced by. The registrar & county ct. judge dismissed the application for such particulars, relying on the principles laid down in Vickers, Ltd. v. Miners, Thames Steam Tug & Lighterage Co., Ltd. v. Ingram, 20 B. W. C. C. 269; Digest Supp.:—Held: the ct. were bound by the decision of the Ct. of Appeal in Vickers, Ltd., supra, but disagreed with it as the workman was entitled to know to what extent the employers claimed to reduce the weekly payments to enable him to decide whether to contest the claim. 3769a. —.—.]—A workman suffered an accident to his right eye in Apr. 1923. Liability was admitted & compensation paid. In Dec. 1927, the weekly payments were reviewed & the county ct. judge made an award in respect of partial incapacity at the rate of 17s. 6d. a week, such rate to date from Feb. 1927. Compensation continued to be paid at this rate without any suggestion on the part of the workman that the rate should be altered. In June, 1929, the employers filed an application for redemption of the 17s. 6d. per week under sect. 13 on the basis of permanent partial incapacity. The workman’s solrs. wrote to the employers that the workman objected to the application to redeem, but that they could not object to it as they themselves felt that his medical condition was & would continue to be the same as it had been for the past two years. At the hearing of the application on July 1. medical evidence was called to the effect that the workman’s condition was stabilised & that there was unlikely to be any change in either eye. The county ct. judge, however, dismissed the application to redeem, stating that he was doing so in the exercise of the discretion which, in his opinion, the legislature had given to him. The employers gave notice of appeal, & later the workman filed an application for review on the ground that his incapacity had increased:—Held: (1) the employers have an absolute right to redeem, & the judge has no discretion to refuse such application; (2) the application of the workman to review not being in existence at the date of the hearing of the employers’ application to redeem & the right of the employers to redeem having become crystallised by that date, the subsequent application to review could have no effect.—ELLIOTT, LTD. v. HOBBS (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 509, C. A.

3771a. —.—.]—An injured workman was paid full compensation at 22s. 10d. per week until Mar. 23, 1933. On Oct. 31, 1933, an agreement was entered into between the parties, whereby the employer agreed to employ the workman on light work at 2s. 6d. per day for eight months during the year & to pay compensation at 14s. 7d. per week. On Jan. 7, 1936, the employer applied to redeem the weekly payments on the basis of a weekly payment of 14s. 7d. per week, & the workman applied for a review of the award on the ground of a change of circumstances:—

basis of a weekly payment of 14s. 7d.; (2) the employers should have asked for a review of the weekly payment & redemption, & the county ct. judge was not bound on an application for redemption on the footing of a weekly payment of 14s. 7d. to proceed to a review of the weekly sum; (3) the counter-application of the workman for a review did not oblige the county ct. judge to review the payment for the purposes of the employer’s application to redeem.—*PICK v. 3801a. — Scheme inapplicable where employment occasional—What is occasional work.]—By Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, clause 2, the scheme is made to apply to all workmen employed in the grinding of metal by mechanical power or in glazing, when such glazing is carried on in the same room as the grinding, but by proviso (a) thereof the scheme is not to apply, if such employment is occasional only, & for not more than eight hours in any week. A workman, employed by knife-blade manufacturers, superintended the girls in the glazing shop, & also worked on the processes of glazing known as rebuffing & whitening. In the course of his work he used an abrasive wheel in the whitening shop, whitening involving the raising of silica dust. He became totally disabled from silicosis & was certified accordingly. The county ct. judge found that the work done by the workman in rebuffing & whitening was "occasional only & for not more than eight hours in any week," & was, therefore, within the above proviso, & that he was thereby precluded from the benefit of the scheme. The workman appealed:—Held: for the employment to fall within the proviso it must be both "occasional only" & "for not more than eight hours in any week." In this case the workman was called on, under his ordinary employment, to do the work, & therefore, such work was not "occasional only."—MAKIN v. NEEDHAM, VELL & TYZACK, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. O. 76, C. A.

3801b. — Disablement before Scheme in operation.]—By Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, dated Dec. 11, 1928, workmen engaged in certain processes are brought within the operation of the 1925 Act. By para. 2 the scheme came into operation on Feb. 1, 1929, & is made to apply to all workmen employed at any time on or after Jan. 1, 1929, in the processes therein specified. By para. 11 1925 Act, s. 14, requiring the claim to be made within six months of the happening of the accident, is made to apply, the disablement being treated as the date of the accident. A street mason employed on Jan. 1, 1929, on a process within the scheme was taken ill on Jan. 8, & later went to hospital suffering from silicosis. He did not know until Apr. that he was entitled to compensation. On Apr. 28 he wrote to the certifying surgeon who, however, was away. He took no further steps to get certified until at the end of June he was discharged from hospital in order to see the certifying surgeon, who examined him & certified him on July 2, 1929, to be disabled by silicosis as from Jan. 10, 1929. On July 12 he first gave notice to his employer of the accident & made a claim. The county ct. judge held that the accident having occurred between Jan. 1 and Feb. 1, 1929, was not one to which the scheme applied, & that there was no reasonable cause why the workman should have delayed making his claim until two days after the six months had expired. The workman appealed:—Held: although the Scheme did not become operative until Feb. 1, 1929, it nevertheless applied to all workmen employed on or after Jan. 1, 1929, & therefore applied to a workman employed on Jan. 1, 1929, who was certified after that date as being disabled. On the second point the award was upheld on the ground that so. Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928—Duty to furnish information as to previous employment—Time for furnishing.]—Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, para. 13, enacts that a claimant for compensation under the Scheme must furnish the employer from whom compensation is claimed with true information as to his previous employment, & that, if the claimant withholds information, he shall forfeit any right to compensation under the Scheme. A workman, who had been certified by the certifying surgeon to be totally disabled by silicosis, claimed compensation from his employer. His claim having been refused, he brought arbn. proceedings, & in the initial writ furnished for the first time the particulars as to his previous employment required by para. 13 of the Scheme:—Held: there being in para. 13 no time limit within which the information must be furnished, the workman, having furnished it in the initial writ, was not in breach of para. 13; & accordingly, he had not forfeited his right to compensation.—HENRY v. GLADSTONE, [1931] S. O. 228; 24 B. W. C. O. Supp. 1.—SCOT.

si. Disease result of "long exposure"

—Two certificates.]—Industrial Diseases Order, 1929, para. 2, limits the right of a workman, who is disabled for certain forms of employment by the industrial disease of dermatitis produced by dust or liquids, to recover compensation to cases where the arbitrator is satisfied that the disease is the result of "long exposure" to dust & liquids.

A workman employed by rubber manufacturers as a tyre builder, an employment which exposed him to the fumes of benzene, was certified disabled by dermatitis, due to the nature of his employment, in Sept. 1934, & he received compensation as for total incapacity until Nov. 1935, when he obtained a National Health Insurance certificate of fitness for work, & his employers ceased payment. On Jan. 4, 1936, he was given work by the employers as a labourer to their electricians who were doing general repairs while the works were closed for the holidays & no tyre building was being carried on. Within three days, however, he again developed dermatitis, & was certified to be disabled as from Jan. 7, 1936. In arbn. proceedings the employers maintained that the second certificate of disablement could alone be regarded, & as that disablement was not the result of

"long exposure," the limitation in the Order applied. In awarding compensation as for partial incapacity, the arbitrator found that the workman had never wholly recovered from the original disablement in 1934, which was the result of "long exposure"; that his subsequent condition was one of increased susceptibility to another disabling attack; & that his disablement on Jan. 7, 1936, was due to that susceptibility in addition to the conditions under which he worked between Jan. 4 & Jan. 7.

In a question as to whether, in determining liability for compensation, the effects of the original disablement might be treated as a cause of the injury notwithstanding the second certified disablement:—Held: while the second certificate established that, as from Jan. 7, 1936, the workman was disabled from earning full wages through dermatitis, it could not be read as importing that he had recovered from the disease previously certified, & was consistent with the view that the later disablement was simply due to a recrudescence of the original disease, & accordingly, the arbitrator was entitled to make his award on the basis of an original injury by accident in Sept. 1934.—MACNAMARA v. INDIA TYRE & RUBBER CO., [1937] S. O. 136.—SCOT.

3801d. Right to compensation not limited to skilled workers.]—Appl. was employed by resps., who were varnish manufacturers, as a general labourer. He was twenty-two years of age & his wages were £2 a week. His work was to help with the loading & unloading of vehicles, & clean & fill old varnish drums. In the course of his work he came into contact with rosin, turps, wood-oil, gum, etc., & he had to use turpentine for cleaning his hands as soap would not remove the dirt. In Dec. 1929, the certifying surgeon certified that he was suffering from dermatitis produced by dust & liquids & was thereby disabled for work. On a claim for compensation under the Act the county ct. judge awarded him a weekly sum for compensation from Dec. 7, 1929, until Feb. 1, 1930, when it was to be terminated. He held that appl. was not then disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed; that he was employed as a labourer simply & that he had full capacity to perform all kinds of general labouring work; & that the wording of sect. 43 (1) (i) precluded appl., who was a labourer, from recovering compensation as a worker in the varnish-making industry or otherwise than as a general labourer:—Held: the view taken by the county ct. judge that the workman did not come within sect. 43 was erroneous. There was nothing in the words of that sect. which limited its application to skilled workers in a process. It applied to any ordinary unskilled labourer who suffered from any industrial disease due to the nature of his employment, & who was thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed.—GILMORE v. Workmen's Compensation (Industrial Diseases) Consolidation Order, 1929, para. 1, extends the provisions of sect. 43 "subject to the modifications hereinafter specified," to (inter alia) cataract caused by exposure to rays from molten or red-hot metal. Para. 3 provides that "a person suffering from cataract shall not be entitled to compensation under the provisions of the said sect. on account of that disease for more than six months in all," subject to a power of extension at the discretion of the arbitrator acting on the advice of the medical referee:—Held: para. 3 was a "modification" within sect. 43 (3), & was therefore not ultra vires.—LEONARD v. 3801f. Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme—Necessity for employment on process when Scheme brought into force.]—By para. 2 of Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, which came into force on July 1, 1927, the Scheme is made to apply to any workman employed on or after that date in certain processes connected with the grinding of metals. By para. 7 the certifying surgeon is to certify the date of disablement, & by para. 4 the workman, to qualify for compensation, must have been employed in the specified processes within the three years previous to the certified date. By para. 5, where the workman has been employed in the processes for not less than five years, the onus is on the employer to prove that the disease is not due to employment in the processes instead of on the workman to prove that the disease is so due. A workman had been employed as a nail & tack maker for thirty-five years & as such had for many years to use a sandstone grindstone. On Feb. 7, 1930, the workman ceased work, & on Aug. 19, 1930, he was certified by the certifying surgeon to be suffering from silicosis, the date of disablement being fixed as Feb. 7, 1930. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge found that, although the workman had not been employed in any process mentioned in para. 2 of the Scheme since the Scheme came into force, yet as he had been employed previously in such a process for not less than five years, he held that the employers had failed to discharge the onus put upon them by para. 5 of the Scheme, & therefore held that the disease must be deemed to be due to the employment. He accordingly made an award in favour of the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: by the finding of fact that the workman had not been employed in any process mentioned in the Scheme on or after the date when the Scheme came into force, the workman was not within the Scheme at all, & therefore para. 5 could not be made to apply to him. Appeal allowed.—HUGHES v. HARRISON & COOK (1931), 24 B. W. C. O. 104, C. A.

3801g. Date of disablement—No date in certificate—Date of accident.]—Various Industries (Silicosis) Amendment Scheme, 1930, which came into force on Feb. 1, 1931, held applicable to a workman who ceased work by reason of silicosis on Dec. 27, 1930, for the reason that no date of commencement of the disease was stated in the surgeon's certificate which was given on May 7, 1931.—BRIDGES v. NEW ROCK COLLIERIES Co. (1932), 101 L. J. K. B. 557; 25 B. W. C. C. 155, C. A.

3801h. — No wages earned within twelve months of date—Calculation of compensation.—Where a workman is certified to be totally disabled from silicosis & the date of disablement is more than two years after the date when he was last employed in a process coming within Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1927, he can, in view of the proviso to para. 4, sub-para. 1, of the Scheme that "no compensation shall be payable if the workman has not been employed at any time in the processes within the three years previous to the date of total disablement," recover compensation from that last employer, notwithstanding that by para. 10 of the Scheme sects. 8 to 13 of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, are made applicable for the purpose of fixing the amount of compensation but with the exception that the amount of compensation is to be calculated with reference to the earnings of the workman under the employer from whom compensation is recoverable under the Scheme.

The provision in sect. 9 (2) of 1925 Act that the weekly payment of compensation in cases of total incapacity shall be fixed by reference to "the workman's average weekly earnings during the previous twelve months" must for the purpose of the Scheme be moulded so as to apply to the altered circumstances, by treating it as referring to the previous twelve months during which the workman was employed in a process coming within the Scheme.—BACON v. WILLS (A. W.) & SONS, LTD., [1933] 2 K. B. 493; 102 L. J. K. B. 611; 149 L. T. 385; 49 T. L. R. 511; 26 B. W. C. C. 374, C. A.

3801j. — — — — —.]—By para. 4 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, where a workman is certified as totally disabled from silicosis, & the disease is due to the employment in the processes whether under one or more employers, compensation shall be payable during such disablement as if the disease were a personal injury by accident arising out of & in the course of that employment. By para. 11 of the same Scheme the total disablement is to be treated as the happening of the accident. A collier working in a process to which this scheme applied, whose average weekly earnings were 56s. 8d. gave up work in Nov. 1929, owing to illness which ultimately proved to be silicosis. From June, 1930, to March, 1931, he was re-employed by the same employers as a white-washer, work not within the scheme, at an average weekly wage of 45s. 4d. He was unemployed from Mar. 1931, to Nov. 1931, when he returned to work with them as a whitewasher. He ceased work owing to illness on Dec. 11, 1931. In May, 1932, a Medical Board certified him as totally disabled from silicosis, & fixed the date of disablement as Jan. 1, 1932. The workman claimed to be paid compensation based on his average weekly earnings as a collier, but the county ct. judge held that compensation should be based on the average weekly earnings for the twelve months immediately previous to the certified date of disablement, viz. on the lower rate paid to a whitewasher. The workman appealed:—Held: the combined effect of paras. 4 & 11 of the Scheme was to provide that compensation should be based on the average weekly earnings earned in the process which gave rise to the disease, & the words "previous twelve months" in sect. 9 (2) must be construed accordingly. The workman must therefore be paid compensation based on the higher rate of a collier.—COLE v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 560, C. A.

PART XIV. SECT. 22, SUB-SECT. 2.

3811a. 1. Silicosis—Construction of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme.—A workman was employed as a "hewer" up to Dec. 1931, in a private quarry, his work within the curtilage of the quarry being to dress, for use as building material, sandstone which had been won from the quarry. The quarrymaster was a member of the Sandstone Industry Compensation Fund, Ltd., & had paid, since 1929, levies in respect of his employees, including the workman in question. In Jan. 1933, the workman was certified as suffering from disablement due to a process specified in para. 2 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, & he obtained an award of compensation against a firm of builders, his last employers in these processes. In a question whether the quarrymaster, as a previous employer of the workman, was liable to make contribution to the builders under para. 8 of the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme:—Held: (1) "manipulation" in the sense of para. 2 of Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, was not restricted to any particular process of preparing sandstone, but included fine as well as rough dressing; (2) the work on which the workman had been engaged at the quarry, being that of fine dressing, was a process included in the Sandstone Scheme; (3) as the provisions of Various Industries (Sil-cosis) Scheme, were, in these circumstances, excluded by the proviso to para. 2 of that Scheme, the quarrymaster was not liable as a contributor. Appeal allowed.—ALEXANDER MILNE & SON v. MACLEAN & SON (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. Suppt. 44.—SCOT.

Pulmonary fibrosis—Whether caused by silica dust—Onus of proof.*—Sect. 7 (1) of New South Wales Workers' Compensation Act, 1926-29, provides for the payment of compensation by his employer to a workman who has received an injury, & by sect. 8 (1), "injury" means "personal injury arising out of & in the course of the employment & includes a disease so arising whether of sudden onset or of such a nature as to be contracted by 3811a. Silicosis—Construction of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928.—By clause 2 (vii) of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, the scheme is made to apply to all workmen employed in the potteries in certain specified processes only. One of such specified processes is "any process in or incidental to the manufacture of china or earthenware, including sanitary earthenware, electrical earthenware, & ware tiles." A workman was employed to put spouts & handles on teapots made of Jet & Rockingham ware, & was certified as being totally disabled from silicosis. Evidence was given before the county ct. judge that Jet & Rockingham ware was a special branch of the pottery trade & did not come within the meaning of the trade term "earthenware"—Held: the words used in describing the processes specified in the scheme are to be interpreted in the technical sense in which they would be understood by those engaged in the trades concerned & not in the wide sense in which they might be understood by the general public.—DONCASTER v. SUDLOW (R.) & SONS (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 564, C. A.

3811b. ———.—J.—A coal miner was employed for eleven years, during which time he worked in rock known as "clift." He was then certified as being totally disabled from silicosis & claimed compensation under Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, as amended by Silicosis Amendment Scheme, 1930. The 1928 scheme excluded from the definition of silica rock in clause 2 (i.) of the scheme "any rock containing less than 50 per cent. free silica." These words were deleted by the Amendment Scheme, 1930. At the hearing of the arbn. the employers called a geologist who gave evidence that "clift" did not contain 50 per cent. free silica & was not silica rock. The county ct. judge accepted this evidence, & found that the workman had not been employed in work in silica rock, & therefore had not worked in any process covered by the scheme. The workman appealed:—Held: there was no evidence that "clift" was silica rock. The question was one of fact for the county

ct. judge.—DAVIES v. OAKDALE NAVIGATION COLLIERIES, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 374, C. A.

3811c. ———.—J.—A miner worked in his employer's collieries from 1910 to Apr. 26, 1929, when he had to cease work. In Dec. 1931, he was certified to be suffering from silicosis, & to have been disabled in Aug. 1931. His employer admitted that the disease was due to employment in the processes of drilling & blasting in silica rock, but alleged that his employment in such processes had ceased before Jan. 1, 1929. The Silicosis Scheme of 1928 only applied to workmen employed in such processes after Jan. 1, 1929. The county ct. judge, after seeing samples of the materials in which the workman had been working between Jan. 1, 1929, & Apr. 26, 1929, found as a fact that the workman had been engaged in drilling & blasting in silica rock after Jan. 1, 1929, & held that he was therefore entitled to the benefit of the Scheme. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Whether the quantum of silica rock, in regard to which the workman was employed, is sufficient to bring him within the scheme, is a question of fact for the judge. Appeal dismissed.—*PRICE v. 3811d. ———.—J.—A miner was employed after Jan. 1, 1929, until June 12, 1929, when he became disabled for work by silicosis as a rider on the trams in which silica rock was conveyed. A great deal of dust was created while the trams were moving. He would often have to handle the silica rock when the trams overturned. The county ct. judge found that the workman was employed in the process of handling or moving silica rock in or incidental to the processes specified in the scheme, & made his award for the gradual process other than a disease caused by silica dust." Workmen's Compensation (Silicosis) Act, 1920, as amended, provides for the payment of compensation by the employers of workmen in specified industries & processes involving exposure to silica dust who suffer death or total or partial disablement from diseases of the pulmonary or respiratory organs caused by exposure to silica dust. "Coal-mining" is not included in the industries or processes so specified.

Resp., who was employed by appts. as a miner in one of their coal-mines, became partially incapacitated for work owing to pulmonary fibrosis resulting from the inhalation of dust in the coal-mine. The Workers' Compensation Commission before whom his claim for compensation came, & who were not satisfied that the partial incapacity for work resulted from a disease caused by silica dust, awarded him compensation as for partial incapacity. On a case stated at the request of appts.:—Held: resp. was entitled to compensation. The intention of Workers' Compensation Act was, as appears from sect. 6 (1) to provide for compensation in every case of injury, including disease, arising out of & in the course of a workman's employment, & to give effect to the Act the words "other than a disease caused by silica dust," must be read as inserted not to limit the Act, but to prevent it being appealed to in particular circumstances where the relief would overlap that provided by a special & narrower scheme. Till such overlapping appears its operation is unaffected. To hold otherwise would have the result that where the medical evidence showed that the disease was due to dust but could not specify the kind of dust, the workman would be left without any compensation at all though undoubtedly suffering from a disease arising out of & in the course of his employment. Coal-mining not being an industry brought within the operation of the Act dealing with silicosis, if disease in a coal-miner was affirmatively proved to be due to silica dust the workman was left unprotected, for in such case he would not come within either Workers' Compensation Act or Workmen's Compensation (Silicosis) Act.—*METROPOLITAN COAL CO., LTD. v. sh. Dupuytren's Contraction.—A worker who had been employed in the hat-making industry for periods aggregating eighteen years, became incapacitated for work by Dupuytren's Contraction, a disease of gradual progress, & claimed compensation from his last employer in that industry, who denied liability. The Comrs. held that Dupuytren's Contraction is not in the same category as an industrial disease, for instance, lead poisoning, for the reason that the cause of lead poisoning may arise out of the employment, whereas the cause of Dupuytren's Contraction remains unknown; that the real question at issue was one of fact as to whether appt.'s employment in the felt hat industry was such as would aggravate the disease after its onset, accelerate its progress, & be a contributing cause to his incapacity for work. The Commission found that as the evidence did not establish any connection between appt.'s employment & his incapacity for work, his claim for compensation must be disallowed.—*HAMILTON v. R. C. 3811f. ———.—By para. 2 (vii.) of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, the scheme applies to all workmen employed on or after Jan. 1, 1929, in "any process in or incidental to the manufacture of china . . . up to & including the preparation for glazing." A workman was employed in the pottery trade as a glost oddman & wad-squeezer. He made wads of clay which were used to close the saggars in which the ware was placed, after having been dipped in the liquid glaze, for heating & hardening in the glost ovens. The workman was disabled by silicosis & applied for compensation. The county ct. judge found that the operation of glazing included the process of placing the ware in saggars & then placing the saggars in the glost ovens, but held that as the wads were actually made before this was done, the workman was employed in a process in or incidental to the manufacture of china up to & including the preparation for glazing. He therefore made his award for the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: on the facts found by the county ct. judge as to what processes constituted the operation of glazing, the making of the wads was a process which belonged to the operation of glazing itself & did not come within the words "any process . . . up to & including the preparation for glazing."—ELLIS v. CARTWRIGHT & EDWARDS, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 378, C. A.

3811g. 'Process involving exposure to silica dust'—Question of fact.—A miner was employed first as a ripper & later as a stallman in a coal mine from 1913 to 1930. As a stallman he was only occasionally employed in drilling & blasting. He ceased work in Nov. 1930; a medical board certified that he was suffering from silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, & that total disablement commenced in Oct. 1931. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman had been employed since Jan. 1, 1929 (the date from which the Silicosis Scheme, 1928, applied), in the process of drilling & blasting within the meaning of the scheme, & that the stone in which he worked was silica rock within the meaning of the scheme as amended in 1930. He therefore awarded compensation. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. It is a question of fact for the judge whether the workman is sufficiently engaged in the operation under consideration to bring him within the scheme as being employed in a process specified therein.—KILBRIDE v. WILLIAM HARRISON, LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 197, C. A.

Both Morgan & Hutchings did work breaking down shale which, though not silica rock in itself, contained small lenticles of quartz which became broken in the course of work. The county ct. judge found that the men were not employed in any process referred to in the Scheme. This award was affirmed by the Ct. of Appeal. The workmen appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: as the lenticles themselves were silica rock & were broken in the course of work, the workmen were within process (v) of Clause 2 referring to the breaking of silica rock. Appeal allowed.—MORGAN v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD., HUTCHINGS v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 358, H. L.

3811j. ———.—For twenty-two years a miner was employed in blasting & drilling stone. In Sept. 1928, he was employed by fresh employers as a stone ripper breaking friable shale. On July 7, 1933, he was certified to be suffering from silicosis. On a claim by him for compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, & the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the employers denied that the disease was due to the nature of his employment by them. The workman alleged that he was employed in breaking a dry admixture containing a dry deposit or dry residue of silica, & was therefore brought within the scheme. The county ct. judge, after hearing the evidence of expert analysts accepted the evidence of the employers' expert, who stated that the shale was not a dry admixture containing a dry deposit or dry residue of silica, & held that the workman was not employed in any process within the scheme. The workman appealed:—Held: the question was one of fact, & there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—GLEDHALL v. DALTON MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 181, C. The contention of the employers was upheld by the county ct. judge who made his award in favour of the employers. The workmen appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had not sufficiently considered whether the work in which the workmen were engaged might not come within those general "sweeping-up" clauses of the scheme which followed the clauses which specified more particularly the processes in which workmen must be engaged in order to obtain the benefit of the scheme & the cases must be remitted for him to do so.—MORGAN v. Under the provisions of the Scheme an employer could escape liability in respect of this process if he could prove that the workman had not, during the employment to which the disease was alleged to be due, been exposed to the dust of silica rock. Silica rock was stated to mean, inter alia, quartz. Evidence was given at the arbn. that there were particles of quartz in the stone in which the workman had been working. The county ct. judge found that the workman had been employed in a process within the Scheme & that the employers had failed to prove that the workman had not been exposed to the dust of silica rock & made his award for the workman. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings of the county ct. judge & no misdirection on his part, although he had failed to find in terms that the silicosis was due to employment in the relevant process. 3811n. — Employment under different schemes — Right of election.—[By para. 5 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, it is provided that if the workman had been employed in the processes specified in that scheme for a period amounting to not less than five years, the disease shall be deemed to be due to employment in the processes unless the employer proves the contrary. By para. 4 (a) of Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, it is provided that no compensation shall be payable if the medical board certifies that the silicosis could not have been contracted in the industry owing to the shortness of the time during which the workman has been employed therein.

A stonemason was certified under Various Industries Scheme to be totally disabled by silicosis from June 27, 1932. From July 1924, to Jan. 1931, he had been employed by G., & then for three years by S. From Apr. to June, 1931, he was employed by P. From July to Aug. 1931, he was again employed by G., & lastly, from Sept. 1931, to Mar. 1932, he was again employed by S. G. & P. were engaged in business to which Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme applied, & S. was engaged in business to which Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme applied, but the work done by the workman for all the employers was of the same class & exposed him in all cases to silica dust. The county ct. judge dismissed a claim for compensation made against G. on the ground that the workman should have proceeded against the employers who last employed him working in silica dust. The workman appealed:—Held: the workman was entitled to elect to proceed under any scheme applicable provided he proceeded against the last employer who employed him in a process under that scheme. Therefore he was entitled to proceed against resps. who had employed him for 6½ years under Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, rather than against his last employer who had only employed him for short periods under Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, & he was particularly justified in doing so in view of para. 5 of Various Industries Scheme, & para. 4 (a) of Sandstone Industry Scheme.—*VALE v. 3811o. — Construction of Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme.—[By para. 2 of the Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the Scheme applies to the processes of (i.) grinding metals, (ii.) work incidental to grinding metals, & (iii.) racing grindstones for the purpose of grinding metals, provided that the Scheme does not apply to processes (i.) & (ii.) in the case of machine file grinding where the grindstone is enclosed & the metal immersed in water.

A machine file grinder died after being certified by a medical board as being disabled by silicosis. His duty was to grind files by means of an enclosed power-driven grindstone. Each grindstone lasted about a week. Before a fresh grindstone could be used it had to be freely revolved by him to see whether it was perfectly true. During this process the surface was smoothed, if necessary, by means of hacker saws. During the subsequent operation of grinding files the grindstone would require to have fresh inequalities removed from time to time by the same hacker saws. The widow claimed compensation on behalf of herself & her infant child as dependants. At the arbn. evidence was called that the process of revolving the grindstone before work on the files commenced was termed "racing" by the men engaged in the work. The employers' manager said that any use of the hacker saws was "hacking." The county ct. judge found that the preliminary use of the hacker saws was both "hacking" & "racing," & held that the process in which the workman was engaged was not exempted from the scheme. He therefore made his award for the widow. The employers appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge having found as a fact on sufficient evidence that the preliminary use of the hacker saws was "racing" within the meaning of the scheme, it was a process to which the scheme applied & was not within the exemption stated in the proviso to para. 2.—ROBERTS v. ENGLISH STEEL CORPN., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 387, C. A.

3811p. —Time for making claim.]—By sect. 14 of 1925 Act, claims for compensation must be made within six months from the occurrence of the accident giving rise to the claim, unless the workman is prevented from making a claim within that time by (inter alia) a reasonable cause. By the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, the date certified as the date of total disablement is to be treated as being the date of the occurrence of the accident. A miner contracted silicosis in 1930 & was certified as being partially disabled by that disease in 1931. His condition became worse, & he was unable to work, but, acting on the advice of his doctor, he abstained from applying for a certificate of total disablement until Apr. 1935. In that month a medical board certified that he had been totally disabled through silicosis as from Oct. 24, 1933. On Apr. 25, 1935, he gave notice to his employers of a claim for compensation:—Held: the facts justified the county ct. judge in holding that there was reasonable cause for the workman's failure to give notice of his claim within the prescribed period.—GWILYM v. 3811q. Dermatitis.]—A dock labourer had been employed almost continuously for forty years in dealing with & handling oils, but in June, 1929, was discharged, owing to bad trade, & remained unemployed until July 31, 1930, when he was employed by fresh employers. In Oct., Nov. & Dec. 1930, he was employed in discharging & handling Russian turpentine. On Dec. 24 a certifying surgeon certified that he was suffering from dermatitis, & that the disease commenced on Dec. 8, 1930. He was paid full compensation, which was terminated on Nov. 7, 1931. He applied for a continuance of compensation. The county ct. judge found that he had contracted the disease through the long continued exposure involved in handling oils during the forty years ending in 1929, & therefore held that under para. 2 of Workmen's Compensation (Industrial Diseases) Consolidation Order, 1929, he was entitled to compensation although he was disabled only from handling oils, & made an award for the workman for 10s. a week. The employers appealed:—Held: the interpretation of the words "long continued exposure" was a question of fact & degree for the county ct. judge, & he had in no way misdirected himself. Appeal dismissed.—HAGAN v. LONDON OIL STORAGE CO., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 278, C. A.

3811r. —.]—A steel chipper had been employed for seventeen years without having suffered from any skin disease. On Aug. 18, 1933, he had to give up his work owing to skin trouble, & on Oct. 17, 1933, he was certified to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids as from Aug. 27, 1933. In Aug. neither he nor his panel doctor connected his disease with his employment. He gave notice to his employers of the disease in Oct. 1933, but did not make a claim for compensation until Mar. 1934. In his evidence the panel doctor said he thought the skin trouble was due to the employment & added that he saw no other cause. The certifying surgeon was called by the employers & stated that the disease was not due to industrial infection but was a seborrhoeic infection not due to occupation. The county ct. judge said that after carefully considering the evidence he was not satisfied that the dermatitis was caused by the employment, & he thought that the dermatitis was caused by some agency not connected with the employment. He accordingly made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: there was no misdirection on the part of the county ct. judge, & evidence to support his finding.—HOLFORD v. STEEL, PEECH & TOZER, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 260, C. A.

3811s. —.]—In May, 1933, a workman began work in dye works as mate to a dyer. In October, 1933, eruptions having appeared on his hands, he was certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids, but the certificate was never served on the employers. At about the same time he was examined by a dermatologist, who formed the opinion that the workman was suffering from seborrhoeic eczema, an idiopathic type of dermatitis, & not from dermatitis due to dust or liquids. In Jan. 1934, the workman went back to work, but the eruptions reappeared, & in Feb. 1934, the certifying surgeon again certified the workman to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids, the certificate being this time served on the employers who paid him compensation until Mar. 1934, when they gave him work as a van boy. In Mar. 1935, slight touches of rash appeared on the neck & chin, & he was re-examined by the dermatologist, who was of opinion that "he was suffering again from seborrhoeic eczema." The certifying surgeon refused to give him another certificate, & in May, 1935, the workman got employment with other employers in a canteen. In Dec. 1935, a rash having reappeared on his arms & neck, the workman filed a request for arbn. On the hearing of the arbn. the certifying surgeon & another doctor who were called by the workman, stated that in their opinion the workman was at that time suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids. The dermatologist who was called by the employers gave it as his opinion that the workman had suffered both in Oct. 1933, & in Mar. 1935, & was still suffering, from seborrhoeic eczema & nothing else. His evidence was corroborated by another dermatologist. The county ct. judge found that the workman had fully recovered from the dermatitis produced by dust or liquids which had been certified in Feb. 1934, & that since Mar. 1935, he had only suffered from seborrhoeic eczema & made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—STANFORD v. FLINN & SON, LTD. (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 126, C. A.

If the certificate had been granted immediately after the examination of the workman by the certifying surgeon the claim for compensation could have been made in time:—Held: on the facts, the failure to make the claim within the prescribed period was due to the delay of the certifying surgeon &, so far as the workman was concerned, was occasioned by reasonable cause, within proviso (b) to sect. 14 (1), & the workman was entitled to compensation.—*KITCHEN v. Certificate of death—Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928—Whether presence of medical referee at post-mortem essential.]—By clause 14 (1) of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, it is provided that where an application is made on behalf of dependants of a deceased workman to a medical referee for a certificate that death has been due to silicosis or silicosis & tuberculosis, the medical referee must, after a post-mortem examination, give a certificate in accordance with the facts & such certificate shall be conclusive. It is further provided by the same paragraph that the post-mortem examination shall, if possible, be made by or under the personal supervision of the medical referee. The last provision is directory & not imperative. Therefore, where, on the death of a workman, a coroner ordered a post-mortem examination, which the medical referee was not invited to attend, & subsequently, after an examination of portions of the lungs, the medical referee gave a certificate that death was due to silicosis & tuberculosis:—Held: (1) the provisions of clause 14 (1) of the Scheme were complied with & the certificate was conclusive; (2) further, the correct procedure to quash a certificate would be to obtain a rule nisi for a writ of certiorari.—*HINDMARSH v. 3816b. Application for certificate—Notice to employer—Necessity for.]—A workman employed in the process of cotton-spinning by means of self-acting mules noticed a black pimple on his scrotum. His panel doctor who happened also to be the certifying surgeon for the district, suspected epitheliomatous cancer (being item 13 (a) in the Extension of Sched. III) & sent him to the infirmary where the diagnosis was confirmed. The workman obtained a certificate of disablement by such disease & notice thereof was given to the employer. The employer appealed to the medical referee. The workman then had the pimple removed & sent for microscopic examination, & the report of the examination was sent to the medical referee. As a result the medical referee reported that the workman was not suffering from epitheliomatous cancer but from a keratotic condition. By the Workmen's Compensation (Industrial Diseases) Order, S. R. & O., 1932, No. 314, this condition was placed within Sched. III as an industrial disease, but it was also provided in the Order that compensation should not be payable under the Act for that disease unless at least one week's notice of intention to apply for a certifying surgeon's certificate had been given to the employer. No such notice had been given, & on that ground the employer refused to pay compensation. On the workman's application for compensation the county ct. judge held that the notice was a condition precedent to claiming compensation & made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: under the special provisions of the Order, the requirement as to *sk. Certificate granted by wrong surgeon—Whether agreement to pay without certificate.]—*A workman was certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from dermatitis, & his employers paid him compensation until, as a result of a medical examination, they ceased such payment. In an arbitration at the workman's instance to determine the existence & extent of liability to pay compensation, it appeared at the proof that the certificate had been signed by the certifying surgeon for the district in which the workman lived & not for that in which he was employed. The arbitrator having found (a) that the employers were under agreement to pay compensation without requiring a certificate, as provided for by sect. 44 (2); (b) that the disease was due to the nature of the workman's employment in terms of para. 2 of the 1929 Order, & having continued the arbn. proceedings:—Held: (1) the certificate of the certifying surgeon was invalid in respect that it did not conform with the requirements of sect. 43 (1) of 1925 Act; (2) on a construction of sect. 44 (2) of 1925 Act, the employers had not agreed to pay compensation "without requiring" the workman to produce a certificate, in respect that compensation had been paid on the faith of a certificate subsequently discovered to be invalid; (3) the arbitrator, in the absence either of a valid certificate or of a valid agreement under the Act, was not entitled to find that the disease was due to the nature of the employment; & (4) the arbn. proceedings ought not to have been continued but ought to have been sisted in order that the evidence already obtained might be available to either party in the event of the workman taking further action by proposing either a valid certificate or a memorandum of agreement.

3818a. ———.]—A french polisher had suffered intermittently from dermatitis since 1925, while working for different employers. The medical referee issued a certificate on Jan. 30, 1928, in which he certified that on Jan. 30, 1928, appct. was no longer disabled by dermatitis. On Mar. 10, 1928, appct. was examined by the certifying surgeon, who on that date certified that she was suffering from dermatitis & had been disabled thereby since Sept. 29, 1927. On a claim by the workman for compensation based on the certifying surgeon's certificate of Mar. 10, 1928, the county ct. judge held the two certificates, being inconsistent, the certificate of the medical referee must prevail to the effect that the workman was not disabled after Jan. 30, 1928:—Held: there was no vital inconsistency between the two certificates, bearing in mind the intermittent character of dermatitis, & the certificate of Mar. 10 was consistent with dermatitis having broken out again.—*MACY v. 3819a. Certificate incomplete—Death of certifying surgeon—Subsequent certificate by successor—Validity.—On July 12, 1926, eighteen months after the workman had left his employment, Dr. S., the certifying surgeon of the district, certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning. The certificate did not comply with the regulations as no date of disablement was filled in, nor were the words "I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out. Before the workman could see Dr. S. to have the omission put right the doctor died. After Dr. F. had been appointed in his place the workman, on Aug. 12, 1926, obtained a certificate from him in which the date of disablement was filled in as Nov. 23, 1924. In answer to the workmen's request for arbn., based on Dr. F.'s certificate, the employers denied liability to pay compensation on the ground that, as Dr. S.'s certificate did not specify the date of disablement, such date was deemed to be the date of the certificate, & was final & conclusive, & Dr. F.'s certificate was accordingly invalid, & as the workman had not been in their employment for more than twelve months prior to that date of disablement, he could not recover compensation. The county ct. judge upheld that contention:—Held: the first certificate was incomplete in that it had not dealt with the date of disablement in either manner provided by the regulations & was invalid, & the workman, not being able by reason of the death of Dr. S. to have the matter put in order, was entitled to rely on the second certificate.—POWELL v. CAULDON POTTERIES, LTD. (1926), 96 L. J. K. B. 245; 136 L. T. 532; 20 B. W. C. C. 16, C. A.

3819b. Certificate ineffective—Issue of second certificate.—A miner was certified by the certifying surgeon as being disabled from Mar. 31, 1924, by miner's nystagmus. From Oct. 1924, to Mar. 1929, he worked on the surface as a partially incapacitated workman. On Mar. 8, 1929, he was served under 1925 Act, s. 12 (3) with a doctor's certificate alleging complete recovery, & the question was ultimately referred to a medical referee, who, in Apr. 1929, certified that the workman was not then suffering from miner's nystagmus & was fit to resume work underground. On Dec. 12, 1929, the workman obtained from the same certifying surgeon a certificate that he was disabled by miner's nystagmus, but the certificate did not certify a date from which disablement commenced, nor were the words "& I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out in accordance with the instructions contained in Form 3 in the schedule to the regulations as to certifying surgeons, which states "[if the surgeon is unable to certify a date on which the disablement commenced, he should strike out this part of the certificate. In that case the disablement will be deemed to have commenced on the date on which this certificate is given]." On obtaining this certificate the workman made a claim for compensation on his employers, who appealed to a medical referee. The medical referee on Jan. 4, 1930, dismissed the employer's appeal. The certifying surgeon then issued a second certificate which he ante-dated Dec. 12, 1929, & in which he certified that the workman's disablement commenced on Mar. 31, 1924. In Mar. 1930, the workman filed an application for arbn. based on an allegation of recurrence of the industrial disease which originally manifested itself in 1924. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers on the ground that the date of disablement must be taken to be Dec. 12, 1929, & that the certifying surgeon had no power to displace the certificate given on Dec. 12, 1929, by the certificate given in Jan. The workman appealed:—Held: the certificate of Dec. 12, 1929, was ineffective, as no date of disablement could be inferred from it, & the certifying surgeon was entitled to issue an effective certificate giving the date of disablement as Mar. 31, 1924. Full compensation was paid until an application by the employers to review the weekly payments. The workman was still incapacitated by dupuytren's contraction. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive as to dupuytren's contraction being a symptom of lead poisoning, & on contradictory medical evidence given at the hearing, & also on knowledge he had acquired some years before while sitting on a commission to consider industrial diseases, including dupuytren's contraction, held the symptoms, though still the same as those set out in the certificate, were not due to the certified disease, & reduced the compensation to 1*d.* a week. The case involved a point of law, & early in the hearing, counsel called attention to that fact, but the judge omitted to take any notes of the proceedings:—Held: (1) the certificate that the symptoms were due to the certified disease was conclusive, & evidence to the contrary was inadmissible, & there was no evidence of any new factor or new disease to support an award in reduction of compensation. From Oct. 19 onwards he became unfit for further work with loss of power in his left arm & leg, he became mentally incapable, his memory failed, & his heart got worse. On Nov. 15 he was admitted to hospital, where the medical superintendent found that he had long-standing disease of the heart caused by kidney trouble. On Nov. 23, the certifying surgeon visited the hospital, & on Nov. 28 certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning or its sequelæ & had been disabled as from Oct. 19. The medical superintendent was ignorant both of the visit & of the certificate of the certifying surgeon & when the workman died on Dec. 23 certified that the cause of death was cerebral hæmorrhage caused by valvular disease of the heart. The county ct. judge held he was not bound to find that death was due to the disease certified by the certifying surgeon.

The county ct. judge held the certificate of the certifying surgeon was conclusive & debarred him from hearing any evidence on behalf of the employers, which tended to show that he had not contracted the disease in their employment & that death did not result from the disease:—Held: the judge was not entitled to refuse to hear the evidence, & the case must be remitted for rehearing.—*NEEDHAM v. 3821e. ———.]—Pltfs., who were a colliery co., had in their employment early in 1929 two piece-work miners who, for reasons not here material, were not actually working & received no wages, though their names appeared in the pay sheets, for a period including Mar. 8 to Mar. 19. On Mar. 8 deft. insurance co. issued to pltfs. a cover note which insured pltfs. from Mar. 8 to Mar. 19 against claims for non-fatal accidents. During the currency of the cover note the certifying surgeon certified that the two workmen were suffering from miners' nystagmus & fixed the date of the beginning of the disablement as Mar. 11 in one case & Mar. 12 in the other case. The county ct. judge awarded both workmen compensation, but defts. refused to indemnify pltfs. on the grounds that the workmen suffered no injury to the question of the claimant's proneness to a recurrence of the disease. The referee certified that the claimant had wholly recovered & was fit for his ordinary work; & he further certified that there was no reasonable probability of a recrudescence of the disease, & no increased susceptibility to a fresh attack. Thereafter the workman lodged a minute, in which he averred that his certified condition was such that it was possible that he might become incapacitated through a recrudescence of the disease, & that a recrudescence had in fact occurred; & he craved the arbitrator to allow proof of the averments in his minute. The arbitrator having ended compensation:—Held: as the reference had displaced the arbn. as regarded inquiry into the workman's condition, & as the referee's certificate provided sufficient & conclusive evidence as to that condition, the only course open to the arbitrator was to end the compensation.—Appeal dismissed.—*CARRUTH v. —A workman was employed by resp. as a labourer at breaking up concrete floors & relaying them. After varying periods of employment he ultimately stopped work on July 22, 1929, & on July 30 obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon that he was disabled from dermatitis contracted during his employment by resp., & fixing the date of disablement as Mar. 14, 1929. Resp. paid the workman compensation till Nov. 19, 1929, when resp.'s doctor reported that the workman had practically recovered & was fit for any work except on cement. Resp. then employed the workman at other work till Dec. 24, 1929, when he was dismissed for want of work. After a period of unemployment the workman obtained work in Apr. 1930, with new employers in unloading lorries containing old iron, rags & bones. By May 2 the dermatitis had become so bad that he had to cease work. On Aug. 28, 1930, he obtained a second certificate from the certifying surgeon that he was suffering from dermatitis, but fixing the date of disablement at the date of the original disablement, Mar. 14, 1929. On this occasion no notice of disablement was given to resp., & he remained unaware of the certificate till the workman commenced the present proceedings against him for compensation on Sept. 19, 1930. The county ct. judge declined in the circumstances to treat the second certificate as conclusive of the date of disablement in accordance with 1925 Act, s. 43 (2), & on the evidence that the workman had recovered from the disablement of Mar. 14, 1929, by Nov. of that year, dismissed the application. On appeal:—Held: (1) as no notice of disablement had been given after the second certificate as required by 1925 Act, s. 14 & r. 41, sub-r. 2, of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, so that resp. was never given the opportunity of appealing to the medical referee as provided by reg. 8 of the Regulations as to Certifying Surgeons, the certificate was not conclusive of the date of disablement; (2) as there was evidence to support the county ct. judge's finding that the workman had recovered from the old disablement, the appeal must be dismissed.—*MASON v. 3821g. .]—A glass-blower had been employed by S. for thirty years & had become a highly skilled worker. His employment terminated in Apr. 1931, & he was out of work. On Aug. 16, 1932, he was taken on as a glass-blower on trial by W. & C. with a view to being permanently employed if his work should prove satisfactory. The proportion of his spoiled work was so high that he was dismissed on Aug. 17, 1932. In Oct. 1932, he obtained a certificate from a certifying surgeon which stated that he had been disabled by "cataract in glass-workers" since Aug. 12, 1932, & gave the name of his last employer as S. A claim made by him against S. failed for the reason that more than twelve months had elapsed between the end of his employment with S. & the date of his disablement. He then obtained a fresh certificate in Jan. 1933, in which the certifying surgeon altered the date of disablement to Aug. 17, 1932, & the name of his last employer to W. & C. The workman now made a claim against W. & C. for compensation for partial incapacity. The county ct. judge held that there was no loss of earning capacity because he was already suffering from cataract when he entered into employment with W. & C., & the high proportion of rejected work showed him to have become reduced in skill to the level of a glass-blower's labourer. He therefore only awarded him a declaration of liability. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge was wrong in admitting evidence to show that the man was disabled from the disease before the date of disablement which appeared in the second certificate which was conclusive on this point. The matter must be remitted to estimate the compensation to which the man was entitled on this basis.—KIRKHAM v. WEBB & CORBETT, LTD. (1933), 26 B. W. C. C. 425, C. A.

3821h. —.]—From June, 1935, applt. was working for H. K. & F., Ltd. In Mar. 1936, he developed a rash, but continued in that employment at full wages until May 2, when he began to work for the resp. He worked for resp. until May 9, when he felt too ill to continue. On June 4 he obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon who certified that he was suffering from dermatitis & gave May 9 as the date of the beginning of the disablement. Resp. appealed to the medical referee who decided that applt. was, when examined by the certifying surgeon, suffering from dermatitis, but fixed Apr. 6, 1936, as the date on which the disease began. At that date applt. was, as stated, working for H. K. & F., Ltd., & receiving full wages. Applt. sought to recover compensation from resp.:—Held: the medical referee's certificate was final & conclusive as to the date of the beginning of the disease & applt. was not entitled to endeavour to displace that certificate by showing that on a certified matter it was not in accordance with the facts.—*SAVAGE v. 3821j. As to extent of disability.]—A miner was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & for a short time received full compensation. On a reduction being made in the weekly payment the workman commenced proceedings claiming restoration of full compensation. The employer then applied for a reference to the medical referee who reported that the workman had partially recovered & was fit for surface work. The hearing of the claim had meanwhile been postponed, but when it came on for hearing medical evidence was given on behalf of the workman to the effect that the workman was totally disabled by the disease. Objection was taken by the employer to this evidence on the ground that the medical referee's certificate was conclusive. The county ct. judge held that miner's nystagmus being a nervous disease & variable in its symptoms, he was entitled to find that there had been a change for the worse since the medical referee had made his report, & he accordingly made his award for the workman on the basis of total incapacity. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of fact & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—ROBERTS v. DENABY & CADEBY MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 112, C. 3822c. Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931—Examination & certification by Medical Board—When certificate conclusive—Re-examination not made “in pursuance of any Compensation Scheme.”]—A pottery worker to whom Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, applied ceased work on Sept. 25, 1930. On Sept. 30 the certifying surgeon certified that he was totally disabled from silicosis & that the disablement commenced on Sept. 25. An appeal by the employer to the medical referee having been dismissed, compensation on the basis of total incapacity was paid to the workman. On June 1, 1931, there came into force Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, which instituted a medical board to deal with Silicosis, & Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931. By the preamble to Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the 1928 Scheme was made to continue to apply in the case of workmen who were within that scheme with the exception that the provisions of the new scheme as to the examination & certification by the medical board were substituted for the provisions of the former scheme as to the examination & certification by the certifying surgeon & medical referee. This preamble further stated that the medical board shall have the same powers & duties in cases under the old scheme as under the new scheme. By para. 12 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, & para. 11 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the provisions of the 1925 Act relating to submission to medical examination continued to apply to workmen within the respective schemes. By a proviso to para. 11 of the 1931 Scheme any reference to be made to a medical referee under the provisions of the 1925 Act was to be made to the medical board. By para. 9 of Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, where, “in pursuance of any compensation scheme” an employer applied to a medical board for re-examination of a workman under that scheme or any compensation scheme, the board should re-examine & give a fresh certificate in the appropriate form. On Sept. 9, 1931, the employer applied to the medical board for re-examination of the workman. The workman having submitted under protest to such re-examination, the medical board, on Oct. 21, certified that he was no longer totally incapacitated. The employer thereupon refused to pay further compensation, & on Oct. 26, 1931, the workman filed a request for arbitration claiming a continuance of the weekly payments. The county ct. judge held that the certificate of the medical board was valid & conclusive against the workman & that therefore he had no jurisdiction to hear the case. The workman appealed:—Held: (1) the application to the medical board for re-examination had not been made “in pursuance of any compensation scheme” as there was no scheme applicable which gave such power. The certificate of the medical board was therefore not given in accordance with the provisions of Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, & was not conclusive evidence within para. 5 of such scheme; (2) the substitution by Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, of a medical board for certifying surgeon & medical referee, as stated in the preamble, related only to the functions performed in conjunction by the certifying surgeon & medical referee in originally bringing a workman within the 1928 Scheme. Appeal allowed. Case remitted to hear arbitration on all points.—WHITE v. WINTERTON POTTERY (LONGTON), LTD., [1932] 2 K. B. 265; 101 L. J. K. B. 546; 147 L. T. 177; 25 B. W. C. C. 129, C. A.

3822e. Second certificate of disablement—Whether conclusive against former employer.]—A hewer was certified in Nov. 1925, as totally incapacitated by miner's nystagmus & received compensation on that basis until June, 1928, when he was given work on the surface & was treated as partially incapacitated. In May, 1932, the employers alleged that he had completely recovered, & in June, 1932, the medical referee certified: “I find the man not suffering from nystagmus & fit for work at the face as a hewer.” In Sept. 1932, the workman having signed a declaration that he had not previously suffered from nystagmus, obtained work in another colliery but was discharged sick after eleven days. In Nov. 1932, he was certified by a certifying surgeon as suffering from nystagmus, the date of disablement being given as Oct. 25, 1932. No notice of this certificate was given to the first employer. The workman could not succeed in a claim against the second employer by reason of sect. 43 (1) (b), nor could he claim against the first employer under the certificate of Nov. 1932, because he had not been employed by them within twelve months from the date of disablement stated in such certificate. He therefore brought a claim against his first employers on the basis of the certificate given in 1925. The county ct. judge held that he was bound by the certificate given in Nov. 1932, to find in favour of the workman. The employers appealed:—Held: the certificate obtained by the workman in Nov. 1932, not having been served on them, was not conclusive against the first employers in proceedings based on the certificate of Nov. 1925. The matter must be referred to the medical referee for information whether in June, 1932, the workman was still susceptible to nystagmus & if so, whether such susceptibility was due to the first disablement or was constitutional. If there were susceptibility due to the first disablement, then the question whether the second disablement resulted therefrom was a matter of evidence.—BRITTON v. LEVERSON'S WALLS-END COLLIERIES, LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 45, C. A.

3822f. —.]—A hewer was certified as disabled by miner's nystagmus in 1925. In 1926 he had recovered & was able to resume work underground. In 1930 he was again certified as being disabled by nystagmus & was paid compensation until 1932, when his employers served a notice & certificate in accordance with sect. 12. A counter-certificate having been served the matter was referred to the medical referee, who gave the following certificate: "He has recovered from this attack of coal-miner's nystagmus & is able to return to his old work of a hewer. There will, however, be an increased susceptibility to the disease as a result of this attack." The workman then filed an application for arbn. After hearing certain evidence in the arbn. the county ct. judge wrote to the medical referee as follows: "In this case you certify that the workman was liable to an increased susceptibility to a fresh attack, see footnote (b) [to Form C. in the Sched. to Rules dated Nov. 9, 1932]. Is the judge entitled to consider that you do not think there was a reasonable probability of the man again becoming incapacitated through the effects of the accident, or through a recrudescence of the attack of the disease (footnote (a))?" The medical referee replied as follows: "I do not think there was a reasonable probability of the man again becoming incapacitated through the effects of the accident, or through a recrudescence of the attack of miner's nystagmus." Having received this reply the county ct. judge held that the certificate of the medical referee was one of complete recovery & made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the certificate of the medical referee was unambiguous & showed that the workman had not completely recovered from the attack of the disease. It was not therefore necessary to consider the effect of the reply given to the county ct. judge's inquiry.—

3822g. —.]—In review proceedings brought by the employers to terminate compensation on the grounds of alleged recovery from miner's nystagmus a medical referee reported to the county ct. judge as follows: "I find that [the workman] has now recovered from miner's nystagmus, but as a result there is increased susceptibility to a recrudescence of an attack of the disease & therefore it is not advisable for him to work underground, as if he did work below he would probably be only able to keep working for a short time, & would then have to give up again." On receipt of this report, the county ct. judge asked further questions of the medical referee, who replied as follows: "[The previous answer] means that this man has recovered from miner's nystagmus (i.e. the disease is not now present). The original susceptibility of the workman to nystagmus is still present, but owing to the workman having actually had an attack of nystagmus, & to the original susceptibility, if the man is put underground he is more likely to develop another attack more easily & more quickly; there is no new susceptibility, it has always been there. I consider any future attack of nystagmus a fresh attack. There is no disability caused by the original attack still existing—it is only a question of the inadvisability of his going underground again because of the danger of another attack." On receipt of this further answer the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments on the ground that the case was covered by Edwards v. Penrhiceiber Navigation Colliery Co. The workman appealed:—Held: the two answers of the medical referee must be read together. The second must not be taken to contradict the first, & on a proper interpretation of these answers there continued an increased susceptibility to nystagmus over & above any idiopathic susceptibility & therefore there was no evidence to support the application for review.—UNITED NATIONAL COLLIERIES, LTD., TREORCHY v. JONES (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 94, C. A.

3822h. Evidence of change of condition—Admissibility.—A stone-mason was examined by the medical board set up under Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, on Jan. 31, 1935, & on Mar. 2, 1935, they issued a certificate under para. 4 (3) of the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, that he was, though not totally disabled, suffering from silicosis to such a degree as to make it dangerous for him to continue work in the process in which he was employed & that he was suspended from Jan. 11, 1935. On Apr. 12, 1935, the workman filed a request for arbn., claiming that he was totally incapacitated. At the arbn. on May 10, 1935, the workman tendered evidence to show that he was totally incapacitated, but the county ct. judge held that as the certificate of the medical board was conclusive he was bound to refuse to hear evidence showing a change in the workman's condition, & made an award for partial incapacity only. The workman appealed:—Held: (1) the certificate of the medical board was conclusive as to the matters certified at the date when certified. No evidence was therefore admissible in regard to this, but if the judge required more information as to the effect & contents of the certificate, it was his duty to communicate with the medical board; (2) the county ct. judge was wrong in refusing to receive evidence of a change in the workman's physical condition since the date of certification; (3) in view of the decision of White v. Winterton Pottery (Longton), Ltd., No. 3822c, there was no other means of showing that the condition of a workman certified by a medical board to be disabled by silicosis had improved or worsened than by calling such evidence. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—GARNETT v. ENOCH RHODES & SON (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 345, C. A.

The power to review conferred upon the medical referee is not confined to the questions whether the certifying surgeon should or whether he should not give a certificate of disablement under sub-sect. 1 (i.), but covers the whole range of the action of the certifying surgeon in giving or refusing to give a certificate under that sub-sect.—*WEMYSS COAL CO., LTD. v. 3828b. ———.—Subsequent alteration without notice to employer.—A cement worker contracted dermatitis in Nov. 1931. He was discharged from hospital as fit for work in Dec. 1931, but the disease continued to recur. He went in June, 1932, to a certifying surgeon, who refused to give him a certificate. The workman appealed to the medical referee, who gave him a certificate dated July 7, 1932, & fixed the date of disablement as Nov. 16, 1931. No claim was made by the workman on his employer until July 25, 1932, more than six months after the certified date of disablement. The workman then approached the medical referee, who on Sept. 7, 1932, altered the date of disablement to Jan. 4,

1932, without giving notice of his intentions to the employer. Proceedings were begun in Nov. 1932, on the basis of the altered certificate. The county ct. judge held that he must treat the altered certificate as revoking the one dated July 7, 1932, & as being an entirely new certificate dated Sept. 7, 1932. He also held that as the workman had made his claim under the certificate dated July 7, & had never made a claim under the certificate dated Sept. 7, the workman must fail. He accordingly made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the date of disablement being a material part of the certificate, the medical referee could not alter it without due notice to the employers. The purported alteration was a nullity & the date of disablement remained Nov. 16, 1931. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial to allow the workman opportunity to show reasonable cause for delay in making a claim more than six months after Nov. 16, 1931. The question as to whether a medical referee has power, even on notice to both parties, to alter his certificate except to correct a slip or clerical error was left undecided.—*LAURIE v. —.]—A coal miner who had been engaged in a process coming within Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, ceased work on Apr. 2, 1930. On Nov. 17, 1932, as a result of an X-ray examination at hospital, he was given a form of certificate to the effect that he was suffering from silicosis. On Apr. 10, 1933, he was examined by the medical board appointed in pursuance of the Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, & on Apr. 19, 1933, the board certified him as totally disabled, but gave in the certificate the date of commencement of the total disablement as Apr. 10, 1933. Compensation having been claimed by the workman as from Apr. 10, 1933, the employer disputed the claim on the ground that the workman was, in virtue of proviso (b) to para. 4 of the Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, disentitled to compensation on the ground that he had not been employed in any process under the Scheme within the three years previous to the certified date of disablement. As a result of representations made on behalf of the workman the medical board reconsidered the matter & altered the date of commencement of total disablement in the certificate from Apr. 10, 1933, to Nov. 16, 1932, the date of the X-ray examination in hospital. On this altered certificate the county ct. judge awarded compensation to the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: the medical board having once heard the matter was functus officio. The date was vital to both parties & could not in the circumstances be altered under the "slip rule" as being a mere clerical mistake or error due to an accidental slip or omission.—

Failure to fix when appeal dismissed—Subsequent decision fixing date.]—

On Feb. 6, 1932, a miner was certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed & that his disablement therefrom commenced on Feb. 6, 1932. Compensation was accordingly paid by his employers. On Oct. 16, 1933, a medical referee certified that he was not then suffering from miner's nystagmus & was fit to resume work underground, but that his condition was such that if he worked underground there was reasonable probability of his becoming again incapacitated by reason of a recrudescence of the attack of the disease. He did not return to work with his old employers, but in Jan. 1934, he obtained work with fresh employers after making a declaration that he had not previously suffered from the disease. He only worked with them for nine shifts, when he was compelled to cease work on account of nystagmus. On Feb. 7, 1934, the certifying surgeon certified that he was suffering from miner's nystagmus & that his disablement therefrom commenced on Feb. 6, 1932. On an appeal by the first employers from that certificate the medical referee on Mar. 5, 1934, dismissed the appeal. The registrar then wrote to the medical referee that the employers had called attention to the fact that no date of disablement was given in the decision dismissing the appeal. Thereupon the medical referee issued a second document dated back to Mar. 5, 1934, & to the following effect: 'The workman "is suffering from miner's nystagmus & so is disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed. He is fit for work on the surface. The date of the disablement is from Jan. 1934, after he had been working underground for three weeks." The medical referee issued the second document without giving any notice to the workman. The workman claimed compensation against the first employers, relying on the certificate of Feb. 7, 1934, which gave the date of disablement as Feb. 6, 1932. The employers relied on the statement in the medical referee's second decision that there had been a fresh disablement in Jan. 1934. The county ct. judge held that the medical referee was not functus officio when he issued the first document dated Mar. 5, 1934, & could properly complete an otherwise unfinished document by adding the date of disablement. He therefore made his award for the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: (1) the effect of the first decision of the medical referee in Mar. 1934, dismissing the appeal from the certifying surgeon was to fix the date of disablement as Feb. 6, 1932, & after dismissing the appeal the medical referee was functus officio & could not by a second decision alter that date; in any case he had not given the workman an opportunity of appearing before him before he made this second decision; (2) Timmins v. Brodsworth Main Colliery Co., Ltd., No. 3846a, & Richards v. Goskar, No. 3846c, did not decide that in the case of a workman who had been certified as disabled by an industrial disease any return to his former work for however short a time ended the disablement, but it was a question of fact & therefore of degree in each case. In this case the question did not arise as the decision of the medical referee dismissing the appeal was final; (3) the certificate given by the medical referee on Oct. 16, 1933, was similar in effect to that given in Connor v. Cadzow Coal Co., No. 3288a, & not to that given in Edwards v. Penrhiceiber Navigation Colliery Co., No. 3832b, & therefore was not one of complete recovery. Appeal allowed. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords refused.—WEEKS v. POWELL DYFFRYN STEAM COAL CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 396, C. A.

Appct. had applied unsuccessfully for a certificate that he was suffering from an industrial disease. More than ten days after the certifying surgeon had given his decision, the appct., acting through an approved society, applied for a medical reference. The registrar treated this application as including one for an extension of time, although no such extension of time was applied for nor were there any facts before the registrar relating to that matter:—Held: it could not be said that the registrar had been shown any good cause for extending the time for making the application. The conditions of the Medical Referees Regulations, 1932, reg. 25, had, therefore, not been fulfilled, & this was not a mere technical matter, which might be waived, but one going to the root of the jurisdiction of the registrar.—*CONROY v. 3829b. What amounts to decision.]—

A medical referee, in his certificate, said that it was impossible for him to give a certificate either agreeing with or against that given by the certifying surgeon, as it was outside his province as an ophthalmic surgeon. The county ct. judge having held the certificate of the certifying surgeon was conclusive:—Held: there had been no decision by the medical referee, & the case must go back for the appointment of a fresh medical referee.—*JONES v. A miner obtained from a certifying surgeon on Oct. 17, 1920, a certificate that he was suffering from miners' nystagmus. He was paid compensation on the basis of total incapacity up to June, 1924, on which date he was given work above ground at a lower wage. In Oct. 1926 a medical referee certified that he was still suffering from miners' nystagmus. In Jan. 1930 the employers served a notice upon the workman under sect. 12 of the Act together with a certificate from a doctor. This was met by a counter notice on the part of the workman, & the matter was accordingly referred to a medical referee. On Feb. 15, 1930, the same medical referee who had made the report in 1926 certified that the workman was not then suffering from miners' nystagmus, but that his incapacity was due to other defects. On Mar. 27, 1930, the workman obtained a report from the certifying surgeon for the district that he was suffering from miners' nystagmus, & was disabled from earning full wages, & that the disablement commenced on Oct. 17, 1920. Upon this report the workman applied for arbitration. The arbitrator made an award in favour of the employers, but this was set aside by the Ct. of Appeal. On appeal to the House of Lords the medical referee in answer to a further question put by the House, said that his certificate of Feb. 15, 1930, meant that although the workman had now recovered from miners' nystagmus he was likely to develop a second attack sooner or later & in much shorter time than it took to produce the first attack:—Held: the mere fact that a second attack would develop quicker than a first was a natural concomitant to susceptibility, & was compatible with complete recovery from the original development having taken place. Disablement from the second attack would be caused thereby & not by the first. The certificate here was one of complete recovery, & that being so, it could not be contradicted by a finding by some one else which was incompatible with complete recovery.—*PENRIKYBER NAVIGATION COLLIERY CO. 3834b. Breach of regulations by referee—Death of workman—Reference to referee to comply with regulations—Validity.]—A cotton-spinner was certified to be disabled by epitheliomatous cancer, but the certifying surgeon omitted to certify the date of disablement, which thereby under the provisions of sect. 43 (2) became the date of the certificate. As the date of the certificate was more than twelve months after the workman had last been employed in any employment to the nature of which the disease was due, the workman appealed to the medical referee, who, however, failed to carry out the necessary regulations by omitting to give the employer such notice as would entitle him to attend at the time & place of the examination of the workman. The medical referee certified a date of disablement which was within the necessary period of twelve months, but owing to his failure to comply with the regulations, the certificate was invalid. The workman sent the certificate to the employer with notice of claim & filed a request for arbn., but died before the hearing. His widow then filed a request for arbn., but the employer objected to the validity of the medical referee's report on which both claims were necessarily based. The county ct. judge ultimately ordered that the matter should again be referred to the medical referee to enable him to comply with the regulations. The employer appealed from this order on the grounds that the medical referee was functus officio, & in any case there was no provision in the Act or the regulations as to medical referees made thereunder which could enable such an order to be made after the workman had died:—Held: the medical referee could not be functus officio, as he had not yet done his duty by issuing a valid certificate, & the death of the workman did not prevent the completion of the reference which the county ct. judge had properly ordered for the benefit of the workman's dependant.—DAVIES v. HOWE BRIDGE SPINNING CO., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 207, C. A.

3834c. Form of certificate—Necessity for compliance with statutory requirements.]—A workman obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon which certified that he was suffering from miner's nystagmus & that he was thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed. The employers appealed to the medical referee, who certified that the workman was suffering from the disease " & was therefore disabled from earning full wages," but that he was fit for light work on the surface, adding that there was an increased susceptibility to a fresh attack should he again work below the ground. This certificate was given on form P (ii), the form prescribed when a medical referee allows an appeal. In an application for compensation the county ct. judge held the certificate was unintelligible on the grounds: (a) that form P (ii) had been used instead of form P (i), the form prescribed when a medical referee dismisses an appeal; (b) the medical referee had used the words "therefore disabled" instead of "thereby disabled" which appeared in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, s. 43 (1), & (c) the medical referee had certified with regard to increased susceptibility, whereas it was clear on the form that he had power to do so only if he found that the workman was no longer incapacitated by the disease, & he ordered that the matter should be referred to another medical referee. The workman appealed:—Held: (1) the medical referee, by stating that the workman was fit for light work on the surface & that there was an increased susceptibility to a fresh attack, had varied the certificate in several respects, & these qualifications amounted to an allowance of the appeal in part. The use of form P (ii) did not therefore vitiate the certificate; (2) the use of the word "therefore" instead of the word "thereby" rendered the certificate a nullity; (3) the county ct. judge had no power to refer the matter to another medical referee.—HOMER v. DONISTHORPE COLLIERY Co., LTD., [1936] 3 All E. R. 534; 155 L. T. 600; 80 Sol. Jo. 895; 29 B. W. C. C. 310, C. A.

3834d. Effect of decision on declaration of liability.]

—A workman obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate that he was suffering from miner's nystagmus & was thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed, & that the disablement commenced on the date of the giving of the certificate. On appeal the medical referee gave the following decision: "I decide as follows: John Lloyd was not at the time of his examination by the certifying surgeon suffering from miner's nystagmus. & I hereby certify that the present condition of the workman as ascertained by my examination is as follows: I consider that he has had nystagmus probably brought on by his two accidents & that if he returns to work in the pit he is very liable to a relapse. Also that, owing to his previous attack, there is an increased susceptibility to disease." The workman, having applied for a declaration of liability which was refused, appealed:—Held: the decision of the medical referee having destroyed the effect of the certifying surgeon's certificate, there remained no certified date of disablement, & therefore no "happening of the accident" within the meaning of sect. 43 (1) (a) in respect of which a declaration of liability could be granted. Appeal dismissed.—LLOYD v. CONDUIT COLLIERIES, LTD. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 293, C. A.

sg. False representation—Whether made "at time of entering employment."

—A miner who had previously suffered from miner's nystagmus, an industrial disease, obtained employment at his trade in Apr. 1927. In May, 1927, he wilfully & falsely made a representation in writing that in Apr. 1927, he had not previously suffered from the disease. For a period of three weeks in Aug. 1927, he was unemployed, after which he again obtained employment under the same employers. He continued in their employment until Nov. 1927, on which date he was certified by the certifying surgeon to be incapacitated by nystagmus from earning full wages.—Held: he was not barred by the provisions in sect. 43 (1) (b) from recovering compensation, in respect that the written representation was not made "at the time of entering the employment."—JOHNSTONE v. MOUNT VERNON COLLIERY Co., LTD., [1929] S. C. (Ct. of Sess.) 227.—SCOT.

sh. ———.—Held: a false representation, made by a workman on entering any employment to the nature of which the disease is due & in which he has been engaged within the twelve months previous to the date of disablement, is a bar to the recovery of compensation by him, although he has entered the employment & made the representation outwith the twelve months, & although there has been a break in the employment within the twelve months.—HIGGINS v. CADZOW COAL Co., [1931] S. C. 54; 23 B. W. C. C. 621.—SCOT.

sj. ———.—Held: the words "the employment" in modification (b) of 1925 Act, s. 43 (1), mean any employment, to the nature of which the disease was due, in which the workman was employed within the twelve months previous to the date of disablement, & therefore (1) where a miner had on entering the employment of one employer, made a false representation as to previous immunity from miner's nystagmus, & was, within twelve months of so entering but while in the employment of another employer, certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus, he was not entitled to compensation, & (2) where a miner had, on entering the employment of one employer, made a false representation as to previous immunity from miner's nystagmus, & was, more than twelve months after leaving that employment, & while in the employment of another employer, certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus, he was not barred from claiming compensation from the second employer; (3) where a miner had made a false representation of immunity from miner's nystagmus on re-entering the employment of a previous employer after a period of unemployment, that representation had been made on "entering the employment" within the sub-sect., & accordingly, he was barred from recovering compensation on the recurrence of the disease.—*SCOTT v. sk. ———.—A workman entered the employment of a colliery co. in Jan. 1927. The employees of this co. were engaged by persons described as contractors, who were, however, admitted, for the purposes of the case, to be merely the co.'s agents. The particular contractor by whom the workman had been engaged received notice from the co. that he & his squad would not be required after Nov. 7, 1927. Before that date the workman arranged with another contractor for a new job in the colliery, to begin on Nov. 8; & on starting work on Nov. 8, he signed a declaration in which he falsely represented that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. After being employed under this contract for more than twelve months, he was certified as disabled by miner's nystagmus as from Dec. 22, 1928.—Held: the false declaration made on Nov. 8, 1927, was not made by the workman at the "time of entering the employment," within sect. 43 (1) (b), & accordingly, he was not deprived of his right to compensation.—MOORE v. MANOR POWIS COAL Co., [1931] S. C. 1; 23 B. W. C. C. 593.—SCOT.

so. ———.—A workman entered the employment of a colliery co. on June 19, 1928, on which occasion he signed a declaration that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. This declaration was false & wilfully made. He worked until Sept. 12, 1928, when he was discharged, & he thereafter received unemployment benefit until Oct. 26, 1928. On the latter date he was again employed by the co., & he remained continuously in their employment until Jan. 16, 1931, when he was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus. He had not signed any declaration subsequent to that dated June 19, 1928.—Held: the workman was not deprived of his right to compensation, in respect that the false declaration signed on June 19, 1928, was not made at the time of entering the employment in which he was engaged at any time within twelve months of his disablement, the entry into that employment having taken place on Oct. 26, 1928.—*M'GUGAN v. sr. ——— Employers' officials' knowledge of falsity.—A miner, who had been disabled by nystagmus, received compensation from his employers until Dec. 1929. In Jan. 1930, he re-entered the employment of the same employers at a different colliery, & on so doing he knowingly signed a false statement that he had not previously suffered from nystagmus. He did not, however, intend to deceive, & did not in fact deceive, the employers' officials who were responsible for re-engaging him, as these officials were, in his knowledge, aware that the statement was false & they acquiesced in his making it. A statement of previous immunity from nystagmus was required by the employers from all applicants for employment underground. The workman having again become incapacitated by nystagmus.—Held: the arbitrator was entitled to make an award of compensation.—M'KEAN v. BAIRD (WILLIAM) & Co., [1932] S. C. 268; 24 B. W. C. C. 3837a. 'Continuity of employment.]—The words "the employment" in modification (b) of 1925 Act, s. 43 (1), meant any employment, to the nature of which the disease was due, in which the workman was employed within the twelve months previous to the date of disablement.

Applt., a miner, who had suffered from miners' nystagmus, entered the service of resp. coal co. on Apr. 27, 1927. After two periods of unemployment, during which he received unemployment benefit, he returned to the resps.' colliery on Nov. 7, 1927, & before commencing work wilfully & falsely represented himself in writing as having never suffered from miners' nystagmus. He ceased working for the resps. on Aug. 26, 1928, & was certified as disabled by miners' nystagmus as from that date. Upon a claim by applt. for compensation, the arbitrator stated that applt.'s employment was continuous from Apr. 27, 1927, down to Aug. 26, 1928, except for the periods when he was temporarily out of work owing to slackness of trade, & as no false declaration was made when he first entered resps.' service he awarded him compensation:—Held: the employment of applt. was not a continuous employment from Apr. 27, 1927, but that his resumption of work with resps. on Nov. 7, 1927, after a period of unemployment was "entering the employment" within modification (b), & as the false declaration was made by applt. within twelve months of his disablement, no compensation was payable.—*SCOTT v. 3843b. ——.]—In 1936 a workman was certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from the industrial disease of dermatitis & to be disabled from doing his work as from July 15, 1936. An appeal from this certificate was dismissed by the medical referee. For a time his employers paid him compensation, but then desisted, & in answer to the workman's claim for compensation relied on the fact that the workman had been certified to be disabled from dermatitis in 1933, had been paid compensation from 1933 1935, & had never fully recovered from the original attack. The county ct. judge found on the evidence that as a result of the earlier attack the workman was prone to a recurrence of the disease & therefore that he had never fully recovered. But he made an award of compensation in favour of the workman against the last employer, as that employment was of a nature to which the disease might be due. On appeal:—Held: the date of disablement fixed by the second certificate must under Workmen's Compensation a period of absence from work owing to beat elbow from May to August, 1931, he presented himself as again fit for work. There was then put before him a printed declaration, with blanks to be filled in, to the effect that he had not previously suffered from the industrial disease of miner's nystagmus. He filled in his name, address, & age; the manager filled in the date, & the workman signed the declaration before two witnesses, who also signed. The declaration was not read over to the workman, nor did he read it or give any attention to its contents, although he had every opportunity to do so; nor was he asked if he had suffered from miner's nystagmus. The miner restarted work & continued at work with employer B until May, 1932, when he left that employment & entered the employment of employer C, the present applt. On entering this new employment he signed no document relating to miner's nystagmus. In Aug. 1932, the manager of these employers showed the workman a form relating to miner's nystagmus & asked him if he had ever suffered from it. The workman replied that he had suffered from the disease about ten years previously, & in view of that answer the manager did not ask the workman to sign the form. The employers had not known until then that the workman had ever suffered from miner's nystagmus. In Sept. 1932, the workman was again disabled by miner's nystagmus, & claimed compensation. After negotiation the employers agreed to pay compensation, but in Dec. 1932, stopped payment at their own hand on discovering for the first time that the workman had signed the declaration of Aug. 1931, as above narrated. On these facts the arbitrator found that the workman had not wilfully or falsely represented himself as not having previously suffered from miner's nystagmus within sect. 43 (1) (b), & in respect of the agreement to pay compensation above mentioned awarded a continuation of compensation. The employers appealed:—Held: (1) (allowing the appeal on this point), the declaration of Aug. 1931, was a wilful representation on the part of the workman; (2) sect. 43 (1) (b) does not enact an absolute disqualification from receiving compensation, but merely provides a ground of defence against the claim; accordingly, the employers were not entitled to discontinue payment of compensation, on the ground (per LORD PRESIDENT & LORD FLEMING) that the defence should have been proposed before the workman's claim was settled by agreement, & on the ground (per LORD MOUNSON) that the defence was not open to employers who had employed the workman in the knowledge that he had suffered from the disease. Appeal dismissed.—JAMIESON v. ST. FLANAN COAL CO., LTD., [1935] S. C. 138; 27 B. W. C. C. Supp. 187.—SCOT.

Neither certificate expressly fixed a date for the commencement of disablement, so that under sect. 43 (2), the disablement was in each case treated as commencing on the date of the certificate. After he had obtained the second certificate the workman commenced proceedings for compensation on the basis of the first certificate, his claim being that he was suffering from a recrudescence of the old trouble. The county ct. judge held on the evidence that this was so. On appeal:—Held: as under sect. 43 the certificate of a certifying surgeon was conclusive of the date of disablement, & the disablement was to be treated as the happening of an accident, the county ct. judge was debarred after the workman had obtained the second certificate from holding on evidence that the disablement was caused by a recrudescence of the old trouble.—*TIMMINS v. B. to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925, returned to his original work, but again became disabled in the same manner & therefore obtained a fresh certificate referring to a date while he was engaged in that work. Subsequently he obtained work of a different kind, & while doing that he was again disabled in the same manner & obtained two fresh certificates dated after he had left the original work:—Held: as to the four certificates, (1) the disablement to which the first certificate referred came to an end when the workman returned to his old work with the same employers; (2) the second certificate was conclusive that at the date of the beginning of this disablement there was a fresh notional accident; (3) there being no evidence that this disablement under the second certificate had ceased, it was not open to a certifying surgeon to certify that the disablement was due to an accident at a later date: the third & fourth certificates were nullities.—*DURRANT v. 3846c. Mistaken certificate of recovery.]—An employee of manufacturing chemists was on Sept. 6, 1934, certified by a certifying surgeon to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids & disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he had been employed, the date of disablement being Sept. 1, 1934. Compensation was paid by the employers until Feb. 8, 1935, when the workman's panel doctor issued a certificate in the following terms: "This is to certify that Mr. Robert McGrath is recovered from dermatitis & is fit as from to-day to seek employment." The workman then registered at the labour exchange & received unemployment benefit. By Unemployment Insurance Act, 1920 (c. 30), s. 7 (1), it was made a statutory condition for the receipt of unemployment benefit (inter alia), that the insured contributor should be capable of & available for work. He received unemployment benefit until May 16, 1935, when he was seen by his panel doctor who was of opinion that he was suffering from a relapse. He applied to the certifying surgeon for a fresh certificate of disablement which was refused. He then filed an application for resumption of compensation. At the arbn. the panel doctor stated that he had made a mistake on Feb. 8, 1935, & that the workman was then fit only for special work & had not fully recovered. The employers called no evidence. The county ct. judge accepted the evidence of the panel doctor & found that the workman had not on Feb. 8, 1935, completely recovered from the disease. He also, however, found that the workman had nevertheless recovered from the disablement & made an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge having accepted the evidence of the panel doctor that he had made a mistake in certifying recovery on Feb. 8, 1935, there was no evidence on which he could find that disablement had ceased. The fact that the workman might have satisfied the statutory condition for obtaining unemployment benefit was in no way inconsistent with his being disabled from earning full wages at an employment involving working in dust or liquids. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—MCGRATH v. DAY & EMERY, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 474, C. A.

3846d. Return to work—Recurrence—Necessity for new certificate.—The disease itself, & not the certificate of disablement, is the equivalent of a personal injury by accident within 1925 Act, s. 43 (1). Therefore a miner who has been certified as suffering from miner's nystagmus, & as being thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed, & who returns to his employment at his former wages although he has not in fact recovered from the disease, & again becomes disabled thereby, can rely upon the original certificate & need not obtain a fresh certificate in order to obtain compensation.—RICHARDS v. 3849a. Determination of contributions by arbitration—Liability in dispute—Whether amount of compensation "in dispute."—The workman had been employed for thirty-one weeks by resps., & then on July 13, 1932, was taken on by appls. but was not examined as the custom was by appls.' doctor, who was then away on holiday. He worked for one week only & then he was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus, an industrial disease brought within the ambit of the 1925 Act, for which compensation under the Act became payable. The workman claimed 30s. a week as compensation for total incapacity, but an agreement was arrived at under which he accepted 23s. 9d. a week. Under sect. 43 (1) (c) (iii.) appls. brought proceedings by way of arbn. under the Act against resps. claiming contribution by them to the payment of the 23s. 9d. a week. On the hearing in the county ct. the question arose as to when the compensation was in dispute, & the county ct. judge thought it was in dispute under the sub-clause set out if any of the persons who were to contribute had not agreed the amount. Resps. claimed that they should have been entitled to co-operate in fixing the amount payable to the workman. The county ct. judge, taking that view, held that appls. ought to have refused compensation & compelled the workman to make a claim against them under the Act, in which case under r. 41 (5) of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, resps. could have been added as third parties to the workman's arbn.:—Held: the county ct. judge had wrongly interpreted that part of sub-clause (c) (iii.) "if the amount of compensation is not in dispute," as when the appls. & the workman reached an agreement as to the amount of it, it was not in dispute. That being so, the proper course was adopted of an arbn. under the Act between the employers alone, in which any question as to resps.' disagreement with the amount appls. had agreed to pay the workman could be considered, & the case must be sent back to the county ct. judge for him to determine the issues open to resps. to raise in the proceedings in which it was sought to fix them with liability to pay contributions.—BOLSOVER COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. sg. Failure to obtain declaration of immunity—Whether bar to claim for contribution.—A miner, who was employed by a colliery co. from Sept. 4 to Dec. 5, 1929, at the time of entering the employment signed a true declaration that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. On Dec. 7 he became disabled by miner's nystagmus, & the co. after paying him weekly compensation finally discharged his claim for a lump sum in Apr. 1930. On May 12, 1930, the workman entered the employment of another colliery co. who, however, took from him no declaration as to previous immunity from nystagmus. He left their employment after two days & was certified as having again become disabled by nystagmus on May 16. His last employers, having duly paid him compensation, claimed a contribution from his previous employers. The latter maintained that pursuers' claim was barred by their having failed to take

from the workman a declaration of his previous immunity from disease:—Held: pursuers' claim, under sect. 43, to a contribution was not so barred.—UNITED COLLIERIES v. ROBERT ADDIE & SONS' COLLIERIES, [1932] S. C. 45; 24 B. W. C. C. Supp. 125.—SCOT.

sk. Workman employed under Various Industries Scheme—Formerly employed under Sandstone Industry Scheme.—On May 3, 1932, a quarryman died of silicosis accompanied by tuberculosis, according to a certificate by the Medical Board appointed under the Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931. The workman's last employers were builders & contractors, with whom he worked as a labourer & stone cutter from June to Oct. 1931. As the employers who last employed the workman in one of the processes mentioned in para. 2 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, they were liable to pay, & did pay, compensation to the workman's dependants amounting to £542 8s.

Thereafter they sought relief against the workman's former employers, with whom he had worked from Sept. 1919, till Jan. 1931. These employers were quartermasters & engaged in the Sandstone Industry as defined in para. 2 of Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931. The Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, provides (para. 8 (2)) for contributions by former employers in relief of compensation paid by the last employer, but it also provides (para. 2) that "nothing in this Scheme shall apply to the employment of a workman included in . . . the Sandstone Industry (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931." The arbitrator having found the former employers liable to contribute these employers appealed:—Held: the former employers were not liable to contribute to the compensation paid to the workman's dependants. 3860a. Effect of agreement for compensation—Facts as to agreement not presented in county court.—On an application for review & redemption of weekly payments a workman alleged that he had negotiated with persons representing a new co. which had taken over the business of his employers, & the new co. had agreed to pay him £650 in full settlement of his claims. The county ct. judge had previously decided in a similar case that the workman could not rely upon such an agreement with the new co., as such agreement was only with a third party, & not with his employers. The parties treated the case as governed by that decision, & the question of the agreement was not gone into at the hearing. The application was then proceeded with as an application for review & the judge held the workman had recovered, & by his award stopped further weekly payments. The workman appealed, on the ground that the judge could not terminate the payments in view of the agreement:—Held: (1) the ct. could not entertain an appeal as to the effect of the agreement, as the facts as to that agreement had not been presented in the county ct., & there were no materials before the ct. on which they could come to a decision; (2) the question whether the workman had recovered was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & there was no misdirection.—EAST KENT COLLIERY CO. v. HEATH (1926), 20 B. W. C. C. 97, C. A.

3872a. — [A dock labourer seriously injured his left arm in an accident & was totally incapacitated for fourteen months, during which period he received compensation. His employers then terminated the weekly payments, using the provisions of sect. 12, & relying on a medical certificate to the effect that although the workman had lost his power of gripping with the left hand a return to work would restore that power.

The workman applied for an arbn. & the county ct. judge on the grounds stated in the certificate found that the workman had completely recovered from the accident & made his award for the employers. On appeal by the workman the Ct. of Appeal applying Buck v. Denning, No. 3227a, held that there was no evidence of complete recovery, & ordered the case to be remitted to the county ct. judge for compensation to be assessed.

The county ct. judge in conformity with the order of the Ct. of Appeal accordingly made an award of a weekly sum of 10s. as compensation, the employers being present & consenting to the amount proposed. Payment of compensation had been made under this award for four months when the employers petitioned for appeal to the House of Lords from the decision of the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: (1) there was some evidence upon which the county ct. judge could find that incapacity from every relevant point of view had ceased, & it was of the first importance that the finality of an arbitrator's findings of fact in cases under the Workmen's Compensation Act should be jealously maintained; (2) the employers were not, by consenting to the amount of the award, & making payments thereunder, deprived of their then statutory right of appeal. Thereafter, at the request of resp., the chairman stated a case asking the opinion of the Supreme Ct. whether there was evidence to justify the finding of the commission:—Held: after the making of the award the question could not be submitted to the ct. unless the commission had decided to reconsider the matter; the mere fact that the chairman had stated a case did not establish that it had so decided, & therefore it was not competent for the ct. to entertain the matter.—*ROBERTS v. He continued at work until Oct. 28, when he sent a doctor's certificate that he was suffering from myalgia. Three causes of injury were entered in the accident book: (a) caught cold in the back; (b) some one threw something & hit him in the back; (c) he fell on a pipe & hurt his back. The workman's doctor saw appct. on Nov. 1, 1934, & stated in cross-examination that what he found was absolutely negative. The county ct. judge held at the end of appct.'s case that there was not sufficient evidence for him to find that there had been personal injury by accident arising out of & in the course of the employment. It was alleged in the particulars contained in the application for arbn. that the average weekly earnings of the deceased were £1 19s. 6d. On proof of total dependency on the part of one or other of the dependants, the lump sum payable on these earnings, if calculated in accordance with the rules contained in sect. 8 (2), amounted to £300. The employer filed no answer. At the arbn. no evidence was given as to the average weekly earnings, but the father gave evidence that he was totally dependent. The county ct. judge made an award for £275 only, on the ground that there was no evidence as to the average weekly earnings. The father appealed on the question of amount & the employer cross-appealed on the question of dependency:—Held: on the appeal, the employer having failed to file an answer, the amount of the average weekly earnings must be taken to be admitted under rule 18 (3). There must therefore be an award for £300. On the cross-appeal, the question of dependency was purely one of fact for the county ct. judge. Appeal allowed. Cross-appeal dismissed.—*PICKERVANCE v. of the Act, is a mixed question of law & fact, at least in cases such as the present one, &, therefore, the Ct. of Appeal must determine, not only whether there is any evidence to sustain a finding of dependence, but also whether the district ct. judge drew proper inferences from the facts & arrived at a proper conclusion in holding, as he did in this case, that pltf. was a "dependant".—*WOLFE v. tinuance of the compensation, the county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers. He found that the exposure of the workman to dust or liquids was of short duration & only resulted in dermatitis owing to an unusual proclivity to such disease on her part. The workman appealed. On appeal it was argued that the employers were estopped from denying that the disease had been contracted through long-continued exposure within Statutory Rules & Orders, 1929, No. 2, by reason of their admission of liability & payment of compensation:—Held: the point as to estoppel not having been taken in the county ct. could not be raised on appeal, & on the evidence the county ct. judge was bound to find that exposure was not of long-continued duration. The county ct. judge refused to do so & calculated the compensation on the basis of the exact average of the wages earned by the workman during the four weeks. After about two months he was dismissed as incompetent. He filed an application for arbn. & then entered into an agreement with his employer that he should receive £30 in final settlement of all claims. A memorandum of agreement was drawn up together with a statement of facts, both of which were signed by the workman. From the statement it appeared that the workman's average pre-accident earnings were £3 0s. 2d., & his average post-accident earnings were £3 4s. 3d., & that his employment ceased for reasons unconnected with his injury. The registrar &, on appeal, the county ct. judge refused to record the memorandum on the ground of inadequacy. The parties proceeded to arbn. At the hearing the workman admitted the facts contained in the statement accompanying the memorandum. The medical men called on each side disagreed as to whether the disability caused by the injury amounted to 5 per cent. or 20 per cent. The county ct. judge in his award assessed the loss of earning capacity at 16s. a week & ordered payment of compensation at the rate of 8s. a week. 3899a. —.———A filler in a colliery was certified by a medical referee in Oct. 1934, to be suffering from dermatitis produced by dust or liquids, but to be fit for light work. He was accordingly given light work and received compensation at the appropriate rate. In July, 1935, he was involved in a motor accident & was off work for a year. In May, 1937, the employers applied for a review & termination of the weekly payments. At the arbn. evidence was given on behalf of the employers by a dermatologist to the effect that the workman's condition when he examined him in Mar. 1937, was not due to his employment as a filler for the reason that, if it had been, the workman should have recovered during the year when he had to stop work on account of the motor accident. The dermatologist was further of opinion that the workman was suffering from some form of constitutional eczema. Under cross-examination he said, "I don't suggest the form of dermatitis has changed since Oct. 1934, though it is not impossible." The workman's panel doctor, who had attended him throughout, said that there had been no change in his condition. The county ct. judge on that evidence found that the workman was no longer suffering from the disease of dermatitis produced by dust or liquids & made an award terminating the weekly payments. The workman appealed:—Held: as the dermatologist's evidence involved a contradiction of the medical referee's conclusive certificate & was therefore inadmissible, there was no evidence on which an award for termination of the weekly payments could be made. Appeal allowed.—BURGIN v. FITZWILLIAM'S (EARL) COLLIERIES CO. (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 419, C. A.

3901a. —.———A workman, who had suffered an injury to his knee, was paid compensation

by his employers for a time. He underwent a successful operation & his compensation was stopped. He later suffered another injury to the same knee, & brought proceedings for further compensation. After hearing evidence, the county ct. judge came to the conclusion that he was not satisfied as to any further injury after the cessation of compensation. The county ct. judge then considered the question of a declaration of liability &, while doing so, asked a medical man, who happened to be present in ct., whether there was any probability of further injury to the workman. The opinion of the medical man was not given as evidence on oath nor was he called by consent of the parties. The county ct. judge then made an award to the effect that the workman had recovered from his injury on the date when compensation was stopped, but granted a declaration of liability by consent. The workman appealed:—Held: although the procedure followed with regard to the doctor was undesirable & irregular, it had not been detrimental to the workman, because the county ct. judge had already made up his mind on the main question before him. There was ample evidence to support his finding on the question.—RANSOM v. FULHAM FOOTBALL & ATHLETIC CO., LTD. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 375, C. A.

3904a. — — —.]—A workman, whose compensation had been stopped, claimed a continuance of compensation on the basis of total incapacity, & it was argued on his behalf that he was entitled to be paid on this basis under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was partially incapacitated as a result of the accident but had, since the payment ceased, been doing work which he did before the accident. He held that sect. 9 (4) did not apply, but gave no reasons for so holding beyond stating that the workman refused work offered him on the ground that he could not do it when in fact he could have done it. He, therefore, refused to find total incapacity but gave a declaration of liability. On the appeal by the workman it was argued that, the county ct. judge having found partial incapacity, the case should be remitted to him to assess the amount of such incapacity:—Held: although the finding of the county ct. judge on the point was not too clear, the case had been argued & dealt with under sect. 9 (4) alone. The issue as to partial incapacity, not having been raised on the claim, in the ct. below, or in the notice of appeal, could not be taken in the Ct. of Appeal.—PLUMB v. RALEIGH CYCLE CO. (1928), 21 B. W. C. C. 378, C. A.

3918a. — — — Unless costs of adjournment paid.]—A farm labourer received injuries to his ribs by reason of an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. In his application for an arbn. he stated in the particulars that the nature of his injury was bruised ribs resulting in traumatic neurasthenia. At the arbn. medical evidence was called for the workman to the effect that he was suffering from angina of effort, a condition differing from traumatic neurasthenia. Counsel for the employer, on the ground that he was taken by surprise, requested an adjournment of the hearing. The county ct. judge said that he would grant an adjournment if the employer paid the costs of the adjournment. Counsel for the employer did not accept the offer & called no evidence. The county ct. judge then made his award in favour of the workman. The employer appealed:—Held: as the workman was endeavouring to set up at the arbn. a case different from the one set up in his particulars, the necessary amendment should have been made in the particulars & the request of the employer for an adjournment granted without any onerous condition being imposed. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered before another county ct. judge.—BURTON v. CHAMBERLAIN (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 63, C. A.

3922a. — — —.]—A miner, who was a healthy man of forty-seven, was engaged for an hour in pulling down coal with an iron bar. His mate then asked for the bar, & worked with it. The miner appeared to be quite well when he handed over the bar to his mate, but within a few minutes he was lying on the ground dead. An autopsy was made by a surgeon. At the hearing of a claim for compensation by the widow the surgeon was not called but his report was by agreement read to the county ct. judge. He therein stated that the cause of death was syncope following double pneumonia of one or two days' duration, & that in his opinion death was accelerated by the strain put upon an overburdened heart by his work. That was the only medical evidence before the ct., & it was accepted as correct by the judge, who made an award in favour of the employers on the ground that there was "no real evidence within the meaning of the decided cases that any particular piece of work caused death." The widow appealed:—Held: it being doubtful from the use in the award of the words "particular piece of work" whether the county ct. judge had not misdirected himself by thinking that he had to find as a fact that some particular or special strain had to be proved in order to connect the death with the work, the case must be remitted to him for reconsideration. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial.—WALKER v. BROWN (JOHN) & CO., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 166, C. A.

3922c. — — —.]—A haulage hand sustained an injury by accident to his right leg with the result that it was bowed outward & backward, & caused him to walk with a limp & with the right foot somewhat inverted. He could walk quite briskly but felt pain in the right foot after walking continuously for several miles. He had not obtained any work since the accident nor had he looked for it. After paying compensation for total incapacity for seven months, the employers applied to review the weekly payments. The county ct. judge found that the workman was capable of ordinary light work of an unskilled nature such as gardening work of not too arduous a nature, & of doing such work continuously, & having stated that he was constrained by the authorities to ignore the remoteness of the prospect of obtaining regular light work, he found that a man who obtains a job of unskilled light work on the footing that he suffers from some physical disability which disqualifies him from competing in the labour market on equal terms with men not so disabled might expect to receive about two-thirds of the ordinary wages of an unskilled labourer, & made an award diminishing the weekly payments accordingly. The workman appealed:—Held: it being impossible to decide on the judgment whether the county ct. judge had or had not found that the workman was capable of becoming an ordinary workman of average capacity in any well-known branch of the labour market, in other words, whether his labour was or was not an "odd lot" within the definition of FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J., in Cardiff Corporation v. Hall, the case must be sent back for him to make the necessary finding. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—ACKTON HALL COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. BARKER (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 89, C. A.

3926a. —.]—A glazier living in Liverpool fell 24 feet from a ladder & received very severe injuries to his spine & sacrum. A year later his doctor made a report to his employers at their request. It was a detailed report & contained the following conclusions: The movements of the spine were much freer, but not much improvement could be expected: the workman's capacity for walking had considerably deteriorated: his mental condition had changed for the worse but elimination of the compensation negotiations might improve the mental condition: he was at that time only fit for sedentary work or semi-sedentary light work. This report was sent on to the employers' insurers who wrote a letter to the workman's solr. saying that the doctor's report showed that the workman had made considerable recovery & that it was advisable that he should be given light work as it would give him occupation & tend to make him fit. The employers then offered the workman employment in their stores near Birmingham consisting of "a certain amount of clerical work & also sorting out small parts & handing them out when he desired" at £2 a week together with the appropriate compensation & travelling expenses. This offer was refused. The employers applied for a review of the weekly payment on the ground that the workman was able to earn £2 a week. The county ct. judge found that the workman had no earning capacity in the open labour market, but that the offer of work was suitable & should have been accepted. He therefore made his award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: there was misdirection as the county ct. judge had failed to put to himself & answer two separate questions, viz., first, whether the offer of employment was in the circumstances under which it was made a genuine offer, & secondly whether, bearing in mind the distance from the workman's home of the employment offered, it was suitable employment. Appeal allowed. Matter sent to another county ct. judge for new trial.—HILLS PATENT GLAZING CO., LTD. v. DOUGLAS (1937), 30 B. W. C. C. 145, C. A.

3927a. Date of termination of incapacity.]—A fireman had to have his right thumb amputated as the result of an accident in the stokehold of a ship. On Nov. 5, 1928, his employers obtained a certificate to the effect that he was fit to return to his work, & thereupon gave notice to terminate the weekly payments on Nov. 15. The weekly payments were stopped on that day although a certificate had been furnished by the workman which stated that he was not fit to resume his old occupation, but also stated that there was plenty of other work he could do. The workman applied for an arbn. The arbn. took place on Jan. 29, & Feb. 5, 1929. On Mar. 1, the county ct. judge made his award in which he found as a fact that the workman was able to earn his pre-accident wages, & that up to the date of the hearing there was a dispute whether he had recovered. He did not give a finding as to the date on which the workman had become able to earn his pre-accident wages, but ordered the employers to continue to pay the full amount of weekly payments as from Nov. 15, 1928, to Feb. 5, 1929. The employers appealed:—Held: the judge should have found in fact the date when incapacity ceased. If by fixing Feb. 5, 1929, as the date down to which compensation must be paid, he intended to hold that incapacity continued to that date, there was no evidence to support such a finding.—*MOCKBILL v. 3927b. Whether workman within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4).]—An employer having reduced a workman's compensation to 12s. 3d. a week, the workman applied for an arbn. on the ground that, although he was only partially incapacitated, he was unable to earn anything. At the hearing the workman said that it was impossible to say what he could earn if he could get light work. On that evidence it was submitted on his behalf that he was brought within sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employer that the workman was only entitled to 12s. 3d. a week as from the date of reduction. An appln. was subsequently made to the county ct. judge on behalf of the workman for an amendment of his note, or for a new trial, on the ground that sect. 9 (4) had not been properly considered at the hearing. The county ct. judge refused to grant a new trial, but said that he had not considered sect. 9 (4) until the end of the case. The workman appealed from the award & from the refusal to grant a new trial:—Held: the appln. was clearly made under sect. 9 (4), & the county ct. judge must be taken to have realised that fact in making the award which he did.—STORER v. MORRIS (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 177, C. A.

3927c. Contract of service.]—A miner in receipt of unemployment benefit died from the effects of fire-damp while working at an outcrop of coal on a farm. The widow filed an application for compensation on behalf of herself & other dependants. No evidence was given at the arbn. to show by whom or on what terms the deceased man was employed to get the coal. The county ct. judge made his award for the widow. Resps. appealed:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory as the county ct. judge had not found the facts which were necessary to enable him to come to a decision. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered before a different judge.—MEAKIN v. LOMAS (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 73, C. A.

3927d. Whether accident arising in course of employment.]—A workman after a few minutes' interval from the time he was working as a dipper in a galvanising department suddenly fell dead. Death was diagnosed as being due to angina pectoris. There was some medical evidence pointing to a connection between the arduous nature of the work & the death. The county ct. judge in making his award for the employer said that he was unable to find as a fact that the workman suffered any strain or that the work contributed in any way to his death. The widow appealed:—Held: in view of the medical evidence, it was not clear that the judge had rightly directed himself in law & there should be a new trial. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—JAMES v. PARTRIDGE JONES & JOHN PATON, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 92, C. A.

3927e. Whether fresh accident—Unsatisfactory pleadings.]—A wagon-tippler suffered an inguinal hernia in 1923 while at work. After a few weeks' absence, for which he received compensation, he returned to light work which he continued to perform until 1930. In June, 1930, he had further intestinal trouble & was away from work for two weeks for which he received compensation. After some difficulty with regard to wearing a truss he applied in Nov. 1930, for further compensation, alleging the 1923 accident as the cause of incapacity. It was then discovered that he was suffering from a femoral hernia. The workman then by leave amended his application by adding the femoral hernia, but still alleged that his incapacity was caused by the inguinal hernia. The county ct. judge held that the incapacity was due to the femoral hernia & not to the inguinal hernia, & dismissed the application. The workman appealed:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory, largely owing to the condition of the pleadings which did not make the issues clear. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—HARDSTAFF v. SHERWOOD COLLIERY CO. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 349, C. A.

3927f. Whether employment continuous.]—A miner was certified in 1924 to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & thereby disabled from earning full wages. After a short period he returned to work on the surface.

In 1926 there was a general strike & stoppage of work in all the coalfields which continued till Dec. of that year. Work was re-started in Wales under a general agreement between masters & men which contained a clause that each workman should receive a fortnight's notice of termination of his employment. The workman was re-employed in Dec. with others but when signing on falsely declared in writing that he had not suffered from miner's nystagmus. Certain subsequent agreements had been made between the parties. With the exception of three months' unemployment in 1929 & two weeks in 1933, when he received unemployment pay, he continued at work until Aug. 1933, when he was dismissed on a fortnight's notice. He then obtained a certifying surgeon's certificate that he was suffering from miner's nystagmus & made a claim for compensation accordingly. The employer denied liability on the ground that the workman had made a wilful & false declaration in writing within the meaning of sect. 43 (1) (b) at the time of entering his employment in 1926 & that that employment had continued up to the date of his dismissal in 1933. The county ct. judge without finding whether the agreement which commenced in Dec. 1926, had been put an end to, held that the contentions of the employer were correct & dismissed the workman's application. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had both misdirected himself in not considering the effect of Scott v. Summerlee Iron Co., Ltd., No. 3837a, & had also failed to determine the essential question of the continuity of employment from 1926 to 1933. There must be a new trial for him to find the essential facts as to this & to apply the law in the light of those facts. For the workman to be deprived of compensation by reason of the false declaration, such declaration must have been made on entering a contract of employment in which he was in fact engaged at some time during the period of twelve months previous to the date of disablement on which his claim is based. Appeal allowed.—WILLIAMS v. TREDEGAR IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 291, C. A.

3927g. Whether agreement between parties as to quantum.]—A workman having been injured in Oct. 1930, his employer admitted liability & paid him a weekly sum of 30s. as compensation. The employer was at that time under the impression that the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident were £6 1s. 6d. In June, 1933, the employer learned for the first time that the workman was earning £3 a week in a fresh employment & suggested that the weekly payment of compensation should be adjusted accordingly. The workman refused an adjustment & 30s. continued to be paid weekly. In Dec. 1934, the employer applied for a review & raised the question of the amount of the pre-accident average weekly earnings. For the workman it was argued that there having been an agreement to pay 30s. a week, the employer must be taken also impliedly to have agreed the amount of the pre-accident average weekly earnings. The county ct. judge made no finding as to the existence of any agreement express or implied, but found that the pre-accident average weekly earnings were

£5 7s. 6d. & made an award reducing the weekly payment to 23s. 9d., being half the difference between £3 & £5 7s. 6d. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge should have found whether there was any agreement between the parties &, if so, what were its terms express or implied, & the matter must go back for him to do so.

Per ROMER, L.J. If it were proved that the parties were labouring under a mutual mistake of fact as to the amount of the pre-accident average weekly earnings, the county ct. judge would be entitled on these figures to diminish the weekly payment under sect. 21, even if there were no change of circumstances. Appeal allowed.—TEILO TINPLATE CO., LTD. v. GRIFFITHS (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 127, C. A.

3927h. Extent of incapacity.—On the termination of weekly payments by his employer in respect of an accident a workman filed an application for arbn. alleging that he was still totally incapacitated. The employer by his answer pleaded that the workman had been neither partially nor totally incapacitated since the date when the weekly payments were terminated. The county ct. judge found that the workman was able to do "some work" & made his award for the employer, dismissing the workman's application. The workman appealed:—Held: the extent of the workman's incapacity was put in issue by the employer's answer. The county ct. judge should have determined that issue &, if he meant to find that the workman was still partially incapacitated, he should have decided the extent of such partial incapacity. Appeal allowed. Case remitted to another county ct. judge.—HUGHES v. REED & Co. (1938), 82 Sol. Jo. 273; 31 B. W. C. C. 11, C. C. A.

3932a. Reliance on medical assessor—On question of fact.—An engine-driver while coaling felt sudden pain in his stomach. He continued to drive his engine, but the pain increased & he went home. The next morning his doctor stated that he had a strangulated hernia. The workman claimed compensation. At the hearing the judge sat with a medical assessor. He held that the workman had not discharged the onus of proving that there had been an accident in the sense of an abnormal strain, & stated in his judgment that the medical assessor had advised him that the man never had a strangulated hernia. He made an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed, asking for a new trial:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory, the judge having misdirected himself on the points at issue, & having accepted the opinion of the assessor as to what his findings of fact should be. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered in another county ct. with directions to apply the principles laid down in Clover, Clayton & Co., Ltd. v. Hughes, No. 2316.—DAVIS v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. Co. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 368, C. A.

3932b. No details in award.—A domestic servant alleged that while carrying a bottle of her own nail polish she slipped on a mat & the bottle broke in her hand, cutting it. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge made a short award stating that the workman had not discharged the onus that was on her to satisfy him that the accident arose out of & in the course of her employment. The workman appealed on the ground that the county ct. judge had not stated the facts on which he based his decision & asked for a new trial:—Held: it not being a case in which a detailed finding was required, the shortness of the award was no ground for a new trial. Appeal dismissed.—GILBERT v. COLES (No. 2) (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 481, C. A.

3932c. Contradictory judgment.—A miner who had suffered from periodical attacks of miner's nystagmus & was in receipt of weekly payments was examined by a medical referee who certified that the man "is not now suffering from miner's nystagmus, but from nervous debility." On his report the employer stopped the weekly payments. Six months later the workman applied for further compensation. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was not suffering from nystagmus, & looked the picture of health, but said that he thought it possible, & even likely, that he might have a recurrence though he was not satisfied that such would be the case. His award was in the form that the employers were to be liable to pay the workman further compensation if at any time he became incapacitated for work from nystagmus. The workman appealed:—Held: as the award made by the county ct. judge was not consistent with his judgment, & the judgment was contradictory in itself, there must be a new trial. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial.—HILLIER v. EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL Co., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 238, C. A.

3932d. Excessive award.—A workman claimed compensation on the basis of partial incapacity. On the matter coming before him, the county ct. judge referred it to a medical referee, who reported as follows: "S. has good general health, but is not fit for his ordinary work." The judge, without considering the effect of sect. 9 (4), made an award of 30s. a week on a finding of total incapacity. The employers appealed:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory, the judge having made an award in excess of what the workman was claiming & not justified by the evidence. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—SINGLETON v. DRAKE (D.) & SONS (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 369, C. A.

3932e. Confusion at hearing as to relationship of principal & contractor.—A workman was injured while screening coal supplied by a colliery co. to be put on board ship. The coal shippers & the colliery co. were under the same control. The workman framed an application for compensation against the colliery co. as his immediate employers, but the colliery co. denied that he had ever been employed by them. At the arbn. the case was opened & argued on the basis that the shippers were contractors within sect. 6, & that the colliery co. were principals. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the workman against the colliery co. The colliery co. appealed:—Held: there having been confusion as to the basis on which the claim was being made against the colliery co. the case must be sent back for re-hearing.—JENKINS v. OCEAN COAL Co., LTD. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 111, C. A.

3932f. Insufficient evidence as to whether reasonable cause for delay in giving notice.]—On Nov. 14, 1933, a labourer struck his knee while at work. On returning home he showed his wife a black bruise. The bruise was attended to by his wife, & he continued working for a month suffering occasionally from cramp. On Dec. 12, 1933, he suddenly felt severe pain & was sent to the infirmary. On Dec. 14 he underwent two operations but died on Dec. 16. On Dec. 15 his wife gave notice to the employer. The county ct. judge, on a claim by the widow for compensation, found that death resulted from the injury, but held that that being so the deceased workman must have suffered sufficient discomfort to make it obligatory for him to give notice of the accident. He held that there was no reasonable cause for failure to give notice before Dec. 15, & that the employer was prejudiced by the delay. He therefore made his award for the employer. The widow appealed:—Held: there was not sufficient evidence as to whether in fact the injury was such as to call for notice being given before Dec. 15, & there must be a new trial to see whether such evidence was forthcoming.—REDMAN v. SUNDERLAND CORPN. (1934), 27 B. W. C. C. 376, C. A.

3932g. Decision unsupported by evidence.]—An employer applied for a review & diminution to 8s. 6d. of a weekly payment then being paid to an injured workman under a recorded memorandum of agreement, the grounds of the application being that the workman had received a genuine offer of employment at £2 a week. The county ct. judge held that the workman had an earning capacity of a higher amount than £2 a week & reduced the weekly payment to 5s. The workman appealed:—Held: there being no evidence on the point before him the county ct. judge was wrong in taking it upon himself to find that the workman's earning capacity was greater than that alleged by the employers, & there must be an award for 8s. 6d. Appeal allowed.—WIMBUSH v. GARNER (1936), 28 B. W. C. C. 135, C. A.

3932h. Misdirection.]—On Feb. 21, 1936, a cold day, a lorry driver strained himself by having to crank up his lorry at frequent intervals. On returning to his home he complained of pain to his wife. On Feb. 23, he was found to be suffering from influenza. He returned to work on Mar. 16, having recovered from the influenza. He died on Apr. 27. Evidence showed that the strain on Feb. 21 was much more than the ordinary strain of work, & that the lorry driver was continuously ill from the day of the strain to the day of his death. The lorry driver had been suffering from heart disease of long standing & he might have died from the effects of any sudden strain. One doctor said that death was due to the strain, another that excessive strain would have shortened his life, & the lorry driver's own doctor stated that he had "apparently well recovered, but heart irregular—heaving impulse." The county ct. judge was not satisfied on the medical evidence that death had been caused by the strain & he dismissed an application for compensation by the lorry driver's widow:—Held: the county ct. judge had misunderstood the evidence of the lorry driver's own doctor, when he thought that it meant that the lorry driver had recovered from the strain. The evidence meant that he had recovered from the influenza but not from the strain, & there was no evidence of the effect of the influenza on his heart. The judge had misdirected himself & the appeal was allowed & an award made in favour of the widow.—HILTON v. BILLINGTON & NEWTON, LTD., [1936] 3 All E. R. 292; 155 L. T. 530; 80 Sol. Jo. 952; 29 B. W. C. C. 299, C. A.

3932j. Decision based upon proper reasoning—Addition of unsound reason.]—A workman stayed away from work & was considered by his doctor to be suffering from influenza & gastric trouble. On the next day the doctor discovered an injury to the scrotum which appeared to be of a few days' standing. On the next two days the workman was visited by a mate & by his foreman to each of whom he gave an account of an accident a week earlier when he fell from a ladder while at work & injured his scrotum. An entry of this was made in the accident book. A few days later the workman died of septicæmia. On a claim for compensation brought by the widow the county ct. judge held that the probabilities were that the injury which caused the death was sustained during work, but went on to say that, apart from that, the information given by the workman when notifying the accident could not be ignored, & made his award in favour of the widow. The employer appealed:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the injury occurred while at work. As the county ct. judge had come to his decision by proper reasoning, the fact that he might have added another reason which was unsound in law would not be a ground for upsetting that decision.—CHURCHWARD v. 3932k. Lump sum award—Incorrect finding of dependency.]—A family consisted of father, mother & three sons. One son died as the result of an injury arising out of & in the course of his employment. The father & all three sons contributed varying sums to the family purse. At the time of the death, one son was in no way dependent on deceased & the other son was in ill-health & out of work. The father earned £4 17s. 3d. a week, of which he contributed £3 to the family purse & kept a savings bank account of his own. The father & mother claimed compensation on behalf of themselves & the brother in ill-health, as being partially dependent on deceased's earnings. The county ct. judge held that they were all partial dependants & awarded them a lump sum of £150, but reserved the question of apportionment. The employer appealed:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the father was a partial dependant within the meaning of sect. 4 (2), & as in view of the nature of the award of an undivided lump sum to all three appcts., it was impossible to say what portion of it the county ct. judge had appropriated to the father, there must be a new trial to consider the amounts to which the mother & brother were entitled.—JACKSON v. CANHAM (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 30, C. A.

3932l. Award based on ambiguous medical certificate.—A miner had worked underground for some years but on Oct. 12, 1934, the mine in which he was working closed down. On Oct. 17, 1934, he obtained work in a quarry, but gave up that work on Feb. 9, 1935, on account of miner's nystagmus. On Feb. 11, 1935, he was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus & the date of disablement was fixed by the certifying surgeon as Oct. 12, 1934. The mine owners appealed from that certificate to the medical referee who, on Mar. 12, 1935, found that the workman "was at the time of his examination by the certifying surgeon suffering from miner's nystagmus but was not thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed," & certified that his condition at the date of examination by the medical referee was that "he is suffering from miner's nystagmus with well marked oscillation of the eyes but slight subjective discomfort, so that his earning capacity is not decreased. He is quite fit to do the work in a quarry at which he is at present employed." The county ct. judge held that the certificate of the medical referee was unambiguous, & meant that the workman was fit for his full work as a miner. He therefore made his award for the employer. The workman appealed on the ground that the certificate should have been sent back to the medical referee for explanation as it was not clear whether it intended to certify that the man was fit for his full work as a miner or only for work as a quarryman:—Held: the certificate of the medical referee was ambiguous, for if he had meant to say that the workman's earning capacity was not decreased for the purpose of earning full wages at the work of mining, there was no necessity also to state that he was quite fit to do work in a quarry. The certificate must therefore be remitted to the medical referee for further explanation. Appeal adjourned. Certificate remitted to medical referee.—EVANS v. AMALGAMATED ANTHRACITE COLLIERIES, LTD. (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 413, C. A.

3932m. Formal award inconsistent with written judgment.—A miner was certified to be disabled by miner's nystagmus. Though fit for light work, he received compensation for total incapacity under sect. 9 (4) for a time & was then given notice to terminate his contract of service. The employer then brought proceedings to review & diminish the weekly payment. The workman contended, & at the arbn. called evidence to show, that he was entitled to the benefit of an order under sect. 9 (4) as amended, both on the ground, under clause (i), that he was in consequence of the injury unable to obtain the same class of work & also, under clause (ii), that his failure to obtain employment was a consequence wholly or mainly of his injury. The county ct. judge gave a written judgment in which he said that the case was indistinguishable from that of Ingham's Thornhill Collieries, Ltd. v. Barstow, No. 3291d, & held that, after considering the state of the labour market & the evidence called at the arbn., it was not probable that the workman would in consequence of the injury be able to obtain the same class of work as before. He therefore reduced compensation. On the same day the county ct. judge signed a printed award (Form 24B) in which the words in square brackets dealing with clause (ii) were not deleted. The printed award diminished the weekly payment. The result of this was to make the award appear as if the judge had refused to make an order under sect. 9 (4) because he was not satisfied that the provisions of either clause (i) or (ii) had been fulfilled. The workman appealed:—Held: it was clear from his judgment that the county ct. judge had not intended to deal with clause (ii) & the fact that he had not deleted that part of his printed award which referred to it did not mean that he had necessarily considered it. There must be a new trial to consider the evidence under both clause (i) & clause (ii) of sect. 9 (4) as amended. Appeal allowed.—EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. WILLIAMS (1935), 28 B. W. 3932o. Fresh evidence—Available at original hearing.—A workman injured his arm in Dec., 1931. In June, 1933, the county ct. judge found that he had completely recovered & made an award for the employers. In 1935 the workman was examined by specialists & X-ray photographs were taken, with the result that it was then discovered that he had been more seriously injured than had been apparent two years previously, five fresh fractures being disclosed. As the workman was still incapacitated, he applied to the county ct. judge for a new trial. The county ct. judge refused the application on the ground that with reasonable diligence the fresh evidence could have been available at the original hearing & the responsibility for any inadequacy in the presentation of his case then rested on the workman & his advisers. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly exercised his discretion in refusing to grant a new trial. Appeal dismissed.—MOORE v. CUNARD S.S. Co. (No. 2) (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 469, C. A.

3932p. Refusal to grant new trial.—An appeal from a refusal of the county ct. judge to grant a new trial:—Held: the judge had acted within his discretion & there were no grounds for ordering a new trial. Appeal dismissed.—COCHRANE & SONS, LTD. v. HUTCHENS (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 219, C. A.

3932q. Admission of accident—Incapacity not considered.—A chef on board a yacht suffered an accident. The accident was admitted but incapacity was denied. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge found as a fact that there had never been an accident & dismissed the claim. The workman appealed:—Held: as the accident had been admitted there must be a new trial to consider the issue of incapacity. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—RIVOLI v. DUDLEY, EARL (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 249, C. A.

3932r. Acceptance of facts from medical assessor—Facts in contradiction to sworn evidence.—A workman, who was in receipt of full compensation for incapacity due to a fractured skull, was offered light employment of a specified nature by his employer, but refused the offer on the ground that he was unfit for any work. The employer then applied for termination or diminution of the weekly payment on the grounds that the workman was not incapacitated for work as a result of his accident & that he had refused an offer of work which he was capable of doing. The review was heard by the county ct. judge sitting with a medical assessor. The medical evidence given on behalf of the employer was to the effect that the workman had improved & was fit for light work, particularly the light work offered. The doctors called on behalf of the workman were of opinion that he could not do the light work offered. The medical assessor then examined the workman in the judge's room & the judge & the medical assessor conferred on the case. The judge then said: "The medical referee has examined Filer. The appts. succeed & any incapacity is not due to the accident. Award appts., terminating compensation." The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge could only have come to the conclusion to which he did come by accepting from the medical assessor facts which were in contradiction to the sworn evidence, & it was not competent for him on the evidence which was called before him to find otherwise than that the workman was still partially incapacitated. —PENSFORD & BROMLEY COLLIERIES (1921), LTD. v. FILER (1938), 31 B. W. C. C. 105, C. A.

3940a. ———.—]—A steel erector lost his left little finger by accident & was paid compensation. Compensation was stopped under the provisions of sect. 12 & the workman returned to work on the ground level for a few days. He complained of tenderness in his hand & was discharged. He claimed compensation for total incapacity or alternatively for partial incapacity to be treated as total under sect. 9 (4) as amended. The county ct. judge found that he was not entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated under sect. 9 (4) as he had not taken all reasonable steps to obtain employment & made an award for 5s. a week. The workman appealed on the ground that the judge had, according to the recollection of counsel, given reasons which were unsound & could not support the award. There was no note of such reasons having been given but they were set out in the notice of appeal. The Ct. of Appeal ordered that the case should be remitted for the judge to reconsider the whole matter on the evidence already given. On the second hearing the county ct. judge said that he had no recollection of giving any of the reasons alleged. He thereupon reconsidered the whole evidence & came to the same conclusion as before & consequently made the same award:—Held: the matter had now been made clear & there was abundant evidence to support the finding. Appeal dismissed.—KEOHANE v. DORMAN LONG & Co. (No. 2) (1935), 28 B. W. C. C. 146, C. A.

3945a. ———.—Not to be supplemented by note taken by artioled clerk.—Note apparently complete.] —A miner, after helping to put a tram on the rails, died within a few minutes. At the post-mortem examination it was found that death was due to effusion in the pericardium. At the arbn., on the claim by his dependant for compensation, the employer's doctor gave evidence to the effect that there was no connection between the exertion & the sudden collapse. In making his award for the employer, the county ct. judge said that he preferred the evidence given for the employer to that given for the dependant, & held that death was not caused by accident arising out of & in the course of the employment. The dependant appealed, & on the hearing of the appeal counsel for the dependant asked for permission to read, in addition to the judge's note, a note taken at the hearing in the ct. below by an artioled clerk. Permission was refused:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, which was purely a question of fact for the county ct. judge, & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—JONES v. 3952a. ———.—]—A workman obtained, on Feb. 19, 1937, an award for weekly compensation at the rate of 4s. 6d. from June 9, 1936, up to the date of hearing & to continue. The arrears of compensation amounted to £8 9s. 6d. The formal award was drawn up & signed on Apr. 2, 1937. On Apr. 22, 1937, the workman's solr. gave notice of appeal as to quantum only. Resps. did not know of the intention to appeal until after service of the notice of appeal. A week after the award resps. had sent to the workman a cheque for £8 9s. 6d. for arrears & thereafter continued to send cheques for 4s. 6d. each week. These cheques were endorsed & cashed by the workman. The workman was in need of the money & stated that he treated the payments as merely made on account of the sum to which he considered he was entitled. The workman's solr. was throughout in ignorance of these payments. On the preliminary objection that no appeal lay on the ground that the workman was both approbating & reprobating the award:—Held: the rule was well established that any acceptance by a workman of money payable under an award was an approbation of that award & he could not now be heard to appeal from it.—EVANS v. Under the award, the £10 was to be paid to applt. with a declaration of liability, but resps. were given costs after the date of filing of their answer. Applt. appealed from so much of the order as directed costs to be so paid:—Held: applt. could not take the benefit of the award & appeal from a part of it to which she objected, & there was no right of appeal.—*WALDEN v. 3954c. Appeal against date of termination of compensation—Application for review.]—An infant workman was in receipt of compensation from the date of his injury to Aug. 10, 1928. On that date the employers, without following the procedure indicated in sect. 12, stopped the compensation on the ground that the workman had fully recovered. The county ct. judge heard the workman's claim for a continuance of the weekly payments on Jan. 8, 1929, when he found as a fact that the workman had fully recovered on Aug. 10, 1928, but granted a declaration of liability. The workman claimed that on this finding he was entitled to a continuance of the weekly payments to Jan. 8, 1929, in accordance with sect. 12. The county ct. judge adjourned the case for further argument on this point, & on Aug. 14, 1929, gave a considered judgment in which he held that, on his previous finding as to the date of recovery, the liability of the employers to make weekly payments ceased on Aug. 10, 1928. In May, 1929, the infant workman had come of age. In Sept. 1929, he entered an appeal against the decision of Aug. 14, 1929, by which the judge had ended payments as from Aug. 10, 1928, & in Oct. 1929, he filed an application in the county ct. for a review of the declaration of liability. On the hearing of the appeal the employers took the preliminary objection that by starting proceedings both by way of appeal & by way of review, the workman was both approbating & reprobating the award:—Held: (1) on the preliminary objection, the two sets of proceedings were in respect of independent matters & did not amount to approbation & reprobation; (2) on the merits, the county ct. judge having fixed the date of recovery of the workman, the employers could not then be ordered to continue the weekly payments after that date.—BEVAN v. GROVESEND STEEL & TINPLATE CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 572, C. A.

3954d. Acceptance of costs—Appeal as to quantum.]—An injured workman was awarded a weekly payment by way of compensation, & costs. The costs were duly taxed & paid. #### I. Other Cases.

3977a. Death of applicant before appeal heard—Judgment given in ignorance of death.]—A widow of a deceased workman was refused compensation by the county ct. judge. She appealed, but died five days before the hearing of the appeal. The appeal was however heard, the ct. being unaware of her death, & on Oct. 25, 1934, the appeal was allowed.

The case was sent back to the county ct. judge to assess the amount of compensation payable to her & her four children. On a motion by the employers to set aside or strike out the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal was a nullity & the award of the county ct. judge must stand, & the parties must take such proceedings as they might be advised.—*PATTENDEN v. 3993a. ——Denial of liability.—A workman having been injured by accident, his employers applied for a reference to a medical referee under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 19, on the ground that there was a dispute as to whether he was fit for his employment & as to whether any incapacity from which he might be suffering was due to the accident. Four days later the workman filed an objection to the reference on the ground that, as the employers were refusing to admit that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment, the matter should be dealt with by arbn. & not by reference. On the same day he filed his appln. for arbn. The sheriff-clerk allowed the reference to the medical referee & his decision was not appealed from. The employers filed an answer to the workman's appln. for arbn., in which they objected to the arbn. proceedings on the ground that the matter had already been referred to a medical referee, & further alleged that the workman was not entitled to any compensation because the accident had not arisen out of & in the course of the employment. The medical referee reported that the workman was partially incapacitated, & two days later the parties arrived at an agreement for settlement. On argument as to the costs the sheriff-substitute held that the workman's appln. for arbn. was premature, unwarranted & unnecessary, & while awarding no costs on the reference to the medical referee, gave the costs of the alleged abortive arbn. proceedings to the employers. On appeal it was held by the Second Division of the Ct. of Session that the sheriff-substitute was wrong in depriving the workman of the costs of the arbn. proceedings on the ground stated by him, & remitted the question of costs to him for further argument. The employers appealed:—Held: the medical referee having no power to decide whether the accident arose out of or in the course of the employment, it was perfectly proper for the workman to take the earliest opportunity of getting that point determined by arbn., & was entitled to act as he had done.—*BARR & HIGGINS, LTD. v. 3995a. ——[A workman alleged that on Jan. 19, 1933, he was injured by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. He was away from work from Mar. 2 to June 19, 1933. From June 19, 1933, to Dec. 1, 1934, he continued at his old work. He alleged that he had to cease work on Dec. 1, 1934, on account of the injury sustained on Jan. 19, 1933, & claimed compensation from Dec. 1, 1934, only. It was agreed between the parties at the arbn. that the three issues to be tried by the county ct. judge were: (1) Was there an accident? (2) Did it cause an injury at the time? (3) Was the workman's condition at the date of the arbn. due to that accident? The judge found for the workman on the first two issues & for the employer on the third issue, but awarded compensation to the workman for the period from Mar. 2 to June 19, 1933, & ordered each side to pay their own costs. The employers appealed:—Held: in so far as the award was given in favour of the workman, it was given on a matter that had never been submitted to arbn. by him & was bad, & the employers having therefore been wholly successful in the arbn., there was no ground for depriving them of their costs. Appeal allowed.—WILLIAMS v. DOROTHEA SLATE QUARRY CO., LTD. (1936), 29 B. W. C. C. 174, C. A.

The county ct. judge reduced the weekly payment to 10s., & ordered the employers to pay the costs:—Held: on the correct reading of the letter stating the diminution claimed the employers were successful on the award given, & the order as to costs should be set aside, & by consent of the employers, each party was ordered to pay their own costs.—MIDDLETON ESTATE & COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. 4014c. — Ambiguous answer by workman—Workman to pay costs.—[Employers asked for termination or diminution of a weekly payment to a workman on the ground that he was fit to resume work. The workman put in an answer in which he admitted that he was fit for light work, but alleged that the employers had neglected to provide any light work. He also said that he was prepared to accept such reduced compensation as might be found to be half the difference between his average pre-accident earnings & the average weekly amount he could earn at such light work as might be available for him. The county ct. judge made an award diminishing the weekly payment, & giving the costs to the employers on the ground that they had succeeded on the main issue, the answer being ambiguous, & leaving it open to the workman to argue at the hearing that his labour was an "odd lot" & that he was, therefore, entitled to resist any reduction. The workman appealed on the ground that the county ct. judge had failed to exercise judicially his discretion as to costs:—Held: the county ct. judge had not violated any principle of law in exercising his discretion as to costs. Appeal dismissed.—MIDLAND EMPLOYERS' MUTUAL ASSURANCE, LTD. v. LEWIS (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 192, C. A.]

Rules & the Workmen's Compensation Rules give a discretion to the registrar of the county ct. which cannot be interfered with by the county ct. judge on a question of amount when the discretion is otherwise properly exercised. A bill of costs in a case under the Workmen's Compensation Act included fees paid to three medical witnesses, two for £8 8s. each & one for £10 10s. On taxation the registrar reduced the fee to be allowed to each of those witnesses to £3 3s., stating that he did so in the exercise of his discretion & after careful consideration of the relevant circumstances. On the hearing of an application to review, the county ct. judge increased the allowance for each of the three witnesses to £7 7s. On appeal:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction to interfere with the discretion of the registrar in fixing the quantum of allowance for the medical witnesses.—*WHITE v. The ct. answered the question of law in the negative, & remitted the case to the arbitrator. The arbitrator refused a motion by the workman for the expenses of the proof, on the ground that he had already awarded them to the employers & could not recall his own award:—Held: the effect of the answer to the question of law was to recall the interlocutor of the arbitrator on the merits, that the award of expenses being merely ancillary fell with it, & accordingly, it was now open to the arbitrator to reconsider the question of the expenses of the proof.—*MORTON v. 4068a. Adjournment of compensation proceedings—Pending action by widow under Fatal Accidents Act.—A workman met with a fatal accident. A claim under 1925 Act was made by two infant dependants. The widow, acting under advice, stated that she proposed to take proceedings in another ct. to recover damages in respect of her husband's death, but declined to make or give up any claim to compensation under the Act. The county ct. judge, acting under Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, r. 4 (2), then made an order joining the widow as resp. to the arbn. proceedings, stating that the order was made without prejudice to her right to proceed under Fatal Accidents Act or to claim compensation under the Act. The employers contended that by reason of the above matters the widow was barred from bringing an action under Fatal Accidents Act, she having elected to proceed under the Workmen's Compensation Act:—Held: (1) the widow had not in law or in fact exercised an option to claim compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act; (2) it was open to the widow to bring proceedings under Fatal Accidents Act, & for the children at the same time to proceed under Workmen's Compensation Act; (3) the provisions of 1925 Act, s. 8 (3) (ii), do not make such proceedings impossible, in that, in such a case, it would be impossible to make a proper award of compensation in respect of the children under the sect.—*TAYLOR v. 4071a. Action for breach of statutory duty.—An infant workgirl lost the ring finger of her right hand by accident arising out of & in the course of her employment. She received compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act for a time, & then accepted £20 in purported settlement on the promise by the employer to re-employ her. No memorandum of this agreement was recorded. She worked at this employment for five years when, by reason of trade conditions, she was discharged. She then commenced an action against the employer for damages for personal injuries resultant from the employer's alleged breach of statutory duty to fence the machine. The action was tried by a judge alone who found that the injury had been caused by the employer's breach of statutory duty to fence, & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf. He, however, also found, having regard to the fact that the infant had received employment for five years after her accident under the agreement, that the agreement to accept compensation, though not registered, was for her benefit & therefore binding, with the result that the action was barred by sect. 29 of the Act. The infant appealed:—Held: without deciding whether the agreement was for the infant's benefit or whether further proceedings might be taken under Workmen's Compensation Act, the action for breach of statutory duty failed because, on the evidence, the machine was not a dangerous machine within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, & therefore there was no duty on the employer to fence it. Further, on the evidence, the accident was caused by the negligence of pltf. which was a complete defence to the action even if such negligence had only been of a contributory character.—HIGGINS v. What amounts to.—Defts. installed in their factory as part of the plant with the intention that it should be used by their employees a dangerous machine which was not fenced or guarded as required by Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22). Owing to the condition of the machine pltf., a workman in the employment of defts., was injured by it in the course of his work. It was found that it was not by the negligence of defts. but of their foreman that the machine had been allowed to be used in the condition in which it was at the time of the accident:—Held: the defence of volenti non fit injuria had no validity against an action based on breach of statutory duty; & further, pltf.'s injury was caused by the "wilful act" of defts. within sect. 29 (1) of 1925 Act, & defts. were therefore not protected by that sect. from liability to pltf. independent of the Act.

Defts. appealed, & contended that the maxim volenti non fit injuria was a defence to the action:—Held: the defence of volenti non fit injuria was no answer to a claim made by a workman against his employer for injury caused through a breach by the employer of a duty imposed upon him by statute.—WHEELER v. It was admitted that, for a period of 6 months from the date of the accident, pltf.'s employer had paid him weekly, upon the day of each week upon which his weekly salary was paid before the accident, an amount equal to half the amount of his previous salary. The ct. found as a fact that pltf. accepted the payments with the knowledge that they were made to him as being due under the Act:—Held: pltf. notwithstanding he had made no claim under the Act, had recovered compensation & so was barred under sect. 38.—DIXON v.

4096 i. From whom recoverable—Agent of employer.—A workman employed by the County Council of the County of Galway obtained an award of compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, against the County Council in respect of injuries sustained by being knocked down by a motor ambulance to the County Galway Board of Health & Public Assistance. The County Council sued the Board of Health for indemnity under sect. 6 of that Act:—Held: that the Board of Health was merely the statutory agent of the County Council, & that the indemnity given by sect. 6 was not intended to enable an employer to seek an indemnity against his own agent.—*GALWAY CO. 4103a. Res judicata.—On June 29, 1936, M., an employee of the Post Office, was injured in the course of his employment by a vehicle driven by R., who was in the service of R., Ltd. The Postmaster-General paid compensation to M. On Jan. 6, 1937, the A.-G. began an action, under sect. 30 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), against R., Ltd., & R., to recover the compensation paid to M. during the period from June 30, 1936, to Jan. 1, 1937. Defts. paid a sum of money into ct. with a denial of liability, & on or about Feb. 16, 1937, pltf. accepted the sum of money so paid in. On Apr. 9, 1937, pltf. made a further claim against defts. for the sum of £18 13s. 1d., being compensation paid by the Postmaster-General to M. for the period from Jan. 2, 1937, to Mar. 31, 1937. Defts. contended that the matter had already been settled by the previous action, & relied on the plea of res judicata. The county ct. judge decided that pltf. was prevented from suing for the said sum of £18 13s. 1d. by reason of what had happened in the earlier proceedings. Pltf. appealed:—Held: each time a payment of compensation was made there arose a liability to pay indemnity under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 30 (2); & the second action must go back to the county ct. to be tried.—A.-G. v. 4137a. When right arises—Payment by guardians pending settlement of claim—By arbitration or agreement.]—In an action brought by debenture holders against a co. to realise their security receivers were appointed of the assets comprised in the debentures. At the date of their appointment there were a number of workmen in receipt of weekly payments from the co. as compensation for accidents suffered by them causing total or partial incapacity. These payments having ceased on the appointment of the receivers, the workmen were paid outdoor relief by the guardians. On an application by the guardians under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 41, for repayment of the money so expended by them:—Held: the words "pending the settlement of his claim" in sect. 41 did not refer to the settlement of the workman's claim by the payment of a lump sum, but to the settlement of compensation by an award or by agreement between the workman & the employer; therefore, as the claims of the workmen in the present case had long since been settled by the co. by the weekly sums, the guardians were not entitled to the repayment they claimed.—*Re LEWIS MERTHYR CONSOLIDATED COLLIERIES, LLOYDS BANK v. ## PART III. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

55 i. Want of proper skill in assistant—Liability of surgeon—Nurse.—F., a surgeon, on being consulted by I., advised that she should undergo at the same time two distinct operations, the second of which involved an abdominal incision; he suggested that she should enter a named private hospital for such purpose, & she & her husband made the necessary arrangements with that hospital to do so. In due course she was suitably prepared for the operation before being taken into the operating theatre, where F., his assistant surgeon, & the anaesthetist were present, as well as the theatre sister, & one, & at times two, assistant theatre sisters, all members of the nursing staff of the hospital & engaged, paid & provided by the hospital in the ordinary course. Each was qualified & had sufficient experience properly to undertake the work which fell to her duty to discharge in the theatre. In the course of the first operation iodised phenol (iodine containing carbolic acid) was used for cauterising purposes by F., & after such use it became the duty of one of the assistant sisters to remove the beaker containing it outside the theatre or to a safe place. Instead she returned it to a tray which held a similar beaker containing tincture of iodine & to the spot where the stock iodine was kept. The first operation continued for about forty minutes after the iodised phenol was used. After the first operation, F. & his assistant surgeon proceeded to scrub up & regown, this taking about fifteen minutes. While they were so engaged, the two assistant sisters placed the patient in the position required for the second operation, & upon an indication from the anaesthetist the assistant sister who had previously handled the iodised phenol proceeded to paint the abdomen of the patient. Instead of painting the patient with plain tincture of iodine, the sister actually used the iodised phenol, with the result that the patient was badly burned. The sister's error was discovered by F. very soon after it had occurred, & prompt measures were taken by him. I. claimed damages against F. After evidence had been given, the case was removed into the Ct. of Appeal for argument. It was explicitly admitted that F. was not personally negligent, & it was taken as a fact that I., through the sister's negligence, was painted with iodised phenol instead of with tincture of iodine. The question for the Ct. of Appeal was whether F. was vicariously liable for the sister's negligence.—Held: in the circumstances, the sister, in discharging the duty of painting, was neither the servant of the operating surgeon, nor was she in a position analogous to that of a servant doing work as his servant or agent, & accordingly he was not vicariously liable for her negligence.—INGRAM v. FITZGERALD, [1936] N. Z. L. R. 905; G. L. R. 652; 12 N. Z. L. J. 307.—N. Z.

57 iv. — Use of apparatus.—The test of the efficient use by a physician of an apparatus for ascertaining a diseased condition, e.g. an X-ray machine, is the ordinary standard of skill maintained by its competent manipulators.—*ANTONUK v. 64 i. Less degree than might have been shown by others.—Against M., the medical superintendent in charge of the hospital, damages were sought for his alleged negligent treatment. The evidence showed that M. failed to diagnose the ear-trouble from which pltf. suffered as mastoiditis, & although M. was not able to ascertain what the exact trouble was, he did not send for nor advise sending for an ear-specialist.—Held: all a medical practitioner is required to bring to the performance of his duty is reasonable care & average skill; & he is not responsible merely because some other practitioner of greater skill & greater knowledge might have prescribed a different treatment. If a physician in charge of a case is unable to diagnose the trouble he is under no legal obligation so to inform the patient & to advise the calling in of a specialist.—JARVIS v. INTERNATIONAL NICKEL CO., [1929] 2 D. L. R. 842; 63 O. L. R. 564.—CAN.

sa. Insurance against malpractice, error or mistake—Neglect to adjust table for examination.—The reasonable care & skill which a physician must exercise in his treatment of a patient includes such care & skill with respect to everything he requires the patient to do in order to determine what else should be done. When a physician requires a patient to get upon a table in order that he may continue his diagnosis, he is bound to exercise reasonable care to see that the table is safe & properly adjusted so that the patient will not be injured as a result of getting upon it. The physician's neglect to so adjust the table is "malpractice, error or mistake in the practice of his profession," within the meaning of those words in an insurance policy under which the insurer agreed to indemnify him against liability for damages in consequence thereof.—*BALTZAN v. 85a. Res ipsa loquitur—Whether doctrine applicable.]—Deft. agreed to perform a surgical operation upon pltf. & to give the case his personal attention. After the operation, pltf. remained in the hospital, & was attended by nurses & resident medical officers on the hospital staff. During this time he was visited by deft. some three times a week. Pltf.'s treatment involved the insertion into his body of tubes, & the frequent replacement of these tubes. The tubes were inserted in the first place by deft., in the course of the operation, but the replacements were done by resident doctors & nurses. Pltf. was discharged from hospital on Feb. 10, 1934, & subsequently, as a result of his condition, he visited deft. on Mar. 28, 1934. There was a dispute as to whether on that occasion he called deft.'s attention to the pain he was suffering. He paid another visit to deft. on Apr. 11, 1934, when deft.'s attention was drawn to pltf.'s pain. An X-ray photograph was taken, & it was discovered that there was a portion of a tube in pltf.'s bladder. In an action for breach of contract & negligence, the judge found as facts (i) that pltf. did not inform deft. on Mar. 28, 1934, that he was suffering pain, & (ii) that the tube that was found in pltf.'s bladder had not been inserted in or left there during the course of the operation:—Held: (1) deft. could not be held responsible for any negligence on the part of any members of the hospital staff; (2) in the circumstances of this case, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur was inapplicable; (3) the undertaking to give the case his personal attention did not put upon deft. any duty further than that usually owed by a surgeon to his patient.—*MORRIS v. 84 iii. ———.]—Pltf., a surgeon, was called to a hospital because of an injury to deft.'s hand in a motor-car accident. Deft., a Chinaman, who was unacquainted with pltf., asked him to fix up the hand but not to cut it off as he wished to have it looked after in his home city. Again, when in the operating room, deft. stated that he did not want the hand cut off. Pltf. replied that he would be governed by the conditions found after the anæsthetic had been administered. Deft. said nothing. On examination under the anæsthetic pltf. decided that an immediate operation was necessary to prevent blood poisoning with no possibility of saving the hand & it was amputated. This view was supported by two other attending physicians. Pltf. sued for professional fees & deft. counterclaimed for damages for the cost of an artificial hand, loss of wages, & general damages:—Held: the operation was necessary, & it was performed in a highly satisfactory manner. The judge dismissed the action & awarded deft. $50 damages for trespass to the person. Damages for loss of wages & the cost of the artificial hand were not allowed since they were the results of the accident & not of the unauthorised operation.—MULLOY v. HOP SANG, [1935] 1 W. W. nurse so engaged was the employee of the hospital, & not the mere assistant of pltf.'s physician, & the hospital was responsible in damages for negligence on her part resulting in severe injury to pltf.—LOGAN v. COLCHESTER COUNTY HOSPITAL, [1928] 1 D. L. R. 1129; 60 N. S. R. 62.—CAN.

86 vi. ———.]—Insufficient staff.]—Defts., the O. Board of Health, maintained a County Hospital, to which pltf. was admitted, & where she underwent an operation. Pltf. was admitted to the hospital upon the terms that her father would pay defts. 4s. per day for the treatment therein. After the operation pltf. was burnt by a hot-water jar, which, she alleged, had been placed in her bed by another patient, & she sued the defts for damages. The jury found that defts. contracted to care & maintain pltf.; that defts. were guilty of negligence or breach of duty in the care & maintenance of pltf.; & in answer to the question whether the negligence was that of some of defts.' employees, answered: "Through insufficient staff":—Held: once defts. went outside the statutes relating to the relief of the poor, & proceeded to contract with paying patients, they were bound by the ordinary law of contract.—MULRENNAN v. OFFALY BOARD OF HEALTH, [1930] I. R. 345.—IR.

The nurse in charge was absent from the room at the time, & was recalled by the boy's screams. She found the apparatus in order & was not able to account for the condition of the patient. In an action by the patient & his father to recover damages arising from the former's injuries, it was not shown how the accident happened, but there was evidence to show that the apparatus was safe if proper care was taken:—Held: the obligation of deft. corp'n. being not merely to supply properly qualified nurses, but to nurse the patient, the only inference to be drawn from what happened was that there was an absence of proper care on the part of the hospital attendants, & deft. corp'n. was liable for the negligence of its servants. *HARRIES v. personal injuries, pursuer averred that she attended the infirmary for ultra-violet ray treatment; that the nurse in charge, who was in the employment of defenders, allowed her to be exposed to the rays for too long a period; that she thereby sustained injury; & that the injury was due solely to the negligence of the nurse, for whom defenders were responsible. She further averred that she had relied on the knowledge & skill of the nurse in applying the treatment. She did not aver that defenders had acted negligently in the selection of their medical or nursing staffs, or of the apparatus employed. Defenders averred, & pursuer did not deny, that their electrical department was in charge of, & was superintended by, a doctor, & that the treatment received by pursuer was administered by the nurse upon his instructions. The Second Division having dismissed the action as irrelevant the pursuer appealed to the House of Lords. 86 ix. ———.]—*Applt. collapsed under an operation performed in the Waitaki Hospital, & had to be moved out of the theatre into a ward. The operating surgeon gave instructions to the house surgeon to apply the usual restorative measures, including the application of heat. The house surgeon decided that applt., who was unconscious, should be placed under an electrical radiant-heat cradle, a common device to keep up the heat of the body, & left general instructions noted in the ward-book as "Hot bath on; watch carefully, & see that patient does not get too hot," & later, "Bed temperature to be kept between 90 & 100 degrees; watch the heater very carefully." No one was told off to watch or sit by the patient continuously, & during the night applt. was left for intervals of twenty minutes to half an hour without observation. A burn on the knee resulted, necessitating amputation of applt.'s leg. In an action by applt. against the hospital board:—Held: the burn was due to the negligence of the nurse in the care & treatment of the patient while his temperature was being so kept up by means of the heat-cradle, although the evidence did not disclose the precise way in which the burn was caused. The judge assessed the damages at £1,350, but came to the conclusion that the negligence in question was not in a*

While in the home resp. contracted puerperal fever & was for some time seriously ill. In an action by resp. to recover damages from applts. for injury caused by the negligence of their professional staff:—Held: applts. or their staff knew or ought to have known that in admitting resp. to the home they were exposing her to the danger of infection, & applts. were consequently negligent in not duly warning her of the existence of that risk.

The nurses were engaged, & might be suspended, by the matron, whose duty it was to see that they were attentive to their duties. The electrical department of the infirmary was under the control of a director, who was a qualified medical practitioner, & its staff included several qualified nurses. The director prescribed for a patient treatment by ultra-violet rays. He did not specify the time for which the patient was to be exposed, but the regular period for a first exposure was ten minutes. The first exposure was supervised by a nurse, no doctor being present at the time. The patient was burned by the rays, & she alleged that her injuries were due to the negligence of the nurse in allowing her to be exposed for forty-five minutes. the propositions formulated in Vuchar v. Toronto Gen. Hospital (Trustees), [1937] O. R. 71, are sound in law, nevertheless the evidence herein did not establish that the technician in charge of the X-ray machine was in the circumstances of this case in the class of doctors & nurses in the performance of duties calling for professional skill; nor did it establish that any carelessness of hers was in a matter of professional care or skill. The hospital authorities by whom she was employed were, therefore, liable for her negligence in operating the machine, as well as for any injury to the pltf. resulting from the use of a defective machine.—*ABEL v. Pltf. brought an action for damages under Fatal Accidents Acts, & Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1934 (c. 41), against (a) the nurses, & (b) the hospital authority:—Held: the nurses were guilty of negligence & were liable, but the 86 xvi. — — —.]—When a hospital, even though the hospital in question is a charitable institution, is sued by a patient for damages caused by the negligence of its employees it is in exactly the same position as other employers & the question whether pltf. can succeed depends upon the facts of the particular case. In the present case it was found that the nurses had been negligent. The hospital contended, with respect to the negligence of one of them in adjusting a tube without informing the patient's doctor, as the patient requested, of the latter's condition, that when she attempted to adjust it she was acting under the orders of the interne, who should be deemed to have been acting temporarily as a substitute for the pltf.'s surgeon & therefore, pltf.'s agent for giving instructions to the nurse:—Held: what the interne said to the nurse should not be regarded as instructions but merely advice from one whose advice she was not obliged to accept, & in any event, he was, under the circumstances, the agent of deft. hospital by whom he was employed & the main negligence was that of the nurses in not disclosing the actual facts to him.—*BEATTY v. After she had left the hospital ptlf. complained of pains, & upon examination by her doctor she was found to be suffering from pyelitis, & a wad of surgical gauze was found in & removed from her body. Ptlf. brought an action against S. for breach of duty & neglect to remove the plugging after the operation, & against deft. council for breach of duty & negligence arising out of a failure to nurse her properly. The negligence alleged against the council was that the nurses in their hospital had failed to remove the plugging, had failed to observe or report to the doctor in charge certain symptoms in ptlf.'s condition, & had failed to take her temperature on the morning on which she had left the hospital. At the hearing counsel for S. put leading questions to witnesses for deft. council:—Held: (1) upon the evidence S. had negligently left the gauze in ptlf.'s body & was liable in damages; the negligence alleged against the nurses was negligence in carrying out their skilled duties as nurses, for which deft. council were not liable; upon the evidence the nurses had no reason to know that the gauze had been left in, & inasmuch as ptlf. had not complained of pain there was no duty upon the nurses to discover the presence of the gauze; inasmuch as the temperature had pursued a perfectly normal course & gave no indication that there was anything wrong, the nurses were not negligent in not taking ptlf.'s temperature on the morning on which she left the hospital; the causes of action against the two defts. were quite distinct & arose to a substantial extent out of different facts, & counsel for the one deft. was entitled to cross-examine a witness for the other; there ought not to be an order that ptlf. should recover the costs payable by her to deft. The representations in this "chart" set out that the diagnosis & treatment were not according to the ordinary method of medical practitioners:—Held: by means of the "chart" applt. had held himself out as a medical practitioner. ## Part VI.—Dentists.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

201a. Constitution of Dental Board — Member ceasing to be member of General Medical Council & Branch Council—Vacation of office.—Under Dentists Act, 1921 (c. 21), a Dental Board is constituted for the regulation & registration of members of the dental profession, & by Sched. 1. the Board is to be composed of seven appointed members & six elected members. Of the appointed members three are to be appointed by the General Medical Council, of whom one shall be a member of the Branch Council for England. By para. 6 of the Sched. provision is made in the event of the place of a member of the Board becoming vacant before the expiration of his term of office by death, resignation or otherwise, for the filling of the vacancy:—Held: a member of the Board who had been appointed thereon by the Branch Council for England as being a member of that Branch Council, but who had ceased to be a member of the General Medical Council & of the Branch Council, was no longer qualified to be a member of the Dental Board, & that his office was vacant.—GENERAL MEDICAL COUNCIL v. WARING, [1932] 2 Ch. 115; 101 L. J. Ch. 389; 147 L. T. 497.

201b. Disciplinary powers of General Medical Council—Delegation to executive committee.—Dentists Act, 1921 (c. 21), s. 16 (4), which lays down that for the purpose of the exercise of their functions under the Act & Dentists Act, 1878 (c. 33), the General Medical Council can act by an executive committee of the Council, including at least one additional member, does not enable them to delegate to any such committee the disciplinary powers over dental practitioners conferred on the General Medical Council by Dentists Act, 1878 (c. 33), s. 18, as amended by Dentists Act, 1921 (c. 21), s. 8.

The sub-sect. in question confers power on the General Medical Council to act by an executive committee only in respect of those matters in which the General Medical Council is not required to act itself.—GENERAL MEDICAL COUNCIL v. UNITED KINGDOM DENTAL BOARD, [1936] Ch. 41; 105 L. J. Ch. 59; 154 L. T. 340.

205a. ——— Non-payment of annual retention fee.—Dentists Act, 1921 (c. 21), s. 7 (1), impliedly authorises the Dental Board to provide for non-retention on, or removal from, the register in default of payment of the annual retention fee.—TATTERSALL v. SLADEN, [1928] Ch. 318; 97 L. J. Ch. 145; 138 L. T. 577; 44 T. L. R. 237; 26 L. G. R. 217.

205b. ——— Conviction for misdemeanour.—The word "misdemeanour" in Dentists Act, 1878 (c. 33), s. 13, is not confined to indictable misdemeanours.—PICKUP v. UNITED KINGDOM DENTAL BOARD, [1928] 2 K. B. 459; 97 L. J. K. B. 604; 139 L. T. 607; 92 J. P. 147; 44 T. L. R. 544; 72 Sol. Jo. 369; 28 Cox, C. C. 536; 26 L. G. R. 393, D. C.

PART V. SECT. 4.

sz. Pretending to be chemist—Corporation.—By Pharmacy Act, 1897, s. 17, it is an offence if "any person . . . not being then a registered pharmacist, pretends to be . . . a chemist . . .":—Held: a corpn. could be convicted of that offence.—Re JOSSELYN, Ex p. MICK SIMMONS, LTD. (1935), 35 S. R. N. S. W. 239; 52 N. S. W. W. N. 66.—AUS.

PART VI. SECT. 1.

a i. ————The rule as to the skill required of a dentist is the same as that with regard to the skill of a member of any other branch of the therapeutic art. Where he is registered & injury results from his treatment, the presumption is that he is competent & that the treatment was correct, until the contrary is shown.—MOTAGART v. POWERS, [1927] 1 D. L. R. 28; 36 Man. L. R. 73; [1926] 3 W. W. R. 513.—CAN.

a ii. ————The doctrine that the question whether treatment by a physician was negligent is to be tested by the principles of the physician's school is not applicable to the mechanical manipulative labour of a dentist involved in the pulling of teeth; such work is governed by the rule applicable to all skilled labourers, i.e. that if the work undertaken by them implies skill it must be used, & when injury is sustained that could not have arisen unless there had been an absence of reasonable skill, or negligence, then there is liability.—DRINNEN v. DOUGLAS, [1931] 1 W. W. R. 160; 2 D. L. R. 806; 43 B. C. R. 362.—CAN.

a iii. ——— Excessive extraction.—Pltf. went to deft., a dentist, to have a tooth extracted. Deft. by an honest misunderstanding of pltf.'s instructions extracted, after he had put pltf. under an anæsthetic, twelve teeth, & pltf. brought this action for trespass, assault & battery upon his person:—Held: (1) deft. was negligent in that he failed to make sure what he had to do before rendering pltf. unconscious; (2) as the action was not begun within six months from the day of the operation, it was barred by sect. 28 of Dentistry Act, R. S. O. 1927.—ROASE v. PAUL, [1931] 1 D. L. R. 562; 66 C. L. R. 237; affd., [1931] 4 D. L. R. 435; O. L. R. 625.—CAN.

a iv. ——— Injury to patient from hot-water bottle.—Each pltf. claimed from defts. (a dentist who extracted pltf.'s teeth & the doctor who administered the anæsthetic) damages for injuries, the result of being burnt by a hot-water bag, which, it was alleged, had been improperly or carelessly allowed to come in contact with the patient. On the facts:—Held: the dentist was negligent in placing an insufficiently covered hot-water bag against the patient's feet, & was liable for the damage sustained, but as the use of the hot-water bag was not part of the preparation of the patient on behalf of the anæsthetist, the doctor was not liable.—ARCHER & PALMER v. COLVIN (1934), 29 M. C. R. 54.—N.Z.

PART VI. SECT. 2.

202 ii. ——— Conditions precedent.—Medical (Dentists) Act, 1927 (Vict.), s. 14 (1) (b), requires that an appt. shall have "entered on a definite course of training":—Held: the words were satisfied by appt. entering upon a defined & continuous course of practical instruction in dental surgery & dentistry.—DENTAL BOARD OF VICTORIA v. DENISON (1928), 41 C. L. R. 102.—AUS.

202 iii. ——— Principal means of livelihood derived from dentistry.—The fact that during part of the five years mentioned in sect. 36 (1) (a) (ii) of Act 13, 1928, an appt. was under apprenticeship as a dental mechanic does not make it impossible for his sole or principal means of livelihood during that period to have been derived from dental work outside his work as an apprenticed dental mechanic.—HIRST v. SOUTH AFRICAN MEDICAL COUNCIL (1929), 50 N. L. R. 170.—S. AF.

202 iv. ——— Operative dental assistant.—The construction of teeth or other dental articles is not a class of work which can be claimed by a dental assistant as entitling him to registration as a dentist under sect. 32 of Dentists Act, 1931. A person who has earned the main part of his maintenance or sustenance as a dentist's assistant by doing merely construction work is not thereby qualified to be registered as a dentist.—MCCARTHY v. SOUTH AUSTRALIA DENTAL BOARD, [1933] S. A. S. R. 424.—AUS.

202 v. ————The essence of dentistry according to the definition contained in sect. 4 of Dentists Act, 1931, is operating in the mouths of patients, & to be an "operative dental assistant" one must be a person practising (as an assistant) dentistry in the form of so operating. To practice as an employed artisan manufacturing dentures & devices is not to practice dentistry.—SEAMAN v. SOUTH AUSTRALIA DENTAL BOARD, [1933] S. A. S. R. 421.—AUS.

218a. —“Dental surgeon”—Registration after practising without qualification.]—By Dentists Act, 1921 (c. 21), s. 4, “A person registered under the principal Act—(a) shall, by virtue of being so registered, be entitled to take & use the description of dentist or dental practitioner; (b) shall not take or use, or affix to or use in connection with his premises, any title or description reasonably calculated to suggest that he possesses any professional status or qualification other than a professional status or qualification which he in fact possesses & which is indicated by particulars entered in the register in respect of him”:—Held: a person who has no qualification, but who has been registered under the provisions of the above Act on the ground of his previous practice of dentistry, is not entitled to describe himself as a “dental surgeon”—A.-G. v. Weeks, [1932] 1 Ch. 211; 101 L. J. Ch. 26; 146 L. T. 59.

Part VII.—Midwives.

226. To cross-refs. before this case add “See, also, Midwives & Maternity Homes Act, 1926 (c. 32).”

234a. Duty of midwife to call in doctor—Right of doctor to fees—Validity of Ministry of Health Regulations.]—When under Midwives Act, 1918 (c. 43), s. 14 (1), a registered medical practitioner has been called in by a midwife in a case of emergency it is the duty of the local supervising authority under that subject. to pay to the medical practitioner “a sufficient fee . . . according to a scale to be fixed by the Local Govt. Board” (now the Ministry of Health). A Circular issued by the Ministry of Health contained a scale of fees, & clause 8 of the Circular provided (inter alia), that no fee should be payable where the doctor had agreed to attend the patient under arrangement made by or on

o i. — Finding of Appeal.]—Under Dentistry Act, R.S.B.C., 1924, as amended a finding by the Council of infamous or unprofessional conduct in respect of the practice of dentistry is subject to review, on appeal, by the Ct.—COLLEGE OF DENTAL SURGEONS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA v. COULTAS, [1935] 1 W. W. R. 471; 2 D. L. R. 609; 63 C. C. C. 162; 49 B. C. R. 459.—CAN.

so. Application for registration.—“Entered on a definite course of training”—What amounts to.]—From 1905 to Mar. 1910, appt. pursued a course of practical instruction in the various branches of a dentist’s work under the direction of a qualified & practising dentist. From Mar. 1910, onwards, until the Medical (Dentists) Act, 1927, came into operation, he acted as assistant to different qualified & practising dentists, performing the mechanical & surgical work in the practice of dentistry:—Held: the words “entered on a definite course of training,” in s. 14 (1) (b) of the Act were satisfied by the applicant entering on a defined & continuous course of practical instruction in dental surgery & dentistry.—DENTAL BOARD OF VICTORIA v. DENISON, [1928] V. L. R. 371; [1928] Argus L. R. 253.—AUS.

sd. Registration—Graduate—Meaning of.]—The word “graduate” in Dentistry Act, R. S. B. C. 1924, c. 66, s. 22 (b), does not import that appt. must have gone through a course of training prior to graduation.—Re NEFF & COLLEGE OF DENTAL SURGEONS [1928] 4 D. L. R. 839; [1928] 3 W. W. R. 299.—CAN.

sf. Grant of licence as operative dental assistant—Conditions precedent.]—On an application for a licence to practise as an operative dental assistant, appt. must show that the work done by appt. as an operative dental assistant was principally of that character. Appt. must show that there is some continuity of work done, sufficient to establish that the appt. is a person practising dentistry as an assistant to a dentist. Before a dental assistant can be said to practise dentistry as an assistant, he must have had a sufficient experience in dentistry to come within the words frequently, customarily, or habitually.—GEORGE v. DENTAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA, [1932] S. A. S. R. 343.—AUS.

PART VI. SECT. 3.

q i. — — —.]—Appt. a registered dentist had agreed to manage for resp., who was not a dentist, a dental practice which had been carried on by resp.’s former husband. In answer to an action by resp. to restrain appt. from practising in a certain specified locality in terms of a covenant to such effect contained in the agreement, appt. pleaded the illegality of the agreement:—Held: a person carries on a business who employs a servant to work for him though he may take no practical part in it; & the agreement in the present case was illegal, as constituting the carrying on of the “practice of dentistry” by a person who was not a registered dentist in contravention of Dentists Amendment Act, 1921–22, ss. 2, 3.—SCOTT v. WATKINS, [1928] N. Z. L. R. 628.—N.Z.

q ii. — — —.]—A person who for gain takes impressions of patients’ mouths & subsequently fits the plates into their mouths, performs functions specially belonging to the calling of a dentist, within sect. 5 of Act 21, 1899 (Natal).—R. v. ROBERTSON, [1929] App. D. 10.—S. AF.

q iii. — — —.]—A single act, in this instance the taking of an impression for the purpose of making a plate for false teeth:—Held: to constitute, under the circumstances, the practice of dentistry within Dentistry Act, R. S. B. C., 1924.—J. v. STURcliffe, [1932] 3 W. W. R. 377; 4 D. L. R. 662; 59 C. C. C. 108.—CAN.

q iv. — — —.]—The methods followed by denta. who were not registered under said Act, in the obtaining of “impressions” & “bites” for the purpose of making artificial teeth, & in guiding patients in fitting themselves with trial & permanent plates, without the direction & control of a person registered under said Act:—Held: to constitute the practice of the profession of dentistry.—*A.-G. q vi. — Liability of company.]—Appt., a co. incorporated by the province, appealed from a conviction for unlawfully practising dentistry in that it took impressions of the gums or jaws of persons & did fit thereto artificial dentures for gain, contrary to sect. 71 of Dentistry Act, R.S.B.C., 1924. It was proved that appt. had published an advertisement offering low-priced plates made by experts, also offering to repair, burnish & sterilise plates & concluding, “we make & repair plates only”; also its business was conducted in premises connected by a door with the office of a registered dentist who had organised the co., & was for a time one of its directors; & when a customer decided to buy a plate & had selected it he was directed by the co. to that office for the taking of the impression & the fitting:—Held: the appeal should be allowed.—R. v. MECHANICAL DENTISTRY SCHOOL, [1935] 2 W. W. R. 311; 3 D. L. R. 264; 63 C. C. C. 320; 50 B. C. R. 40.—CAN.

sk. Information—What must be given.]—An information under Dental Act, 1929, N. B., must show that informant is one of the persons authorised to lay the charge, & must specify the acts constituting the alleged unlawful practice.—R. (DESMARAIS) v. DOWEN, [1937] 1 D. L. R. 232; 67 Can. C. C. 256.—CAN.

behalf of the patient or by the club, medical institute, or other assocn. of which the patient or her husband was a member:—Held: (1) clause 8 of the Circular formed no necessary part of the establishment of a scale of fees; it determined matters which did not belong, & ought not to be appended, to such a scale & was therefore (ultra vires) the Ministry of Health, which had no power under the Act of 1918 except to fix a scale of fees; (2) "sufficient fee" in sect. 14 (1) of Midwives Act, 1918 (c. 43), was only intended to lay down that the doctors should be properly remunerated for their services, & that it had no relation to another source (the club, medical institute, or other assocn.) from which a payment might be made. The local supervising authority had no power to determine the question of sufficiency, which was finally fixed by the scale of fees prescribed by the Ministry.—BROWN v. MONMOUTHSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL, *THOM v. 242b. — — — "Person authorized" to supply drugs—Manager of shop owned by company.]—Whether or no the qualified manager of a chemist's shop owned by a limited co. carrying on business in pursuance of Poisons & Pharmacy Act, 1908 (c. 55), is himself "keeping open shop" as well as the co. which employs him, he is at all events a "person authorized" to supply the drugs to which the Dangerous Drugs (Consolidation) Regulations, 1928, apply, & is bound to keep the register prescribed by reg. 11 (1) "at all times available for inspection." Some limitation must be put on the words "at all times," but they must be taken at least to mean "at all times when the premises are open for business," & therefore when the manager on going out to lunch left the register, for safety's sake, locked up in the poison cupboard, so that his assistant was unable to produce it to a police officer who called:—Held: the manager was rightly convicted of an offence against the regulations.—DAVIES v. WINSTANLEY (1930), 144 L. T. 433; 95 J. P. 21; 47 T. L. R. 104; 29 L. G. R. 94; 29 Cox, C. C. 242.

a i. — — —.]—Deft. was convicted of having pretended to be a veterinary surgeon contrary to sect. 23 of Veterinary Surgeons Act, 1928, on evidence which showed that he had called on the owner of a horse, stated that the horse was sick, & offered to give it treatment. He did not say he was a veterinary surgeon. He treated the horse on two occasions & received payment therefor:—Held: the evidence was not sufficient to support the conviction.—*JOHNSTON v. "Held out or recommended to public"—Necessity for notice or advertisement to be affixed—Tonic food.]—Manufacturers & vendors of a preparation known as "Zomogen," on which the duty had not been paid, were charged with a contravention of the Acts. It was proved that no skill in chemistry was needed or used in the process of manufacture of the preparation. It was composed mainly of ox blood & marrow. Its predominant constituent as a health preserving & restoring commodity was hemoglobin, an article which was frequently recommended by medical men to supply

There was evidence that the words “Vapour Rub” alone described a class of medicines & not any individual one. In an action brought upon information by the A.-G. for non-payment of medicine stamp duty :—Held : “Vapour Rub,” as described above, was not a remedy whose properties were “known, admitted & approved” within the exemption contained in the Sched. to Medicines Stamp Act, 1812 (c. 150).

The “denomination, properties, qualities, virtues & efficacies” of a mixture cannot be “known, admitted & approved” unless the vendor clearly identifies them either by description or by reference to a known & accessible formula.—*A.-G. v. 257a. Whether "personal control."—Applts. were charged with unlawfully selling at 2, Piccadilly Circus, strychnine contained in Easton's Syrup, & at 95, Charing Cross Road, strychnine contained in a compound syrup of hypophosphites. They were also charged with unlawfully taking or causing to be taken & used at each of these addresses the title of chemist. It was alleged in each case that they were not authorised sellers of poisons. Applts. employed a registered pharmacist as superintendent in connection with the retailing & dispensing of poisons. Applts. carried on business at sixteen shops in or near London, but the business carried on comprised the sale of drugs & poisons by retail at the above premises & one other shop in Edgware Road only, the other premises being mainly concerned with the sale of proprietary medicines. The superintendent attended at the Edgware Road shop during half the time the shop was open, & at each of the shops at Piccadilly Circus & in Charing Cross Road a registered pharmacist was employed as manager, & attended there during the whole time the shop was open. The superintendent was a member of applts.' board, & the statement in writing required by the Pharmacy & Poisons Act, 1933 (c. 25), s. 9 (1) (a) (ii), had been duly made & sent to the registrar of the Pharmaceutical Society:—Held: applts.' business was not, so far as concerned the sale by retail of drugs & poisons, under the personal control of the superintendent, nor, subject to the directions of the superintendent, under the personal control of a manager who was a registered pharmacist, as required by the Pharmacy & Poisons Act, 1933 (c. 25), s. 9 (1) (b), & applts. were guilty of the offences charged.—*HYGIENIC STORES, LTD. v. The facts were that the accused was the proprietor of a shop in "Chinatown" & in this shop & in his room where he resided there were found pills in containers labelled cough medicine. At one time these pills were allowed entry into Canada & were used by the Chinese for treating coughs. On analysis they were found to contain morphine. The accused testified that he did not know they contained morphine. The magistrate held that the accused could not be heard to say that he did not know what was in the pills:—Held: the accused's possession of the pills was that possession contemplated by sect. 17 of the Act, & although that sect. shifts the burden of proof to the accused it also opens the door to the defence of ignorance, a defence which is not open to him under sect. 4 standing alone.—*R. v. A., Part I, of Sale of Poisons (Ir.) Act, 1870, although it may also be a poison contained in a compound & prepared or sold for the destruction of vermin within Sched. A., Part II; (3) only one offence can be committed under sect. 2 of Sale of Poisons (Ir.) Act, 1870, in respect of one sale.—WEDICK v. OSMOND & SON, [1935] 1 R. 820.—IR.

(1), of the Poisons and Pharmacy Act, 1908: "Any person who, being a duly registered pharmaceutical chemist or chemist & druggist, carries on the business of pharmaceutical chemist or chemist & druggist shall, unless in every premises where the business is carried on the business is bona fide conducted by himself or some other duly registered pharmaceutical chemist or chemist & druggist, as the case may be, . . . be guilty of an offence under sect. 15 of the Pharmacy Act, 1868."

Deft., a duly registered chemist & druggist, sold & offered for sale (inter alia) lysol, a poison, from an automatic machine which he had placed just outside the door of his shop:—Held: the sale of the lysol by means of the automatic machine was not an offence under Pharmacy Act, 1868 (c. 121), s. 15, & Poisons & Pharmacy Act, 1908 (c. 55), s. 3. The business carried on by means of the automatic machine was bona fide conducted by deft. himself within Poisons & Pharmacy Act, 1908 (c. 55), s. 3 (1).—PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN v. Annotation:—Distd. Pharmaceutical Society Council of Great Britain v. Fuller (1932), 96 J. P. 422.

260b. — Exercise of control sufficient.]—Held: the words "bona fide conducted" in Poisons & Pharmacy Act, 1908 (c. 55), s. 3 (1), were wider than the words "carries on the business." They meant that the business might be conducted by a person who did not himself perform every act which formed part of the business; it was enough that he controlled & regulated it & had the power, which he exercised, of giving orders as to how it should be carried on. Accordingly, it was not sufficient to make it an offence under the section that one sale was not conducted by the chemist himself or by some other duly registered pharmaceutical chemist. How many sales must be proved was a question of degree & therefore of fact.—PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY COUNCIL OF GREAT BRITAIN v. FULLER (1932), 96 J. P. 422; 48 T. L. R. 643; 30 L. G. R. 468, C. A.

272a. — Use need not be confined to agriculture or horticulture.]—Held: that in order to bring a preparation within the exception in Poisons & Pharmacy Act, 1908 (c. 55), Sched., Part II., it is not necessary to show that the article has been exclusively prepared for some purpose in connection with agriculture or horticulture or that it cannot be used for any other purpose.—PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN v. ## Part XI.—Optometry and Chiropody.

sn. Optum—Furnished by physician to addict—Onus of proof on physician.]—While under Opium & Narcotic Drug Act, 1923, a physician may furnish a "drug" for self-administration to an addict or habitual user who is suffering from a diseased condition caused otherwise than by the excessive use of any "drug," yet, even in such a case, an accused physician must nevertheless bring himself within the requirements of sect. 6 of the Act by showing that the "drug" was required for medicinal purposes or was prescribed for the medical treatment of a person under professional treatment by such physician. Where a diseased condition is proved, or the medical evidence is such that the physician should be given the benefit of the doubt on the point, the question whether one of the other two conditions which permit of the furnishing of the "drug" existed is not to be decided by accepting the physician's own judgment & evidence as conclusive, but the ct. must determine each case on its own facts as disclosed by all the evidence.—R. v. ### PART XI.

so. Board of Examiners—Disciplinary powers.]—Sect. 8 of the Optometry Act does not give the Board of Examiners authority to conduct a trial in the first instance to ascertain whether a person is guilty of illegal practices, etc., & the words "where the board is satisfied that any person has been found guilty" in s. 8 (1) point to a finding that has already been made by some tribunal other than the Board, & that it is only after a person has "been found guilty," & the Board has become "satisfied of that fact," that notice is to be given under said sect. & the person concerned offered an opportunity of being heard.—WITHROW v. sy. Optometry Board—Whether exercising judicial functions.]—The Optometry Board established under Optometry Act, R. S. O., 1927 exercises judicial & not administrative functions, & is therefore liable in a proper case to prohibition. The power to establish such a body lies in the Province, since it does not exercise a judicial power of the quality contemplated in B. N. A., Act, s. 96.—Re ASHBY, [1934] O. R. 421; 3 D. L. ## Part XI.—Metropolitan Building Legislation.

NOTE.—The London Building Acts as amended to 1928 were consolidated & re-enacted by London Building Act, 1930 (c. clviii.).

- 42a. Special buildings—General provisions of London Building Act applicable.—London Building Act, 1930 (c. clviii), s. 227, provides that where a local authority or a co. has statutory powers for the supply of electricity in London, the buildings of that authority or co. “used as a generating station or for works shall be deemed to be special buildings to which the general provisions of Parts V., VI. & VII. of this Act & the First & Second Scheds. thereof do not apply.” A generating station, coming within sect. 227, having been erected according to plans approved by the London County Council, the building being a steelframed building clothed with brickwork & reinforced concrete, to which sects. 58 & 59 in Part VI. of the Act were applicable, the district surveyor claimed from the builders the fees prescribed for a survey under Parts III. & IV. of the Fifth Sched. to the Act :—Held: the expression “general provisions” in sect. 227 limited the parts of the Act which were excluded by that sect. to those which applied to all buildings, & sects. 58 & 59, under which the building was erected, were not general provisions relating to all buildings but were special provisions relating to buildings constructed as therein mentioned, & were therefore not “general provisions of Parts V., VI. & VII.” within sect. 227 which were deemed not to apply to the generating station, & therefore the district surveyor was entitled under sect. 173 (2) to the fees he claimed.—*LANE v. - 46a. ——— Building used for purposes of railway—Space enclosed under arch.—A ry. co., incorporated by & acting under the provisions of statute, constructed their railway by a viaduct formed of arches of brickwork, & used the viaduct & arches for the purposes of the railway. Afterwards, a space was enclosed under an archway by building walls with gates at each end, & constructing two stories in the enclosed space. The space so enclosed was used by a lessee of the co. as a stable, & not for the purposes of the railway. After the passing of Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (c. 122), alterations were made in the enclosing walls. The district surveyor having claimed fees in respect of such alterations, under sect. 49:—Held: the fees were not claimable, & the structure not liable to the operation of Part I. of the Act, but exempt, under sect. 6, as a building belonging to a ry. co., used for the purposes of such railway, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament; since the archway itself was so used, & the addition did not, of itself, constitute a building: & this was not the case of an alteration of or addition to an old building, within sect. 9, that sect. applying only where the old building is itself within the operation of the Act.—Re BADGER (1858), 8 E. & B. 728; 120 E. R. 271.

81. In lieu of the paragraph following the catch-words substitute as follows:—

The comrs. under Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (c. 122), having incurred expense under sect. 73 of the Act, demanded payment of the owner of the structure, who refused to pay:—Held: the six months, within which a complaint was to be made, were to be reckoned from the demand & refusal, not from the incurring of the expense.

Neither owner nor occupier having complied with a notice under sect. 5 of 1898 Act to take the bridge down or otherwise secure it, or with an order to the same effect made by a metropolitan police magistrate under sect. 107 of 1894 Act, the London County Council acting under their statutory powers took down the bridge themselves & then forthwith brought a complaint to recover the expenses thereof from the owners in fee simple:—Held: the complaint was rightly dismissed, as by sect. 173 (1) of 1894 Act, proceedings to recover their expenses must proceed in the first instance against the owner immediately entitled in possession to the premises or the occupier.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. STILGOE, [1932] 1 K. B. 303; 100 L. J. K. B. 563; 145 L. T. 287; 95 J. P. 149; 47 T. L. R. 435; 29 L. G. R. 470.

- 98a. Height of wall for purpose of determining thickness—Bressummers between each storey—Whether one wall or series of walls.]—A building in London was constructed as follows: The front & rear exterior walls of the basement storey, & the rear exterior wall of the ground storey were on a different vertical plane from the front & rear exterior walls on the first, second, & third storeys. There was no front exterior wall on the ground storey, but in lieu thereof a shop front. The front & rear exterior walls were, respectively, in one vertical plane throughout the height of the first, second, & third storeys. Between each storey there was a metal girder or bressummer. These metal girders or bressummers were supported by metal pillars, those at the front standing at the ground floor level on brick pillars, those at the rear going down into foundation under the basement floor level. The wall or piece of wall between the first & second floors stood on one of those metal girders or bressummers. If this wall or piece of wall were taken away, the wall or piece of wall between the second floor & the roof would remain in position. The same facts applied mutatis mutandis to the walls or piece of wall between the second & third floors & the third floor & roof. The walls on each floor depended for their strength & support upon the girders or bressummers upon which they were built. The walls from outside appeared to be each one solid wall. The height of the building from the first floor to the top of the topmost storey was 38 feet. The height of the first storey was 14 feet, of the second 13 feet, & of the third 11 feet. On a complaint by the district surveyor for contravening the London Building Act, 1894, the builders contended that for the purpose of determining the thickness of the walls, the exterior wall of each storey at the front & at the back was a separate wall, that of the first storey 14 feet, that of the second 13 feet, & that of the third 11 feet, respectively. The metropolitan magistrate upheld this contention:—Held: without considering the question whether the walls began at the ground level, the front & rear walls were each one wall from the first floor to the top of the topmost storey, & consequently their height for the purpose of determining the thickness of the walls was 38 feet.—BLACK v. PARKER (GEORGE) & SONS, LTD. (1929), 142 L. T. 130.

Compliance with dangerous structure notice by lessor—Right of entry—Duty to give notice to lessee.]—Defts. granted to first pltf. a lease of the second & third floors of certain premises in London with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, & the first pltf. sub-let the third floor to the second pltf. During the currency of the lease the London County Council served on defts. a dangerous structure notice in respect of the whole building, & defts. entered on both the demised floors to carry out the work necessitated by the notice. In an action in which first pltf. claimed damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, & in which second pltf. claimed damages for trespass, defts. pleaded that they were under no liability, as they were bound to do the work. Defts. had not served on pltfs., as occupiers, a notice, under 1894 Act, s. 192, of the intention to enter the premises & do the work required:—Held: defts. had no right of entry without complying with sect. 192, & both pltfs. were entitled to damages.—*TROTTER v. Appts. contended that gold could not be said accurately to have been at a premium during the period in question herein since its price or value was not then in excess of par, i.e. the London price in sterling. English currency being then on the gold standard:—Held: since in Western Australia gold was during the period in question purchased at a price in terms of Australian currency which was more than its world price at par, i.e. in the then terms of sterling, it was appropriately described in the vernacular of commerce as being at a premium in the Australian market, although the increased payment was due to the depreciation of Australian currency rather than to the appreciation of gold in the world market; also it was the conditions of the Australian market that were contemplated by the statute in question, & therefore, said increased payments were premiums within the statute.—*SCRIVEN v. 325a. ————.]—In considering whether it is in the national interest to grant ancillary rights to facilitate the proper & efficient working of minerals under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), the Railway & Canal Commission is entitled to take into account not only difficulties which physically obstruct the getting & carrying away of minerals, but also economic difficulties which militate against their effective marketing.

The expressions "carrying away" in sect. 1 (2), & "conveyance of minerals" in sect. 3 (2) (b), of the Act are to be construed not in a technical sense, but broadly as entitling the person to whom ancillary rights are granted under the Act to transport the minerals from the land where they have been won for sale elsewhere.

The Railway & Canal Commission made an order granting to a colliery co. the ancillary right under the Act to construct an aerial ropeway over the land of other persons from their colliery to Dover, a distance of seven miles, which would enable them to transport their minerals more cheaply & more conveniently than by other means.—Held: the Railway & Canal Commission had jurisdiction to make this order.—Re TILMANSTONE (KENT) COLLIERIES, LTD., [1928] 1 K. 325c. ———— Quarry.—A co. quarrying granite wished to acquire adjoining fields ultimately for the purpose of quarrying the granite under them & immediately partly for the reason that there was a danger of fine stones from blasting operations doing damage on those fields. The co. upon approaching the apparent owners, were told the real owner was a Mrs. M., to whom they made an offer to purchase the property at £2,650. The offer was refused, Mrs. M. naming a purchase price of £6,750. Subsequently, they discovered that she was a mere nominee for certain persons who had been servants or officers of the co., & these persons were joined as resps. It was stated by resps. that they were about to develop these fields by the building of bungalows. The co. applied under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923

(c. 20), for a compulsory purchase order in respect of these fields, but as this was beyond the provisions of the Act, the application was amended to ask for a right to work the minerals & such subsidiary rights as might be necessary.—Held: (1) the application to the owners to purchase the land was, in the circumstances of a quarry, a sufficient compliance with the statutory requirement that application must be made to the owner for the right to work the minerals, as the working of the quarry would so destroy the surface that it would be useless for any other purpose; (2) the offer had been unreasonably refused; (3) there was a danger of the minerals being left permanently unworked, because, (a) the co. were the only people likely to work them, & (b) the owners were minded to build bungalows on the fields; (4) the employment by the co. of a considerable number of men made the working of these minerals a matter of national interest; (5) although the minerals under the fields would not be worked in the immediate future, it was reasonable for the quarry owners to look some years ahead & acquire mineral rights in adjoining fields.—Re WEST OF ENGLAND ROAD METAL CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. 326a. Damage to railway by subsidence—Liability of mineowner—Construction of Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 85B (2).—In 1893, 1895 & 1897 a ry. co. acquired the surface of three areas. In 1889, 1873 & 1889 a mining co. was granted leases of the same three areas with a right to let down the surface. In 1916 & 1920 the co. surrendered their leases for the purpose of & as part of the consideration for the granting of new leases on the same terms. The owners of the land were the same in all cases. The mining co. worked certain minerals under an area protected by Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 79A (1), contained in Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 15, & as the result of such working the ry. co. suffered damage.—Held: the mining co.'s right to let down the surface was not derived from a title antecedent to the acquisition by the ry. co. of their interest in the surface, within Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 85B (2), contained in Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 15, & they were not protected by that sect., & therefore, they were liable to contribute, under sect. 79A (1), towards the expenses incurred in making good the damage caused by such working.—LONDON

The latter road had recently been greatly improved by another quarry co. at its own expense, & the liability of repairs to the road had never been settled. Upon this further addition to the traffic on the road being suggested, the county council asked appct. co. to come to some arrangement with it as to the repair of the road. Upon an application for the grant of certain ancillary rights, appct. co. also asked for a declaration that the public road in question was a carriage road repairable by the inhabitants at large, & in the events which had happened, by the Derbyshire County Council:—Held: the Railway & Canal Commission Ct. had no jurisdiction to make the declaration asked.—*Re SOMERVILLE (T. 327d. Right of way—Formerly enjoyed under lease—Compensation.]—Collieries required for their proper working a right of way along a strip of land for the removal of coal. They had enjoyed such a right under a lease upon terms which had been found in a previous action to be unreasonable. This lease was determined on Dec. 31, 1936. Any renewal of the grant was offered only on terms which were held to be unreasonable. It was contended that, as appcts. had put an end to their existing rights, any inability to obtain these rights was self-induced, & not within the provisions of sect. 3 of the 1923 Act:—Held: (1) appcts. were entitled to determine, & justified in determining, the lease, & were entitled to a grant of the right of way; (2) the compensation payable for the grant could not be based on the rent previously paid, for that had been held to be unreasonable, & was rightly based upon the agricultural value of the land.—*Re CONSETT IRON CO., LTD.'S APPLICATION, [1938] 1 All E. Mining Industry Act, 1926 (c. 28), s. 13—What must be shown—National interest in grant.]—Held: it is not necessary for an appct., in order to support his application under Mining Industry Act, 1926 (c. 28), s. 13, to assert that, in the words of Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), s. 1, there is a danger of the minerals being left permanently unworked, but it is sufficient to establish that it is in the national interest that the application should be granted.—*Re HENRY LOWSON, LTD., APPLICATION OF (1930), 144 L. 327f. ———— Unreasonable refusal to grant lease—Question of law.]—Appcts., who were colliery proprietors owning mines which adjoined those of resps., were desirous of acquiring rights to work resp.'s mines, which were then unworked. Appcts. were willing to pay certain rents & royalties & a dead rent, but refused to give a covenant to work the mines diligently. Resp. declined to grant a mining lease not containing a covenant to work diligently. Appcts. thereupon applied to the Railway & Canal Comrs. for the grant of a right to work the minerals in accordance with the provisions of 1923 Act & sect. 13 of 1926 Act, & for the grant of certain ancillary rights in accordance with sect. 13 of 1926 Act. 327d i. Mining Industry Act, 1926—What must be shown—National interest.]—In an application for leave to work minerals under the provision of the Acts of 1923 & 1926, appcts. averred that it was not reasonably practicable to obtain the right by private arrangement, in respect (a) of the unreasonable refusal of the proprietors of the larger portion of the land involved, & (b) of the number of the proprietors of the remaining lands. The application was opposed by these proprietors & by other parties interested on the ground that it was expedient in the national interest that the land in question should be reserved for housing purposes rather than developed as a coalfield. The Commission, after inquiry, dismissed the application on the ground of want of jurisdiction, in respect that appcts. had failed to establish, in terms of the Act of 1923 that, as at the date when permission to work was refused by the proprietors, their refusal was unreasonable, & that the question of national interest did not affect the reasonableness or unreasonableness of that refusal. In an appeal raising the question as to the elements to be considered in determining what was unreasonable refusal within sect. 4 (1) (d) of 1923 Act:—Held: upon an examination of the terms of the Acts of 1923 & 1926, the Commission were not entitled, in dealing with the question of reasonableness, to limit their consideration to the situation when the refusal by the proprietors was made, but were bound first to consider, upon the facts ascertained at the inquiry, with which of the competing proposals the balance of national interest lay, & thereafter to dispose of the question in the light of the view thus reached; & case remitted back to the Commission to proceed as accords.—ARCHIBALD RUSSELL, LTD. v. NETHER POLLOK, LTD., [1938] S. C. 1.—SCOT.

power to grant the right to work, had unreasonably refused to grant it & had demanded terms which having regard to the circumstances were unreasonable. The Comrs. found that the conduct of resp. had been unreasonable & in substance made the order asked for. On appeal:—Held: (1) it was a condition precedent to the exercise by the Comrs. of their jurisdiction under the Acts that they should first find on the facts that resp. was unreasonable in his refusal or unreasonable in his demands; (2) the question of unreasonableness was a question of law for the decision of the Comrs.; (3) an appeal from their decision therefore lay to the Ct. of Appeal, notwithstanding Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1888 (c. 25), s. 17, which provided that “no appeal shall lie from the Comrs. upon a question of fact”; (4) resp. was not unreasonable in requiring as a condition of granting a lease that appcts. should enter into a covenant to work the minerals diligently.—GLASSBROOK BROS., LTD. v. 327j. — Meaning of “impeded”—Obligation to pay wayleave rent.]—The word “impeded” in Mining Industry Act, 1926 (c. 28), s. 13 (2), relates exclusively to something which impedes or obstructs the actual winning or carrying away of coal, & does not apply to financial obligations imposed by his lease upon the lessee of the coal. The words “terms” & “conditions” are similarly restricted in meaning. The Railway & Canal Commission has, therefore, no jurisdiction to relieve the lessee from an obligation to pay a wayleave rent imposed by his lease in connection with the transport of his coal.—CONSETT IRON CO., LTD. v. CLAVERING TRUSTEES, [1935] 2 K. B. 42; 104 L. J. K. B. 489; 153 L. T. 199; 51 T. L. R. 379; 79 Sol. Jo. 251, C. A.

327k. — Amalgamation—Validity of scheme.]—A scheme for the partial amalgamation of coal mines, submitted for confirmation to the Railway & Canal Commission Ct., provided for the election by the colliery proprietors concerned of a committee which should have power to make & carry into effect plans for the closing of coal mines or undertakings, the purchase of mines or undertakings, the distribution of quota tonnage, the central purchasing of stores & the co-ordination of marketing. From the decision of the committee on any of these matters an appeal lay to arbitrators. The scheme did not provide for the fusion of two or more undertakings:—Held: the scheme ought not to be confirmed because (1) the scheme did not comply with the requirements of Part I. of Mining Industry Act, 1926 (c. 28), since it did not provide for the amalgamation into one unit of two or more existing units; (2) it did not comply with the requirements of Part II. of Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), since the ct. was not satisfied (a) that the scheme was in the national interest, (b) that it would result in lowering the cost of production or disposal of coal, (c) that it would not be financially injurious to undertakings to be amalgamated in respect of which there was no provision for compulsory purchase, or (d) that the terms of the scheme were fair & equitable to all persons affected thereby.—Re WEST YORKSHIRE PARTIAL AMALGAMATION (COAL MINES) SCHEME (1935), 153 L. 327l. Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34)—Quota exceeded—Standard tonnage wrongly assessed.]—A district scheme made in pursuance of Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), provided for the payment of penalties by the owners of coal mines who produced from their mines in any month a quantity of coal in excess of the standard tonnage allotted to them. The scheme further provided that the standard tonnage was to be ascertained by taking the average annual output for all the mines in the district for the years 1923, 1924, 1925, & 1927, & by subdividing that output amongst the several mines in the district by reference to the output of each mine in the year 1928. The year 1928 had been selected for this purpose in order to comply with the reference in sect. 3 (2) (c), of the Act to “some recent period during which no arrangements made by a voluntary assocn. or otherwise were in force regulating the output of any substantial number of coal mines in the district.” In the district in question the year 1928 was the last year in which no such arrangements were in force. Pltfs. were a statutory body appointed to carry into effect in their district the provisions of the Act, & in this action they claimed penalties from defts., who were owners of a coal mine in the district, for having raised from their mine in the month of Mar. 1931, a quantity of coal in excess of the standard tonnage allotted to them. It was proved that the tonnage allotted to defts. had been calculated by reference to the output of the mines in the district during the year 1929, in which year a voluntary restriction was in force in the district:—Held: inasmuch as pltfs. had acted ultra vires their statutory powers, the ct. was entitled to question their decision so arrived at, because it had not been made in accordance with the scheme. The claim for penalties therefore failed & the appeal must be allowed.—MIDLAND (AMALGAMATED) DISTRICT (COAL MINES) SCHEME, 1930, EXECUTIVE BOARD v. SHIPLEY COLLIERIES, LTD. (1933), 149 L. T. 290, C. 327m. — “Solely occasioned by the performance of contracts.”]—Appls., who were colliery owners, made in 1928 a contract with a coal distillation co. to supply them with 750 tons of small coal a day for fifteen years. The contract contained a force majeure clause that appls. should be under no liability if they failed to deliver the agreed quantity by reason (inter alia) of the operation of any scheme for the restriction of output. During one period of three days appls. withheld delivery at the request of the distillation co. & sold to other customers the small coal, 1,890 tons, produced during that period. The quarterly allowance of coal which, during the material period, appls. were allowed to produce under a scheme made under Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), was 92,787 tons.

They produced an excess of 11,608 tons, in respect of which the Executive Board imposed a penalty. The matter went before an arbitrator sitting in pursuance of the Act & he held that no part of the excess output of 11,608 tons was solely occasioned by or reasonably necessary for the performance of the contract. A motion by applts. to set aside his award was also dismissed. On appeal:—Held: the arbitrator came to a correct determination in law on the construction of Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), s. 4 (2); as to 4,108 tons, the total output representing the 1,890 tons of small coal, the arbitrator found facts which made it impossible for applts. to resist the penalty; as applts. were excused in law by the force majeure clause from delivery of the balance of the excess, such delivery was not, under sect. 4 (2) (b), reasonably necessary for the performance of the contract; & the penalty was rightly imposed in respect of the full excess produced.—*BEDWAS NAVIGATION COLLIERY CO. Defts. were assigned separate quotas for export supply, inland supply & the supply of coal for consumption in the working of the colliery or the supply of the workmen. The whole was called the output quota. One particular colliery was not limited to its own quota, if it could acquire the whole or part of the quota of another colliery. The contention of defts. was that it could exceed its output quota so long as it did not exceed its export & inland supply quotas, they having, in fact, exceeded their output quota by some 4,000 tons by reason of the fact that they had been able to acquire from other collieries more additional export & inland quotas than output quotas:—Held: there had been a breach of the scheme by defts., & they were liable to penalties under sect. 50 thereof in respect of the excess of output.—*WILLIAMS, EVANS & LLEWELLYN v. 327q. — Increase in sectional tonnage—Right to increase in standard tonnage.—The average annual sectional standard tonnage of the Derbyshire & Nottinghamshire Section of the Midland (Amalgamated) District (Coal Mines) Scheme, 1930, a scheme formulated in accordance with the provisions of the Coal Mines Act, 1930, was increased by the Standard Tonnage Committee of the section by a net addition of 1,282,507 tons, which was made up of three items of 335,007 tons, 697,500 tons, & 200,000 tons. The 335,007 tons had been added to provide for increases of annual standard tonnage to non-associated non-special mines, that was, to non-special mines which had not been members of the C. C. C. A. Scheme, the voluntary scheme which had preceded the Statutory Scheme:—Held: (1) on the construction of the material clause of the Midland Amalgamated scheme, that increase of 335,007 tons was to be divided so that associated non-special coal mines were entitled to a share thereof; (2) the Standard Tonnage Committee of the section was not entitled to subject the annual standard tonnage of an associated non-special coal mine to a general reduction of annual standard tonnage without having any regard to the special circumstances of that coal mine, or any other non-special coal mine in the section; (3) an award of an arbitrator, fixing the annual standard tonnage of a coal mine as being a certain percentage of the aggregate annual sectional standard tonnage, is final & binding in the sense that it is a finding that until circumstances change or warrant a change the mine is to have the standard tonnage on the award.—*NEW HUCKNALL COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. Seam in one of its collieries from a shaft in an adjacent colliery, that the S. Seam was to be approached by the deepening of that shaft & also by a shaft in the P. Seam, & that both shafts were to be used for ventilation & working. He found also that the coal from the S. Seam could be sold by the co. at a higher average price in the competitive market & could be worked at a lower working cost than the coal from the other seams worked at the two collieries:—Held: (1) the definitions of a coal mine in Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), s. 18 (1), clause 2 (d) of the scheme are not restricted & the words “coal mine” as used in clause 15 of the scheme (dealing with the Standard Tonnage Committee under the scheme) ought not to be narrowly construed; (2) the S. Seam, under the conditions & circumstances of its proposed development, was a “coal mine” within the scheme.—*Re MIDLAND (AMALGAMATED) DISTRICT (COAL MINES) SCHEME, 1930, MITCHELL MAIN COLLIERY Co., LTD. v. 327z. — “Output.”—In arbn. proceedings under the Midland (Amalgamated) District (Coal Mines) Scheme, 1930, between the owners of a coal mine in the Midland (Amalgamated) District & the Executive Board constituted under the scheme the arbitrator stated his award in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. The question raised was whether, according to the true construction of “output” in Coal Mines Act, 1930 (c. 34), s. 18 (1), the expression “tonnage in coal” means tonnage in coal before it is picked, screened & washed, or whether it means tonnage in coal excluding the dirt picked, screened, washed or otherwise taken out of the coal:—Held: according to the true construction of the definition of “output” in sect. 18 (1) the expression “tonnage in coal” means tonnage in coal as it comes out of the pit in the tubs before any dirt is picked, screened, washed or otherwise taken out of the coal.—*Re MIDLAND (AMALGAMATED) DISTRICT (COAL MINES) SCHEME, 1930, HOLLIDAY (ROBERT) & SONS, LTD. v. (2) as there was no contrary intention expressed in the settlement with reference to the extended portion of the term, & as the tenant for life was unimpeachable for waste, there would be capitalisation of one-fourth of the rents from the beginning of the extended portion of the term in 1947; (3) although it might be that, as between all persons interested in the settlement on the one hand, & the lessees on the other, the principle of estoppel would prevent any allegation that the deed of 1931 operated otherwise than as a surrender of the old lease, with the result that a new lease would have been deemed to have been created from 1931, there was no authority for extending such principle of estoppel as between the tenant for life & remaindermen so as to nullify the effect of sect. 59, which expressly gives power to vary leases without destroying them.—*Re BRUCE, BRUDENELL v. 651a. — Reservation of "mines, minerals, & mineral substances"—Whether sand & gravel included.—(1) Primâ facie the meaning of the word "minerals" both in private deeds & in statutory provisions will yield to the expressed or implied intention of the parties.

(2) In arriving at the construction of a reservation of mines & minerals in a private deed, regard must be had to cases relating to the construction of the words "mines & minerals" in statutory provisions.

(3) The two main principles to be gathered from the authorities are: that the word "minerals" when found in a reservation out of a grant of land means substances, exceptional in use, in value & in character, & does not mean the ordinary soil of the district which, if reserved, would practically swallow up the grant, & (4) in deciding whether or not in a particular case exceptional substances are "minerals" the true test is what the word means in the vernacular of the mining world, the commercial world & land-owners at the time of the grant & whether the particular substance came within that meaning. (5) The question whether a given substance is or is not a "mineral" within the meaning of the instrument in which it is mentioned is a question of fact to be decided according to the circumstances of the particular case. (6) For all practical purposes "minerals" & "mineral substances" are synonymous terms, & the latter yields to the expressed or implied intention of the parties as much as the former, & accordingly what is said in the authorities as to the meaning of the word "minerals" applies with equal force to the words "mineral substances." (7) A conveyance of land made in 1925 contained a reservation of "all mines, minerals, & mineral substances":—Held: that the words must be construed according to their meaning in the vernacular of the mining world, the commercial world & land-owners at the time of the execution of the conveyance, & that, upon the evidence, the words did not include sand or gravel.—WARING v. FODEN, WARING v. BOOTH CRUSHED GRAVEL CO., LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 276; 101 L. J. Ch. 33; 146 L. T. 107; 75 Sol. Jo. 852, C. A.

st. Chattels appurtenant to lease—What are.—Pltf. obtained an option on several mining leases. The ground had previously been worked by one H., who constructed a water system for washing the gravel, but after operating for a time abandoned the property, leaving certain chattels used in connection with the water system on the ground. Upon pltf. commencing operations it purchased the chattels from H.'s estate & used them until it in turn abandoned the properties. The owners took possession & refused to give up the chattels, claiming that the water licences authorising pltf. to use water were together with all works constructed appurtenant to the lease, & could not be separated from the property:—Held: defts. had not satisfied the burden of proof which was upon them to show that these chattels were in fact to be regarded as part of the works which are appurtenant to the leases. They were in fact parts of the mining machinery & appliances for recovering the gold, not of the water system, & were quite separate & distinct from those works, & not attached in any way to them or to the soil.—ENNIS GOLD MINING Co. v. In sinking wells, which did not produce oil in commercial quantities, resps. found natural gas. They tapped the gas by pipes & for six years used it for their own purposes:—Held: applt. was not entitled to compensation for the gas so taken since (a) that right was not included in the right to royalties upon the oil won; & (b) the lease on its true construction was not merely a lease for the purpose of winning oil, & applt. having no property in the gas, resps. were entitled to reduce into possession & use it, provided they did so without injury to the leased property.—U PO NAING v. The agreement was invalid, both as to past & future payments.—LAKE VIEW & STAR, LTD. v. COMINELLI, [1937] A. C. 653; [1937] 2 All E. R. 285; 106 L. J. P. C. 87; 157 L. T. 123; 53 T. L. One of the paragraphs in the order was in these terms: "Every dispute concerning any matter or thing whatsoever arising out of this Order shall be referred to the Commission." The owners of the land brought an action for injury done to their property by a subsidence which took place subsequent to the date of the order. The co. took the preliminary objection that the action was not maintainable, & that the questions in dispute were wholly questions to be determined by the Commission, & not by the High Ct.:—Held: the Railway & Canal Commission had no jurisdiction enabling it to oust the jurisdiction of the High Ct., but the effect of an order made by that Commission, under the above-mentioned Acts, may be to make not actionable an act or acts which apart from the order would have been tortious &, in this way, to deprive a plff. of a cause of action which he would otherwise have had, or it may affect the relief to which plff. would otherwise have been entitled.

(2) A mining co., for the proper working of its mines & having made an application to the Railway & Canal Commission for an order, under the above-mentioned Acts, giving it facilities to work minerals under adjoining land together with ancillary rights of working including that of letting down the surface on payment of compensation, committed a trespass by working under adjoining property before the order was granted but after the application was filed. An action was brought by the owners of the adjoining land for damages for trespass for working the coal without an order of the Commission so to do:—Held: in the circumstances, the trespass was not wilful & plffs. were entitled only to reasonable damages & not to penal damages, the co. being allowed all expenses of hewing & raising.—*TOWNEND v. sb. Right of tenant against landlord—Landlord proprietor of underground workings causing subsidence.—In an action of damages for personal injuries brought by a woman against a colliery co., the pursuer averred that, while residing in a house belonging to defenders of which her son was tenant, she was injured by the fall of a ceiling, due to the fact that, unknown to the pursuer & the other residents in the house, defenders were working their coal seams beneath the house. She further averred that it was the duty of defenders, in working these seams, to avoid any operation which might render the house unsafe for any of its occupants, & that, in breach of this duty, they had proceeded with their operations, although aware that she was living in the house & that its stability was being imperilled:—Held: although defenders were under no obligations to pursuer qua landlords of the house, her averments set forth a relevant case of negligence towards her on their part qua proprietors of the underground workings, which, if established, would entitle her to damages.—*McCORMICK v. 930 i. When right to let down surface implied.—A mining lease purported to confer upon the Colliery Co. a right to mine, excavate & remove all coal that lay under the surface of the land, & made reference to the removal of the whole of the coal, including the ultimate removal of the pillars, walls, & ranges, which in the earlier stages of the operation are to support the surface. In addition the following clause was included in the lease: "5. The lessor shall have the full & absolute right subject as aforesaid to the use of the surface of all land hereby demised & the lessee co. shall not interfere with or damage the surface of any of the said land except so far as such interference or damage may be unavoidably occasioned by the working of the demised mines in accordance with the provisions of these presents." In answer to a question of law argued before trial:—Held: the mining lease carried with it & conferred upon the Colliery Co. the right to let down the surface of the land in so far as such letting down may be unavoidably occasioned by the working of the demised mines in accordance with the provisions of the mining lease; & the Colliery Co. was not bound to abstain from removing any part of the coal in order to avoid or reduce such letting down; to this extent the rights of the Colliery Co. under the mining lease were inconsistent with the full continuance of the natural right of support.—*WARD v. let down the surface of the land & the erections thereon:—Held: the reservation of the mines & minerals together with all proper & necessary powers for opening & working the same, did not reserve either expressly or by necessary implication the right to work the mines & minerals so as to let down the surface. As it was not known at the date of the Act & the conveyance, as it was at the present time, that the mines & minerals could not be worked safely & with commercial efficiency without letting down the surface of the land, there was, in the absence of express words, nothing to affect the ordinary presumption that the land when conveyed was conveyed with the common right to support.—WARWICKSHIRE COAL CO., LTD. v. The surface owners asked that they might receive compensation, not as & when damage was done by letting down the surface, but in respect of the apprehension that the surface might be so let down:—Held: compensation could not be awarded until the surface was actually let down, & the principle applied to damages in Backhouse v. Bonomi (1861), 9 H. L. Cas. 503; 17 Digest 90, 78, applies to a grant of compensation.—Re BECKERMET MINING CO., LTD.'S APPLICATION, [1938] 1 All E. R. 389; 54 T. L. R. 377; 82 Sol. Jo. 317.

978a. — Plaintiff formerly tenant—Whether damages for subsidence while tenant recoverable.]—S., a yearly tenant of a certain farm, subsequently purchased the fee simple of the surface of the land. The underlying minerals had been reserved to the original owners by a previous conveyance, together with the right to work the same, but there was a proviso in that conveyance granting reasonable compensation to the surface owner for damage caused to the surface by the working of the minerals. This proviso constituted a covenant between the parties running with the land. The conveyance to S. was subject to this reservation of the underlying minerals, & S. accordingly obtained the benefit of the covenant. The minerals had been worked for some time both before & after the sale to S., & damage had been caused to the surface thereby. In an action by S. claiming compensation for damage caused to the surface by the working of the underlying minerals both before & after the conveyance to him, it was admitted that compensation for damage caused after the date of the conveyance was recoverable by him:—Held: he was not entitled in the absence of an express assignment to recover under the covenant any compensation for damage which had accrued before the conveyance to him of the surface.—Snowdon v. Ecclesiastical Comrs. for England, [1935] Ch. 181; 104 L. J. Ch. 153; 152 L. T. 417; 78 Sol. Jo. 820.

Pltf. was an assignee of the vendors, & claimed the right to make borings & sink shafts & otherwise to use the surface for the purpose of winning & carrying away the minerals:—Held: (1) upon the construction of the conveyance of 1923, the right to work the minerals was restricted to underground working; (2) the express power being restrictive of the implied common law power, the intention of the parties must have been that the vendors were restricted to the rights of working expressly reserved.—*Re WILSON SYNDICATE CONVEYANCE, WILSON v. The parties failed to agree as to the interpretation of the decision, & representative workmen then brought an action against representative employers for declarations, (a) that on the true construction of the decision the subsistence allowance ought to be calculated for each shift separately, & (b) as to the method of reckoning overtime for the purpose of calculating subsistence allowance. The judge in chambers, on the grounds that the wages agreement incorporating the conciliation agreement amounted to a submission to arbitration, & that the chairman's decisions were awards, made an order that the action be adjourned & that the awards be remitted to the chairman to deal with the two questions raised by the pleadings. Agreement for payment on large coal gotten—Small coal necessarily produced.]—Appl., a collier, was employed on terms embodied in a Conciliation Board Agreement dated Feb. 9, 1931, which provided that "the mineral to be gotten is clean large coal only as hereinafter described," & that his wages were to be paid on the weight of the large coal gotten by him. The rate of wages payable to him was contained in a price list. In the process of mining coal the collier had of necessity to produce a certain amount of small coal in the course of mining large coal. He contended that the agreement was illegal as being in contravention of Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887 (c. 58), s. 12, which stated that "where the amount of wages paid to any of the persons employed in a mine depends on the amount of mineral gotten by them, those persons shall be paid according to the actual weight gotten by them," & he claimed to be paid on a contract basis which included payment for small coal :—Held : his wages were to be calculated on a quantum meruit basis on the weight of both the large & small coal gotten by him.—MATTHEWS v. Before the notice expired, the men held a fresh election, at which pltf. (with others) presented himself as a candidate, & was again appointed :—Held : the true construction of sect. 18 was to limit the class of persons from whom the men might appoint a checkweigher to persons employed in the mine by the mine-owner ; pltf. ceased to have any employment under the mine-owner when he was first appointed checkweigher by the men ; & therefore his second appointment was invalid.—HOPKINSON v. 1126a. — — — Act need not be unlawful.]—A checkweigher at a certain pit was also secretary of the local branch of the miners' union of which the men employed at that pit were members. It had been the custom of the district to work a short shift on a Saturday. The colliery gave notice that a full shift would in future be worked at that pit on a Saturday instead of a short shift. The checkweigher tried to persuade the managers of the colliery to work only a short shift on Saturdays. On the Friday he chalked on the pavements in the neighbourhood of the colliery words to the effect that the workmen at that pit had decided at a mass meeting not to work on Saturday unless a short shift should be worked. On Saturday a number of miners assembled at the pit in their pit clothes with their water bottles filled & day's food. After the checkweigher had been told by the manager that the mine would work a full shift instead of a short shift, he went to the men & said: "It's a full shift. Come on, lads," & walked away, & the men did the same & did not work that day:—Held: there was evidence upon which the justices were entitled to come to the conclusion that the checkweigher had interfered with the management of the mine contrary to Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887 (c. 58), s. 13, & to make an order removing him from his office of checkweigher.

Per AVORY, J. It was sufficient that the act of the checkweigher did in fact interfere with the management of the mine. A workman brought an action in the county ct. to decide the rate of minimum wage applicable to his particular case, & the county ct. judge stayed the action as being a matter manager was charged with omitting to provide refuge holes of the character required by Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 44. While the guard was off, resp., a workman in the mine, in passing it, slipped, & his hand was caught in the unprotected gearing & was injured. To an action claiming damages in respect of this injury applts. pleaded that they were exempted from liability by virtue of Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 102 (8), inasmuch as it "was not reasonably practicable to avoid or prevent the breach" of the statutory obligation to keep the machine securely fenced, inasmuch as it was essential at the material time to have the guard off the machine:—Held: as it was not reasonably practicable to keep the gearing securely fenced when it had to be observed while being tested, & as it would have been impossible to have observed its working if it had been protected by the guard, applts. were entitled to the protection from liability given by sect. 102 (8) of the Act.—COLTNESS IRON CO., LTD. v. SHARP, [1938] A. C. 90; [1937] 3 All E. R. 593; 106 L. J. P. O. 142; 157 L. T. 394; 53 T. L. R. 978, H. L.

—*Among the machinery used in a coal mine to which the Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), applied was a mechanical belt conveyor. The rollers at the end were contained in a cage which purported to shield them at the sides, but there was no fencing in the front. A temporary stoppage occurred & a workman got on to the lower level of the belt & crawled along to the rollers, presumably for the purpose of freeing them, or ascertaining the cause of the stoppage. The machine began to move, & the workman was killed. The justices dismissed informations against the proprietors, agent & manager of the mine for failing to keep exposed & dangerous machinery securely fenced. They were of opinion that the workman, when he met with the accident, "was acting in a wrong & extraordinary manner," & that, if he wished to get at the rollers, he could & should have got at them through the apertures in the sides of the cage, & that the machinery was undoubtedly dangerous, but, on the evidence before them, it was not exposed:—Held: (1) it is quite irrelevant in a prosecution under Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 55, or Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, that the workman is acting improperly, since the Acts are designed to protect the careless workman against himself as much as the careful workman; (2) "exposed" means "at all exposed," &* sv. Coal Mines Act, 1911, s. 55—Meaning of dangerous machinery.—Held: the question whether a part of the machinery in a mine was "dangerous" within Coal Mines Act, 1911, was always one of degree, & sect. 55 did not apply to machinery which, in normal conditions & circumstances, was not a source of danger, & which became dangerous only in the extraordinary & exceptional circumstances of a general breakdown.—TODRICK v. HALLIDAY, [1928] S. C. (J.) 61.—SCOT.

aw. —.—A brushing contractor was seriously injured through coming in contact with an electrically driven motor pump in the seam of a mine where he was working. He had started the pump to drain off water, & immediately after operating the switch which set the pump in motion, he had tripped on some loose flooring cloth & had been caught in the wheels of the pump.

In an action of damages brought by the contractor against the mine owners on the ground of their breach of their statutory obligation under sect. 55 of Coal Mines Act, 1911, to fence dangerous machinery, defenders pleaded that pursuer, not being an "authorised person," was in breach of the General

Regulations when operating the pump, & therefore not entitled to recover.

The case was tried by a jury, who, in answer to questions put by the presiding judge, found that the accident to the pursuer was due to his coming into contact with the wheels of the pump, which had not been properly fenced; that the failure to fence was due to the fault of the mine officials; that a notice at the pump prohibited any person other than an authorised person from handling or interfering with electrical apparatus; that pursuer had failed to prove that he had been given a certificate authorising him to operate electrical apparatus; but that he had, to the knowledge of the under manager, been treated by the fireman, whose duties included the working of the pump, as an authorised person & allowed to operate the pump. The presiding judge applied the verdict in favour of the pursuer:—Held: pursuer was not an authorised person within Reg. 118; his use of the pump was in these circumstances a breach of the statutory prohibition contained in Reg. 121; his actions were the effective cause of his injuries; & accordingly, he was not entitled to recover, notwithstanding the failure of defenders to perform their statutory duty of fencing the pump.—M'GOVERN

sz. —.—*An engineer, after making repairs on the sprocket gearing which connected an electric motor in a mine to the loading plant for which purpose he had removed the safety cover of the gearing, started the machine to enable him to test the efficiency of the repairs, an operation which could be performed in a few minutes, & left the cover off as otherwise he could not observe the running of the mechanism. While this was happening, an employee of the mine-owners, who was employed in connection with the loading plant, stumbled in the neighbourhood of the machine & was injured by one of the unfenced sprocket wheels. In an action of damages at the instance of the employee against the mine-owners based on the breach of their statutory duty to fence:—Held: in the circumstances, it was not "reasonably practicable" to avoid a breach of sect. 55, & mineowners assailed.*

Question, whether fencing off of the place where dangerous machinery, itself unfenced, is situated can be compliance with the provisions of sect. 55 that the machinery must be fenced.—SHARP v. COLTNESS IRON CO., [1937] S. C. (H. L.) 68.—SCOT.

it was no answer to say that the machinery was exposed only to the man who had to work or repair it, & who was the person most in need of protection; (3) machinery can hardly be "dangerous" without being "exposed"; (4) the duty imposed by Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 55, is even higher than that imposed by Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, since sect. 55 does not contain the alternative in sect. 10 (1) (c), or the exception in sect. 10 (1) (d) (which, in any case, is available only to a person who has discharged the primary duty to fence).—*CAREY v. 1184c. ———.—Defts. were the proprietors of a coal mine in which there was a conveyer belt. This was originally totally enclosed, but, in order that some rollers might be cleaned, it was found necessary to make a portion of the fencing removable. The correct method of cleaning was to have the engine stopped & to scrape one half of each roller with a scraper, & then, having moved the belt slightly by restarting the machinery, to scrape the remainder. A workman was found dead with his head inside the machinery. On the day in question, the machinery had been stopped only in order to allow full trucks to be removed from under the end of the conveyer & empty ones substituted:—Held: (1) the accident could not have happened without some wrongful act on the part of the workman, who had therefore been guilty of contributory negligence; (2) if there had been a temporary breach of the statutory duty to fence dangerous machinery, it was a breach which it was impracticable to prevent. Defts. had therefore a second defence under Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 102 (8).—CASWELL v. POWELL DUFFRYN ASSOCIATED COLLIERIES, LTD., [1938] 3 All E. R. 21; 82 Sol. Jo. 520, C. A.

The pursuer averred that, in breach of Coal

Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 49, which provides that the roof of every working place shall be made secure & that a person shall not (with an immaterial exception) work in any working place which is not so made secure, his son was ordered or permitted to work in a working place where the roof had not been made secure, & that, while he was there at work, part of the roof fell & killed him:—Held: these averments disclosed a case of "personal negligence of the employers" within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 29 (1), & the action was competent.—*LOCHGELLY IRON & COAL CO., LTD. v. In the register there were in respect of a certain date no entries giving particulars of the cause or causes of certain workmen being below ground on that date for more than the time fixed; & an offence was thus committed against that sub-sect. which could be prosecuted before a ct. of summary jurisdiction:—Held: that offence was an offence "committed personally" by the manager of the mine within Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 102 (5); & consequently that sub-sect. did not prevent a prosecution from being instituted against the manager for that offence by a miner's agent who was neither an inspector nor acting with the consent of the Secretary of State.—*HANNAFORD v. tion for terminating their services ; B. & S. agreed to accept these sums, & they were duly paid. The jury, in answer to a further specific question, found that the L. Co. if they had been aware of the breaches of duty by B. & S. would have terminated their agreements, & B. & S. would have been dismissed from their offices without any compensation. The action in which the jury so found was brought in the first instance by the L. Co. alone, the N. Co. being joined in the course of the proceedings as co-pltfs. against B. & S., claiming rescission of the compensation agreements & repayment of the sums paid thereunder on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation, & alternatively, as the House construed the points of claim, on the ground of unilateral mistake induced by fraud, but not on any ground of mutual mistake innocently made by the defts. so far as they were concerned. There was a specific alternative claim that the agreements of settlement & the payments under them were made under a mistake of fact. The jury negated the charges of fraud, & found that at the time of negotiating the compensation agreements B. & S. had not in mind their breaches of duty:—Held: the action failed as to unilateral mistake, on the ground that defts. under their contracts of service with the L. Co. owed no duty to them to disclose the impugned transactions.—BELL v. LEVER Bros., LTD., [1932] A. C. 161; 101 L. J. K. B. 129; 146 L. T. 258; 48 T. L. R. 133; 76 Sol. Jo. 50; 37 Com. Cas. 98, H. The contract was signed on May 1, 1934, but by that date the circumstances had changed, as the practice had fallen off owing to the illness of the vendor & the employment of several locum tenentes. The change of circumstances was not disclosed to the purchasers, & when they took possession on that date they found that the practice was almost non-existent. They thereupon commenced an action for rescission of the contract :—Held : the representation was made with a view to induce the purchasers to enter into the contract & must be treated as continuing until the contract was signed, & it was the duty of the vendor to

It was a stipulation of the agreement between pltf. firm & debts. that the purchaser should pay not less than one-third of the purchase price as a deposit, & in the present action fraud was alleged against debts. by reason of the fact that they (a) in some cases had allowed a discount to the purchaser which was set off against the initial deposit, (b) in other cases had effected the same result by buying from the purchaser a used car at a price greater than its value, & (c) in other cases had caused pltf. firm to enter into such hire-purchase agreements purporting to be in respect of new cars, when they had in fact allowed the purchaser to use the car for such a period that its value was so depreciated that it was not a proper security for the balance of the purchase-price:—Held: the intention to deceive is not necessarily an intention to injure or to cheat, & if debts. made to pltf. firm a statement as to price & deposit which they knew to be untrue,

510a. —. —.]—A testator by his will & codicil appointed W., B. & H. trustees & directed the income of his residuary estate to be paid to his son H. S. for life & after the death of H. S. his wife was to receive an annuity out of residue during widowhood & thereafter a similar annuity was to be paid to the daughter of H. S. Upon the death of the daughter the residue was to go to her children as she should appoint, & in default of children there was a gift over to a named charity. The trustees had power to retain investments existing at the date of the testator's death; & the number of the trustees was not to fall below three. At the death of testator there were living H. S., the wife of H. S., & their daughter who was married & had two children living. Testator's residuary estate consisted of shares in two brick-making cos., both of which were well managed & paid an extremely high rate of dividend, but which held their brickfields upon leases expiring in 1950, &

the shares were therefore wasting securities. After H. S. had enjoyed the income of the two cos. for 10 years, it occurred to the trustees that something should be done to protect the interests of the remaindermen; & they accordingly proposed to H. S. that they should either sell the shares in the cos. & invest the proceeds in trustee securities, or that they should create a sinking fund out of the income of H. S. In reply to this, H. S. offered to settle £40,000 (his wife consenting) on his daughter & her children, the interests of the daughter & the grandchildren not to take effect until his death. This offer was accepted by the trustees. The settlement, however, was not made. H. (one of the trustees) then died, & H. S. wanted to be appointed in his place. Shortly afterwards W., another trustee, died. H. S. wrote to the sole remaining trustee, B., saying that the draft deed to settle the £40,000 had been prepared & was only awaiting the appointment of two new trustees. Relying on this letter B. appointed H. S. & the latter's friend Q. as trustees. H. S. then died, & it appeared that no settlement had been made or even prepared. H. S. had a private fortune of £120,000, which he left by his will wholly to his mistress & their two illegitimate children. The trustee B. then brought this action against the exors. of H. S., claiming specific performance of the promise to make a settlement. It was contended that (a) this action could not be brought by B., but only by the trustees of the will as a body; (b) there was no consideration moving from the daughter & her children to H. S.; (c) the contract could not be enforced, as the appointment of H. S. as a trustee of the will was a breach of trust:—Held: (1) B. & W. had been contracting for a benefit to the daughter & her children, not in the capacity as beneficiaries under the will, but for a benefit for them entirely outside the will; (2) the consideration was the withdrawal of a valid objection to H. S. as trustee; (3) the appointment of a tenant for life as trustee was not a breach of trust. If it were, specific performance should be decreed, because a contract involving an innocent breach of trust is enforceable; (4) H. S. by his conduct 468 I. Damages & rescission alternative—Except as to damages due to partial execution of contract.—A party to a contract entitled to have it declared rescinded on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentations may, in addition to rescission, obtain judgment for damages for any loss incurred by him owing to his partial execution of it. The rule that a party who has been led into a contract by fraud cannot both repudiate the contract & recover damages contemplates those damages which are given for breach of contract & which, therefore, are incompatible with repudiation.—*HILL v. A muster made on Sept. 18, 1928, showed that there were 4,050 ewes then on the property:—Held: in assessing the amount of damages, Aug. 15 & not Sept. 18 was the date on which the number & value of the ewes should be ascertained.—*GERAGHTY v. C. which deft. had conveyed to pltf. in exchange for land in A.:—Held: deft. made no knowingly false representations as to the situation of the western boundary of the land, or as to the amount of timber upon the land; but deft. did represent to pltf. that there were two springs upon the land, which was not the truth, as he knew, & that this misrepresentation was material, was relied upon by pltf., & constituted fraud & deceit which rendered deft. liable in damages. The true measure of damages was the difference between the value of the land, without the springs & its value assuming the springs to be on it as represented.—PERRY v. DOWNS (1913), 24 W. L. She declined to sign until he told her she had to sign it, when she did so. He took the order to P. who accepted it. Pltf. sued to have the order set aside on the ground of fraud.

Pltf., who was illiterate, swore that her only reason for signing was that deft. told her she had to do so. TAYLOR, J., handed down a short fiat which stated, "I find on the facts for pltf." Deft. appealed:—Held: the ct. must, under the circumstances, assume that every fact necessary to support the judgment had been found in favour of pltf.; there was, therefore, ample evidence to support the trial judge's conclusion, & the appeal must be dismissed.—*ZAJACHOWSKI v. - 17a. —. —.]—Pltf. & the first deft. verbally agreed that the first deft. should take a lease of pltf.'s coal mine & pay pltf. a royalty of threepence per ton free of tax on all coal sold. The terms of this agreement were set out in a memorandum signed by pltf. containing the words "free of tax" in pltf.'s writing. The lease provided that the first deft. should pay the rent therein mentioned & the royalty free of tax. He carried out both provisions until he assigned the lease to deft. co., & he did not pay the income tax on the royalty. The co. continued to pay the royalty free of tax, & also not to pay the income tax thereon, until the Inland Revenue authorities demanded it. It was then paid to date, & the co. deducted the whole of it from the current instalment of royalty, & claimed to be entitled to deduct it rateably from future instalments, on the ground that the provision in the lease for the payment of royalty free of tax was in contravention of the Income Tax Acts. On a claim by pltf. for rectification of the lease by substituting for the provision for the payment of the royalty of threepence free of tax a provision for the payment of a royalty of such an amount as after the deduction of income tax of the standard rate from time to time should leave threepence :—Held : that there was "strong irrefragable evidence" of the parties' intention on executing the lease, & it must be rectified in accordance with pltf.'s claim.—*JERVIS v. To hold otherwise would be to decide that a common mistake of law vitiated a contract.
- On Feb. 1, 1935, pltf. co. by a formal contract in writing agreed with deft. K. that pltf. co. should have the exclusive right to the services of K. & his band for the purposes of making gramophone records for twelve months. ## Part III.—Mistake of Fact.

58a. —.]—The L. Co., who held more than 99 per cent. of the share capital of N. Co., agreed with one B. that he should be in the service of L. Co. for a term of years, during which he should act as chairman of the board of directors of N. Co. at a salary of £8,000 a year. They made a similar agreement with one S. that he should be vice-chairman of the board at a salary of £6,000 a year. While acting as chairman & vice-chairman respectively, B. & S. entered on their own account into secret speculations in cocoa, a commodity in which N. Co. dealt, of such a character as, on the finding of the jury in answer to a specific question, would have justified the L. Co. in terminating their agreements of service & N. Co. in dismissing them from their offices of chairman & vice-chairman. Subsequently N. Co. became amalgamated with another co., & it became necessary to cancel the appointments of B. & S. as chairman & vice-chairman. Being unaware of the aforesaid breaches of duty by B. & S., L. Co. agreed to pay to B. £30,000 & to S. £20,000 as compensation for terminating their services; B. & S. agreed to accept these sums, & they were duly paid. The jury, in answer to a further specific question, found that the L. Co. if they had been aware of the breaches of duty by B. & S. would have terminated their agreements, & B. & S. would have been dismissed from their offices without any compensation. The action in which the jury so found was brought in the first instance by the L. Co. alone, N. Co. being joined in the course of the proceedings as co-pltfs., against B. & S., claiming rescission of the compensation agreements & repayment of sums paid thereunder on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation, & alternatively, as the House construed the points of claim, on the ground of unilateral mistake induced by fraud, but not on any ground of mutual mistake innocently made by the defts. so far as they were concerned. There was a specific alternative claim that the agreements of settlement & the payments under them were made under a mistake of fact. The jury negated the charges of fraud, & found that at the time of negotiating the compensation agreements B. & S. had not in mind their breaches of duty:—Held: the action failed; as to mutual mistake, on the ground that the mutual mistake related not to the subject-matter, but to the quality of the service contracts.—*BELL v. ## PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

53 II. —.]—Deft. as purchaser signed a contract of sale & purchase of a piece of land, which, in her ignorance, she believed was a contract for the purchase of an option to purchase the land. Deft., however, pleaded that she informed pltf.'s agent that she desired an option only, & that later the agent saw her & said that he had seen pltf. & "fixed it up." She alleged that the contract which was signed was put forward & signed in the belief that it gave effect to an agreement for an option only. The jury found that such belief was not induced by the representations of pltf.'s agent:—Held: as deft. had herself misconstrued the document she was bound by the contract, & as she had charged fraud & failed, she should not succeed on another ground.—BURROWS v. WINTER (1931), 24 Tas. L. R. 45.—AUS.

54 II. —.]—Status of individual.—Pltf. a sharemilker under agreement with deft. D., met with an accident of which due notice was given & deft. co., D.'s insurer, admitted liability. Some nineteen months after the accident a doctor was able to pronounce that pltf. had suffered a 50 per cent. permanent disability. The co. was then advised that pltf. was not a "worker" within Workers' Compensation Act, 1922. Pltf. claimed compensation in the Arbn. Ct. on the grounds (1) that pltf. was a "worker" within the Act, & (2) that deft. D., through his insurers, had agreed to admit liability & to pay compensation. The judgment of that ct. was that pltf. was not a "worker" within the Act & that being so, the ct. had no jurisdiction to enforce the alleged agreement. Pltf. then brought this action for specific performance of the alleged agreement, or, alternatively, for £1,000 damages for breach of contract. On the evidence set out in the judgment:—Held: giving judgment for defts. there was no consideration in the ordinary sense for the admission & nothing in the nature of a compromise & the admission was made through a mutual mistake of fundamental fact.—DAVIDSON v. ATLAS ASSURANCE CO., LTD. & DAYSH, [1932] N. Z. L. R. 1163; G. L. R. 426.—N.Z.

sa. Ignorance of rights dependent on mixed questions of law & fact.—Mistake of title.—"Belief".—In K. B. R. 603, which provides for the relief of a person who makes lasting improvements on the land of another under the belief that it is his own, the words "under the belief that the land is his own" imply a mistake regarding sufficiency of title & not a mistake regarding the boundaries of his own land; & even if the rule covers mistakes as to boundaries, the "belief" must be real, bond fide & reasonable, that is, it must be founded on information or assurances such as would guide an ordinarily careful & competent man, & not predicted merely on the absence of information or inquiry, especially where inquiry is suggested by the nature of the circumstances.—AUMANN v. MCKENZIE, [1928] 3 W. W. R. 233.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT.

84 i. Unilateral mistake.—Deft. was offered a house described as "No. 6"; he carelessly went & inspected No. 16 in the same street, & then signed an offer for No. 6 believing it to be the house he had inspected. The mistake was deft.'s & was in no way attributable to pltf. or her agent, neither of whom was made aware of the fact that deft. had made the inspection. Deft. knew he had inspected No. 16, & afterwards signed the offer for No. 6 after reading it. In an action by pltf. for specific performance, or, alternatively, for damages:—Held: the case was one of mistake as to the identity of the subject-matter of the contract, but such mistake was purely unilateral, as pltf. was guiltless of such mistake & was unaware until the contract was complete that deft. believed he was buying No. 16. Deft. was accordingly bound by the contract.—WALLACE v. MCGIRRE, [1936] N. Z. L. R. 483; G. L. R. 388; 12 N. Z. L. J. 187.—N. Z.

Part IV.—Mistake in Expression of Intention and Relief Therefor.

203a. —.—.]—P. & M., who had been partners as garage proprietors, agreed to dissolve the partnership as from Mar. 4, 1929, on the terms, as was found, that M. should take over all liabilities of the firm incurred after Mar. 4. P. informed his father, who was a solr., of the dissolution of the partnership, & the father prepared a written agreement to carry it out. By this document M. was made liable to indemnify P. in respect of all rent due before Mar. 4. This agreement was handed to M., who was asked to read it, & he looked through it & signed it, although he said he could not understand it. On a claim by P. to be indemnified in accordance with the written agreement in respect of rent accrued due before Mar. 4, M. pleaded that he signed the agreement under the belief that it embodied the oral agreement of Mar. 4, that it was drawn up under a mutual mistake of fact, & that the only agreement arrived at was that M. should indemnify P.

to the extent agreed upon orally. Fraud was not pleaded, nor was rectification claimed in the pleadings. At the trial the judge found that M. signed the agreement handed to him with practically no consideration of its terms, & that as a stipulation had been inserted therein which he had not orally agreed to, that term could not be relied upon, & accordingly, that the written agreement must be rectified to make it conform to the oral agreement. P. appealed:—Held: (1) as M. knew that the agreement which he signed was an agreement for the dissolution of the partnership between him & P., it was not open to him, in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation by P. as to the legal effect of the document, to rely on the plea of non est factum merely because if he had carefully read & understood the document he would have objected to one of its terms as not in accordance with the oral agreement; (2) in the absence of any allegation of fraud or under the seals of a district council & a city corp., for an additional supply of water to the council by the corp., therein expressed to be "at a pro rata charge as £540 is to 450,000 gallons subject to measurement," the council were entitled to such additional supply at a pro rata charge of £540 "per annum" for 450,000 gallons "per diem" or in the alternative, for rectification of the agreement on the ground of mutual mistake, by the insertion therein of the words "per annum" & "per diem":—Held: the agreement bore the construction which the council claimed to have placed upon it. If that construction were wrong the ct. would, notwithstanding the absence of any antecedent binding contract, rectify the instrument of agreement, so as to give effect to what was proved to have been the concurrent intention of the parties at the moment of executing the same—namely, to contract on the basis of a payment of £540 "per annum" for a supply of 450,000 gallons "per diem" subject to measurement.

The statement in the judgment of JAMES, V.-C. in Mackenzie v. Coulson (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 368, at p. 375: "It is always necessary for a pltf. to show that there was an actual concluded contract antecedent to the instrument which is sought to be rectified; & that such contract is inaccurately represented in the instrument" does not warrant the suggestion that the jurisdiction of the ct. cannot be exercised, even in cases of clear mutual mistake in the attempt to embody in the instrument the concurrent intention of the parties existing at the moment of the execution of the instrument, unless a previously existing contract can be proved.—*SHIPLEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. The county ct. judge found that £24 2s. 1d. had been over-

But the ct. was not entitled to do that by reason of the Gaming Act, 1845, as by merely taking the account the ct. would be recognising wagering transactions as producing legal obligations. Pltf.'s claim therefore failed; (2) pltf.'s claim was for money had & received based upon a mistake of fact, but in order to entitle a person to recover back money paid under a mistake of fact, the mistake must be as to a fundamental fact. In making the payment pltf. was under a mistake as to the nature of the transaction; he thought that a wagering debt was due from himself to deft., whereas, on the facts as found by the county ct. judge, it was not. 456 vi. ———.]—A lessee of a hotel covenanted with the lessor to pay the rates on the land occupied by the hotel. The hotel formed part of a building standing on land in the city of Sydney, the property of the lessor. The hotel occupied part of the ground floor & the whole of the first floor of the building, the other part of the ground floor being occupied by a shop leased to another lessee. The council rated the land as an undivided lot & forwarded the rate notices in each of several years to the owner, who in turn sent them to the lessee of the hotel.

The lessee paid the rates under the impression that the notices only referred to the land occupied by the hotel. In an action against the council to recover that portion of the rates which he had not covenanted to pay:—Held: the lessee could not recover that part of the rates from the council as it paid the rates voluntarily to the council instead of to the owner of the land, who alone was in legal relationship with the rating authority.—TOOHEY'S, LTD. v. SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL (1936), 13 L. G. R. 52.—AUS.

§. Extent of onus of proof.—In order to succeed in an action to recover back money paid under a mistake of fact pltf. must prove, not only the mistake of fact which induced him to part with the money, but also that under the particular circumstances the law is able to impute to deft. the action of a promise to repay it. 484a. — Mistake of agent.]—Pltf. co., which had its head office at G. & had a district office at N., contracted with defts. for the supply of water to their branch factory at S. The original contract, in 1925, provided for a minimum quarterly payment of £375 by pltf.s. In 1927 a new contract was made, under which the quarterly payment was reduced to £100. This contract was negotiated by pltf.s.' managing director at G., & by mistake the factory manager at S. was not notified of the new contract, nor was the commercial manager at N. Defts., also by mistake, continued to send out demands at the old rate of £375, which were passed for payment by pltf.s.' branch manager at S. & forwarded to the commercial manager at N., who drew cheques which were signed as a mere matter of routine without further inquiry by the managing director on his next visit to N. The error was not discovered until 1936, when pltf. co. sought to recover the amounts overpaid:—Held: (1) the mistake was a mutual mistake of fact, not of law, & pltf.s. were prima facie entitled to recover; (2) even if the principles on which a co. is held liable for the fraud of an agent apply equally to cases of innocent mistake, the mistake of the factory manager & the commercial manager was the mistake of pltf. co., which could rely on it, & it was immaterial that the managing director of the co. knew of the existence of the second contract, he not being aware that it was not being acted on.—ANGLO-SCOTTISH BEET SUGAR CORPN., LTD. v. Seventeen of the five-pound notes in his possession were proved by the serial numbers to have been paid to him by the pltf.s., & this £85 was returned to them. Rule 4 of the Totalisator Rules made by pltf.s. under the provisions of the Racecourse Betting Act, 1928 (c. 41), s. 2 (8), contains the following provision: "Dividends should be examined before leaving these windows, as mistakes cannot be rectified later." Upon an action being brought to recover the balance of the amount by which deft. had been overpaid, deft. counterclaimed for the sum of £85 he had repaid, & it was contended on his behalf that rule 4 was bilateral, & applied equally whether pltf.s. had paid a backer too much or too little:—Held: the rules were not any part of the contract between the parties, & did not affect pltf.s.' common law rights to recover money paid under a mistake of fact.—RACECOURSE BETTING CONTROL BOARD v. 486 i. General rule.]—In a proper case money paid under a mistake of fact may be recovered back. The four conditions of a proper case are: (a) the mistake was an honest one, i.e. there was a genuine bona fide belief on the part of the payer of the money that certain facts existed which did not exist; laches or negligence do not of themselves affect the bona fides of his belief, & means of knowledge will not impute knowledge unless he wilfully abstained from inquiry; (b) the mistake must have been between the payer & the receiver of the money, i.e. the receiver must have been in some way a party to the mistake, either as inducing it or as responsible for it or connected with it; (c) the facts as they were believed to be must have imposed an obligation, legal, equitable or moral, to make the payment; (d) the receiver of the money had no legal, equitable or moral right to retain the money as against the payer.—ROYAL BANK OF CANADA v. R., [1931] 1 W. W. R. 709; 2 D. L. R. 685.—CAN.

- 583a. Deduction of tax on sum regarded as interest—Sum dealt with by Inland Revenue as capital.—Certain claims arose to be settled in connection with the increased burden falling upon pltf. council consequent upon the alteration of the boundaries of the city of Oxford under Oxford Extension Act, 1928. Terms of settlement were recommended to the parties by accountants appointed to negotiate a settlement, & by letter pltf. stated that they accepted the following settlement: capital sum, £4,100; one year's burden in respect of highways, £1,925; plus interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from Oct. 1, 1929 [the amount being left blank]. Defts. in reply sent a cheque for £6,759 5s. & a receipt for execution under pltf. council's seal. This receipt stated that the sum of £6,759 5s. was received "in full satisfaction & discharge of all claims of pltf. upon defts. in connection with or arising out of the alteration of the boundaries of the city of Oxford under Oxford Extension Act, 1928, as follows: capital sum, £6,025 [the total of the two capital sums above-mentioned]; interest at 5 per cent. per annum from Oct. 1, 1929, to Dec. 31, 1932, £979, less income tax at 5s. in the £, £244 15s." The income tax authorities regarded the payments, including the so-called interest portion, as capital sums, & intimated that they would not look to defts. to account for tax in respect of the deductions made. Pltf. claimed from defts. £244 15s., the sum stated in the receipt to have been deducted in respect of income tax:—Held: as the settlement was expressed to be in full satisfaction & discharge of all claims upon defts., & the contract was not entered into under a mistake as to the present existence of an essential fact recognised by law as the foundation of the contract, the settlement could not be re-opened & pltf. could not recover the sum claimed.—BULLINGTON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. Pltf. paid £10 10s. in pursuance of that arrangement & installed the two pumps. When it was subsequently discovered that deft. had no power to authorise the erection of petrol pumps pltf. sued to recover the money he had paid, & obtained judgment in the local ct.:—Held: allowing the appeal, there had been no failure of consideration, as pltf. had the full enjoyment of that

By the contract then made he was entitled on retiring to a pension based upon his salary in the previous year. His salary was a sum in Turkish pounds. Before the war the Turkish pound was a coin of specified gold content, but in 1915 paper money was issued by the Turkish Govt. & made legal tender in Turkey. Resp., who previously had served in Turkey, was transferred to Cyprus in 1923, & was employed there by the appts. until the end of 1931, when he retired. In Cyprus his salary was paid at the rate of 100 Cyprus pounds per 110 Turkish pounds. That rate was adopted when both England & Turkey were on the gold standard, & was based upon the gold content of the English sovereign, which was interchangeable with the Cyprus pound, & of the Turkish pound. The Cyprus currency had since depreciated in terms of gold:—Held: resp.'s pension was payable in Turkish gold pounds converted into Cyprus currency at the rate of exchange on the day of each payment.—*OTTOMAN BANK OF NICOSIA v. ## PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

16 i. Mortgage debt.—Where a contract provides that the money payable thereunder shall be paid in a foreign country the question as to what currency it is payable in is determined by the intention of the parties as expressed by the terms of the contract. Where by a contract money payable in a foreign currency is made payable at a fixed & definite time, the time so fixed for payment is the date as to which the rate of exchange is to be calculated. Under a mtg. made in Winnipeg on Winnipeg property the mtgor. covenanted to pay the principal on Nov. 1, 1932, "in gold or its equivalent at the office of the mtgee. in the City of Detroit"; & covenanted to pay interest at 7 per cent. per annum by half-yearly payments at the same place "in gold or lawful money of Canada." The mtge. also provided that all interest in arrears should become principal & bear interest at the rate aforesaid:—Held: the mtgee. was entitled to payment of the principal in an amount in Canadian dollars which on Nov. 1, 1932, would have bought the principal amount in United States dollars, but that the clause specifically providing that interest might be payable in lawful money of Canada governed the payment of interest. Moreover the clause which provided that all interest should become principal made the interest principal only for the purpose of bearing interest.—JOHNSON v. PRATT, [1934] 1 W. W. R. 321; 2 D. L. R. 802; 42 Man. L. R. 93.—CAN.

e i. —.—Provisional sentence was claimed upon a mtge. bond in which deft. acknowledged her indebtedness to plifs. in the sum of "two hundred & fifty pounds (£250) sterling, arising from & being the balance of purchase-price & agreed costs in connection with the purchase" of a certain motor car bought by deft. from pliffs. A condition of the bond pro- vided that all payments of interest & principal should be made in "British sterling money" at a particular place in Natal:—Held: as the parties could not have intended, in a transaction which was between South Africans in South Africa concerning such an ordinary article of commerce as a motor vehicle, that the amount to be paid in discharge of such a purely domestic debt should vary with the exchange between South Africa & Great Britain, the word "sterling" in the acknowledgment of debt meant nothing more than standard money, & if deft. could discharge her obligation by a payment in British sterling money, it would have to be equivalent to £250 in South African money, & provisional sentence must therefore be granted, for £250 as prayed.—*FISHER, SIMMONS & RODWAY (PTY.) e ii. —.—Pltf. was the holder of debentures issued by deft. municipal corp'n. in which it promised to pay "to the holder of this Debenture the sum of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) of lawful money of the Dominion of Canada, or £102 14s. 10d., its sterling equivalent, at the rate of $4.86 2/3 to the one pound sterling, on the 18th day of Nov. 1933, at any branch of the Bank of British North America, either at Victoria, B.C., Toronto, Montreal, the City of New York, U.S.A., or London, England, at the holder's option." On the due date English money was at a premium over Canadian money. On said date pltf. duly presented the debentures for payment at the Bank of Montreal, Victoria, B.C. (the successor to the Bank of British North America) & demanded payment in English money of £102 14s. 8d., or its equivalent in Canadian money at

17a. — Agreement to pay in sterling in gold coin—Payment in bank notes.]—One F. was the holder of a bond for £100, one of a series of bonds issued in 1928 by a Belgian co. Each bond provided for payment of £100 on Sept. 1, 1933, or at an earlier date in accordance with indorsed conditions, & of interest during the continuance of the security at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum, "in sterling gold coin of the United Kingdom of or equal to the standard of weight & fineness existing on the first day of Sept. 1928," by equal half-yearly payments on every Mar. 1 & Sept. 1 in accordance with coupons attached thereto. One of the indorsed conditions provided that the bond should be construed & the rights of the parties regulated according to the law of England as a contract made & according to the terms thereof to be performed in England. A half-yearly instalment of interest on the bond having fallen due, the co. claimed to pay the nominal sum specified in the coupon in whatever might be legal tender in England at the day of payment in full discharge of their obligation under the bond. Upon an originating summons, F., as pltf., claimed such a sum in sterling as would purchase in the market on the day of payment gold of the weight & fineness contained in the gold coin of the United Kingdom sufficient to discharge the payment if falling due on

Sept. 1, 1928 :—Held : pltf. was entitled to a declaration that upon the true construction of the bond he was entitled as the holder thereof to receive from the co. from time to time by way of principal & interest thereunder & on the due dates of payment therefor such a sum in sterling as should represent the gold value of the nominal amount of each respective payment, such gold value to be ascertained in accordance with the standard of weight & fineness existing on Sept. 1, 1928, & where the nominal amount comprised a fraction of a pound, a sum in sterling representing a corresponding fraction of the gold value, ascertained as aforesaid, of a pound, part of the nominal amount aforesaid.—*FEIST v. 17b. — Payment in gold illegal.]—In 1917 the British Govt. made an offer in New

the rate of exchange on the due date, which demand was refused by the bank, but at the same time the bank offered to pay pltf. £500 in Canadian money in respect of each debenture which in turn pltf. refused. Pltf. thereupon brought an action claiming the said sum in English money or its equivalent at the rate of exchange at the date the writ was issued, but at the trial pltf.'s counsel conceded that, if pltf.'s contentions were upheld, it would be entitled to payment at only the rate of exchange at the due date of the debentures :—Held : pltf. was entitled to only the face value of the debentures in Canadian dollars, i.e., £500 per each debenture. The words "its sterling equivalent" indicate that the amount of English money was to be of the same value as the amount in Canadian dollars & the addition of the words & figures "at the rate of $4.86 2/3" makes it clearer that the intention was that the English money should be the equivalent of 500 Canadian dollars. The purpose of inserting the latter words was to fix the rate of exchange. No matter in what foreign currency an obligation is payable in Canada, any judgment obtained in our cts. must be for an amount in the currency of this country.—*ROYAL TRUST CO. v. f i. — Municipal debentures payable in Canadian currency or sterling.]—A provincial statute empowering cities to pass bye-laws for the issue of debentures stated that "The bye-law may provide that the debentures & coupons shall be payable in lawful money of Canada or in sterling money of Great Britain or as to part thereof in one & part thereof in the other of the said moneys of equivalent value, & may be made payable at any place or places in Canada, Great Britain or the United States of America; the equivalent value of the said moneys shall be the value provided in the Currency Act of Canada; . . . :—Held : the power of the cities thereunder was limited to the issue of debentures payable either in lawful money of Canada or sterling money; & therefore, payment of certain debentures issued by pltf. city expressed to be payable both as to principal & interest in dollars either in New York or in London could be lawfully made by payment of the specified amount in Canadian currency, converted, when necessary, into the lawful money of the place of payment, notwithstanding that the currency of the place of payment was at a premium over Canadian currency.—*SASKATOON CITY v. The principal sums secured by the mtges. were expressed in pounds. On May 1, 1931, applt. paid to the credit of resp.'s account with a bank at Rabaul nine hundred Australian one pound notes in full payment of £900 interest falling due under the mtges. on June 30, 1931. At all material times the equivalent of £900 in gold in Rabaul was eleven hundred & seventy-two Australian pound notes :—Held : the provisions of sect. 60H (1) (b) of Commonwealth Bank Act, 1911-1931, applied to the territory of New Guinea & therefore, the payment of nine hundred Australian one pound notes satisfied the debt of £900 due under the mtges.—*JOLLEY v. York of 5½ per cent. secured loan convertible gold Notes, the principal & interest of which & of the bonds into which they might be converted were to be payable, without deduction for British taxes, in New York in United States gold coin, or, at the option of the holder, in London, in sterling at the fixed rate of 4.86½ dollars to the pound. The offer was made "subject to the approval by our counsel of necessary formalities." Resps. were the holders of a bond, in exchange for a Note, by which the British Govt. promised to pay one thousand dollars on Feb. 1, 1937, either in New York, at the office or agency to be maintained there by them, in gold coin of the United States of the standard of weight & fineness existing in Feb. 1917, or in London in sterling money at the fixed rate of 4.86½ dollars to the pound. The payment was to be made without deduction for any British taxes. In 1933 by a Joint Resolution of the Congress of the United States, which it was admitted had the force of law, it was provided that every provision contained in any obligation which purported to give the obligee a right to require payment in gold or a particular kind of coin or currency, or in an amount in money of the United States measured thereby, was against public policy, & that any such obligation should be discharged upon payment, dollar for dollar, in any coin or currency which at the time of payment was legal tender for public or private debts. On a petition of right by resps. claiming that they were entitled to be paid such a sum in dollars as would equal in value the number of dollars of the standard specified in the bond—namely, of the weight & fineness which was prescribed by the law of the United States existing in Feb. 1917:—Held: (1) a consideration of all the circumstances relating to the offer of the loan—the fact that the Notes were issued in the first instance in the United States, were expressed to be in terms of United States currency, & were to be paid on one option in New York on a value estimated by reference to United States coins—pointed to the law of the United States being the proper law of the contract; (2) the Joint Resolution of Congress had the statutory effect of requiring the bond to be discharged upon payment of dollar for dollar of the nominal amount.—*R. v. 17c. — — —.]—Defts., a Canadian corpn., registered under the laws of New Brunswick issued on Aug. 1, 1884, 6,000 first mtge. gold bonds of like amount, tenor, & date. The bonds were secured by a mtge. trust deed, & all became due on Aug. 1, 1934. The bonds stated that on that date defts. for value received promised "to pay to bearer or registered holder thereof £100 sterling gold coin of Great Britain of the present standard

• of weight & fineness at its agency in London, England, with interest thereon" at 5 per cent. per annum, payable in London, or, at the holder's option, at defts. office in New Brunswick. The interest coupon stated that the co. would pay the bearer £2 10s. sterling at its agency in London, England, or at its office in New Brunswick, on Aug. 1, 1934. Pltfs., holders of 992 such bonds, claimed in respect of each bond the sum in sterling calculated on Aug. 1, 1934, then representing the gold value of £100 on Aug. 1, 1884. The defts. contended that they were bound to pay only £100 sterling upon each bond, & interest upon the same basis. In an action between the same parties upon another of the said bonds, pltfs. obtained judgment on Nov. 7, 1934, upon the gold basis now claimed, defts. not having put in any defence to that action. The statement of claim in that action did not allege that all the bonds were identical in their terms. On Jan. 16, 1936, judgment was given in the present action in favour of defts. Pltfs. appealed, but, before the appeal could be heard, the legislature of New Brunswick, on Apr. 2, 1937, & that of Canada, on Apr. 10, 1937, passed legislation affecting gold-clause obligations:—Held: (1) defts. were estopped from raising any argument about the construction of the bonds, as a contract in identical terms & between the same parties had already been construed by the ct. in the earlier action; (2) defts. were not estopped from raising as a defence the Dominion or Provincial legislation, as that had been passed after delivery of judgment in the ct. below, & had not, therefore, been available to defts. as a defence at the first hearing; (3) (per SCOTT, L.J.): by virtue of the British North America Act, 1867 (c. 3), s. 92, & 44 Vict. (Can.), c. 42, s. 1, the Parliament of Canada was entitled to legislate in respect of debt. co., although such parts of debt. co.'s undertaking as were within Canada were situate wholly within New Brunswick. The Federal Gold Clauses Obligations Act, 1937, was therefore intra vires the Canadian Parliament; (4) although the contract was as a whole governed by Canadian law, questions as to mode of payment & as to measure of the amount of payment were to be settled by the lex loci solutionis, which in this case was English law; (5) the clause in the bonds was a gold clause, & both principal & interest must be calculated on a gold basis.—BRITISH & FRENCH TRUST CORPN. v. NEW BRUNSWICK RY. CO., [1937] 4 All E. R. 516; 54 T. L. R. 172; 81 Sol. Jo. 1038; 43 Com. Cas. 110, C. A. varied [1938] 4 All E. R. 747 H. L.

17d. — — — Debenture payable in London or New Zealand.—Resps. were the holders of a number of debenture bonds in denominations of £100, dated 1920, & the interest coupons outstanding under them, which were issued by the Auckland, New Zealand, Corpn. under the Local Bodies Loans Act, 1913, & sect. 26 of Appropriation Act, 1915, in payment for the purchase by the Corpn. from a private undertaking of the City's tramway system. The debentures & the interest thereon, at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum, were payable at the holder's option either in Auckland, New Zealand, or in London. The currency of New Zealand

having become depreciated resps. exercised their option to be paid in London, & having been there offered payment of the equivalent in sterling of the nominal amount in New Zealand currency, they claimed a declaration that they were entitled to be paid in sterling—in the currency of England—both as to principal & interest, without any deduction for exchange:—Held: that there being a common unit of account, the pound, in England & New Zealand, the mode of performance of the contract must be governed by the law of the place of performance, & accordingly the debt must be discharged by payment in the currency of the place of payment. Provided, therefore, that the bearer exercised his option to be paid in London, the interest coupons were payable in English currency without any allowance for exchange, as also were the debentures when they fell due. The Local Bodies Loans Act, 1913, which contained a code regulating the conditions & the procedure under which a local authority in New Zealand were entitled to borrow money for public purposes, did not take the present case out of the ruling in the Adelaide case, No. 17i, post. The word “pound” contemplated & authorised by that Act meant the common unit of account current in Great Britain & in various parts of the British Empire, & the currency which it connoted in the case of any particular loan would be determined by the place, whether within or outside New Zealand, stipulated as the place of payment in the debenture.—*AUCKLAND CORPN. v. - 17e. Bill payable abroad—Sum in sterling—Of “value cheque on London.”—Resp., a British subject residing in Manchester, was in the habit of consigning Manchester goods to customers in Beyrout. The course of business was for him to draw a bill at sight on the customers for the amount in sterling, representing the cost of the goods & commission, & to hand it, with the bills of lading & invoices, to the Manchester branch of appts., a bank incorporated in Turkey. The Manchester branch then made an advance to him on the bill, & sent the documents to their Beyrout branch, who collected the price from the customer in exchange for the goods. On the Manchester branch being advised by the Beyrout branch that the price had been paid, a cheque for the sterling value of the goods, less any advance made, was handed to resp. In accordance with this practice resp. consigned to Beyrout goods which arrived there shortly before the outbreak of war, on Nov. 5, 1914, between this country & Turkey, on which date appts. held the bills & the documents representing the goods. The bills were in the following form: “Please pay to our order value cheque on London the sum of £ sterling. Shipping documents attached to be given up on payment.” After the outbreak of war the Beyrout branch of appts. delivered the goods to the customers, taking payment in piastres of a sum fixed by the Beyrout branch as the price of sterling in London, & on the conclusion of the war, the piastres having fallen in value, the appts. claimed that they were only liable to pay the resp. an amount in sterling which at the then current rate of exchange represented the value of the piastres they had received for the goods. Resps. sued appts. to recover the sterling amount of the bills, or, alternatively, damages for the conversion of the goods:—Held: the words “value cheque on London” meant that the payment, which would ordinarily be in Turkish currency, must be so calculated on the exchange of the day as to represent the price of a cheque on London for the amount of the bill.—*OTTOMAN BANK v. - 17g. Repayment of bank deposit—Application of foreign law.—In 1913 pltf., who was a Turkish subject & was then resident in Smyrna, deposited with the Smyrna branch of the Ottoman Bank 12,500 piastres in Turkish pounds. In 1930 he demanded repayment of the balance of his account in gold, but the bank refused to pay otherwise than in the paper piastres which were then the currency at Smyrna. In an action against the bank to recover the value of the balance on a gold basis with compound interest evidence was given that by decisions of the Turkish Cts., even if the original contract was to repay in gold, the debt could, in consequence of certain decrees, be satisfied by payment in paper:—Held: that in these circumstances pltf.'s claim failed.—KRICORIAN v. OTTOMAN BANK (1932), 48 T. L. R. 247; 76 Sol. Jo. 147.

- 17h. Insurance policy—Application of Treaty of Lausanne.—In 1909 an insurance co., whose principal place of business at all times material was at Trieste, issued a policy to a man & his wife, Ottoman subjects domiciled in Palestine, agreeing that upon the death of either the co. would pay 10,000 gold francs to the survivor. Trieste was Austrian territory in 1909, but in 1920 it became Italian territory under the Treaty of St. Germain. The Treaty of Lausanne made between the allied powers, including Italy, & the Ottoman Empire was signed on July 24, 1923, & became part of the municipal law of Palestine in 1924. The Treaty, as translated, provided that “life assurance policies contracted in currencies other than Turkish pounds, entered into before Oct. 29, 1914, between cos. possessing at this date [actuellement] the nationality of an allied power & Turkish nationals” should be settled, if the amount was stipulated in gold francs, by paying French francs for the period before Nov. 18, 1915, & Turkish paper pounds for the period after that date. The wife having died in 1925, the husband claimed 10,000 gold francs under the policy. The co. was willing to pay 10,000 francs at the then rate of exchange in Paris; that was more favourable to the assured than payment in Turkish pounds:—Held: the provision of the Treaty of Lausanne applied, as the co. was of Italian nationality at the date of the Treaty, & consequently the assured was not entitled to payment in gold francs.—ASSICURAZIONE GENERALI v. SELIM COTRAN, [1932] A. C. 268; 101 L. J. P. C. 81; 146 L. T. 233; 76 Sol. Jo. 50, P. C.

- 17l. Dividends of Australian company payable in England.—The A. E. Co. was an English co. incorporated under Cos. Acts, 1869 to 1909, as a co. limited by shares & having its registered office in London & a branch office in Adelaide, South Australia, where it carried on its business of supplying electric light. The capital of the co. included certain 5 per cent. A cumulative preference shares (A shares) & certain 6½ per cent. C cumulative preference shares (C shares). On June 1, 1925, & thenceforward the P. Co. was & remained registered in England as the holder of A shares which had been issued in England in 1919. In 1924 & 1928 the same co. was registered as the holder of C shares which had been offered for subscription concurrently in England & Australia.

In 1921 by special resolutions duly passed & confirmed the whole conduct & control of the A. E. Co.'s business, except formalities required by statute to be observed in England, were transferred to Australia, & it was provided that all dividends should be declared at general meetings to be held in Australasia & should be paid in & from Adelaide or elsewhere in Australasia, & that all preference dividends declared by the board of directors should be declared at meetings to be held in Australasia & should be paid in & from Adelaide or elsewhere in Australasia, & that no part of the profits of the co. should be transmitted to the United Kingdom except in payment of dividend to members ordinarily resident there. In 1929 the A & C shares were converted respectively into A stock & C stock. On & since Mar. 1, 1931, the A. E. Co. paid dividends on its stock by delivering to the stockholders warrants payable at the Bank of Adelaide, South Australia. The P. Co. claimed a declaration that they & all other holders of A stock & C stock registered in the A. E. Co.'s register in England were entitled to be paid their dividends in sterling in England in English legal tender for the full nominal amount thereof & not subject to deduction for Australian exchange, & to an order for payment accordingly less the amount already received in respect of the dividends:—Held: inasmuch as the dividends were by agreement between the parties to be paid in Australia, the A. E. Co. had discharged its obligation by paying in Australian currency that which was in Australia legal tender for the nominal amount of the dividend warrants.—*ADELAIDE ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. At the date of the agreement the value of the New Zealand pound was at about 10 per cent. discount as compared with the English pound, & later during applt.'s period of service the discrepancy rose to 24 or 25 per cent. Applt. having claimed to be entitled to be paid the agreed salary in such amounts of New Zealand currency as would be the equivalent of sterling according to the rate of exchange current at the time of each payment, resps. refused to pay the £700 a year otherwise than in New Zealand currency:—Held: "sterling" meant British sterling. "Sterling" was added in the agreement to define what means of discharge—what currency—was being stipulated, & was an express term excluding the prima facie rule according to which New Zealand pounds would be meant, as being the currency of the place of payment. Having regard to the place where, & the parties between whom, the agreement was made, applt. was entitled under it to be paid his salary of £700 a year in English currency or its equivalent in New Zealand currency at the relevant rates of exchange. If "sterling" had not been inserted, the salary would have been payable in New Zealand currency, being that of the place of payment, in accordance with the principles laid down in Adelaide Electric Supply Co. v. Prudential Assurance Co., [1934]

On May 1, 1931, applt. paid to the credit of resp.'s account with a bank at Rabaul nine hundred Australian one pound notes in full payment of £900 interest falling due under the mtges. on June 30, 1931. At all material times the equivalent of £900 in gold in Rabaul was eleven hundred & seventy-two Australian pound notes:—Held: the provisions of sect. 60H (1) (b) of Commonwealth Bank Act, 1911–1931, applied to the territory of New Guinea & therefore, the payment of nine hundred Australian one pound notes satisfied the debt of £900 due under the mtges.—*JOLLEY v. S. undertook inter alia to give to E. B. S. on attaining the age of twenty-five, or marrying under that age, 100,000 marks. In June, 1922, being then a naturalised British subject domiciled in England, S. made his will & directed his trustees to fulfil his obligations under the document of 1911. S. died in Oct. 1922, & E. B. S. attained the age of twenty-five in 1934. Upon a summons taken out to determine the validity of the document of 1911 & what, if any, sum should be paid to E. B. S., either under that document or under the will of S.:—Held: the document of 1911 was merely a record of intention & not a deed of family arrangement & was not enforceable in a German ct.; the legacy under the will was one not of 100,000 marks, but of such sum as would give to E. B. S. a sum which S. would have had to give her if there had been an enforceable obligation under the document of 1911; the German ct., acting according to German law, if it had to value the obligation treated as a binding obligation, would have put the figure at approximately £5,000, & E. B. S. was entitled to that sum with interest from Oct. 31, 1934.—Re SCHNAPPER, WESTMINSTER BANK, LTD. v. SCHNAPPER, [1936] 1 All E. R. 322.

30b. Annuity subject of compromise in foreign court.—Under their father's will, the female pltf. was given an annuity & certain other rights & debt. was the residuary legatee. The rights of the parties were subsequently, in 1905, the subject of a compromise approved by the German ct., under which, so far as is material to this case, the female pltf. was to receive an annuity of 8,000 marks. In 1926 the trustees, in pursuance of a decision of the Ct. of Appeal in England, appropriated £8,489 14s. 11d. 5 per cent. War Loan in respect of this annuity. Deft. contended that the female pltf. was entitled to only the produce of this War Loan—which had been converted into 3½ per cent. stock—and the female pltf. contended that she was entitled at the present time to receive 8,000 reichsmarks:—Held: (1) the female pltf. was not restricted to the actual sum produced by the appropriated investment; (2) she was not entitled to 8,000 reichsmarks, but to such a sum as a German ct. would award having regard to the original liability & to all the circumstances of the case, in this case found to be £500 per annum, payable in reichsmarks at the rate of exchange on the dates of payment; (3) the assessment of such a sum was not an exercise of the discretion of the ct. which could be made by a German ct. only, but a question of fact, which could be determined by the ct. in England.—KORNATZKI v. OPPENHEIMER, [1937] 4 All E. R. 133.

34a. — Date of ascertainment of rate.—A testatrix who died domiciled in England, leaving property in both England & the United States, by her will gave a legacy of 10,000 dollars or the equivalent thereof in sterling at current rates of exchange to the rector & churchwardens or other the governing body of Chiswick Church for the purpose of keeping the burial ground & monument therein to her late husband & herself in good & sufficient repair & for the maintenance of the church & the decorations thereof. Testatrix, who died in 1925, was buried in Chiswick cemetery immediately adjoining the churchyard, which had long been closed for burials, in the same grave as her husband:—Held: a valid charitable bequest, to be divided equally between the vicar & churchwardens of Chiswick Parish Church as the controllers of the church & churchyard & the Borough Council as managers & owners of the cemetery. Further, the value of the legacy, & therefore the rate of exchange from dollars into sterling, must be ascertained on the first anniversary of the death of testatrix.—*Re EIGHMIE, COLBOURNE v. sb. Winding-up of partnership—Payment to assignee of partner—Rate at date of realisation of assets.—As regards the rate of conversion of dollars into British Indian currency, to which the assignee was entitled, the rate prevailing at the date on which the winding-up of the partnership was completed & the assets were realised is the proper rate to be allowed to the assignee.—VEERAPPA CHETTY v. MUTHIAH CHETTY (1929), 1 L. R. 52 Mad. 509.—IND.

sd. Income received abroad in foreign currency—Assessment to income tax.—Applt., resident in Australia, included in his Federal income tax return a sum of £5,671, interest on British funded stock, which had been received by him by credits to his account with a bank in London & retained in England. The assessing officer added to applt.'s net income return a sum of £1,097, representing the difference between the £5,671 & the sum which would have been produced in Australia at the then existing rate of exchange by telegraphic transfer upon the respective dates of credit of the sums constituting the £5,671. On a claim by the applt. that the sum of £5,671 should not be included in his return at any other figure than £5,671:—Held: the Australian Income Tax Acts, which provide that the amount of income tax payable is to be ascertained by reference to a rate based on a calculation of pence per pound of taxable income, in referring to pounds & pence are referring only to those units of Australian currency known as pounds & pence. To calculate Australian income tax at a rate of so many pence per pound of taxable income the assessable income of the taxpayer must, whatever be the currency in which he derives it, all be expressed in terms of Australian currency. Applt.'s derived income had, therefore, for the purposes of income tax, to be stated & dealt with in terms of Australian currency, & the £1,097 was rightly included in his assessment.—*PAYNE v. Between the issue of the writ & the day of hearing deft. paid Frs.18,035 to pltfs. in France, & a receipt was given her as for money deposited :—Held : in arriving at the proper equivalent in English currency, the rate of exchange prevailing between the two countries on Dec. 13, 1914, when the debt became due, & not that prevailing at the date of the judgment, should be adopted.—*SOCIETE DES HOTELS DU TOUQUET-PARIS-PLAGE v. He informed applts. that his life was in danger in Constantinople from the Turkish authorities, & asked to be transferred to a branch outside Turkey. That being refused he fled from Constantinople. He was dismissed without notice, & brought an action for wrongful dismissal :—Held : conversion into sterling of the damages in Turkish currency in respect of resp.'s pension under the contract should be at the rate of exchange at the date of his dismissal, not at the date of the judgment.—*OTTOMAN BANK v. 52b. —.].—Resp., who became an employee of applt. bank in 1910, had no written contract of employment, but had signed a declaration to the effect that he would adhere strictly to the regulations governing the pension & superannuation fund adopted by the bank as forming an integral part of the conditions of his agreement. The contract of employment was governed by Turkish law, & his salary was in Turkish pounds, which, at the date of the contract, were paid in gold coins, though later, as the result of currency changes effected by statute consequent upon the war, he was paid in paper currency notes, which were then legal tender. He served in Turkey for many years, & in 1923 was transferred to Cyprus, where he remained in the service of applts. until 1931, when he retired on the terms that he was entitled to a pension in accordance with the pension regulations at the rate of 48 per cent. of the fixed salary received by him on Dec. 31, 1930. On a claim by him that there was an original contractual obligation, which still subsisted, to pay him his salary in gold, & that he was therefore entitled to be paid his pension in Turkish gold pounds, by which was meant the current value of the bullion content of the Turkish gold coin (or its equivalent in the currency of Cyprus) at the appropriate rates of exchange prevailing on the date of payment of each monthly instalment of the pension :—Held : (1) resp.'s contention amounted to construing the contract exactly as if there were a gold clause expressed in it, whereas no contractual conditions which could be described as "a gold clause" were anywhere expressly to be found in the transactions between the parties.

The principle that a contract to pay so many pounds is not a contract to pay in gold, but is prima facie a contract to pay money according to the currency of the country where payment has to be made, was equally applicable to the present case, where there had been a change in the currency of the country concerned—Turkey, & the original contract to pay resp. in Turkish pounds was not, therefore, either on the above-mentioned principle or according to Turkish law, a contract to pay him in gold coins, even though gold was the then normal form of legal tender, but was a contract to pay him in whatever might be legal tender in Turkey at the material time. He was accordingly not entitled to be paid his pension in Turkish gold pounds or their equivalent in Cyprus currency :—Held : (2) the practice of applt. bank in paying their employees, & in particular the course which they adopted in Turkey after Turkish currency went off gold, could not be treated as showing that the original contract with resp. was one to pay in gold coins.—*OTTOMAN BANK OF NICOSIA v. - 55a. —.]—A Chilean vessel owned by plffs. received damage while at anchor in the territorial waters of Ecuador through being run into by a Dutch vessel owned by defts. The Dutch vessel was arrested in this country, & her owners put in bail, admitted liability, & consented to a reference to assess the damage. The admission & consent were filed in the registry & became an order of ct. The Chilean vessel was repaired in Chile, & plffs. filed their claim & vouchers comprising some 70,000 Chilean pesos & some small sums in Ecuador sucres, U.S. dollars, & sterling, the whole amount quantified into sterling being claimed at £2,533 19s. 1d.

Under Chilean law a debtor can make a valid payment, even against the will of the creditor, by depositing the amount owed in a Chilean bank in the name of the creditor, & the exchange value of the peso having fallen heavily, defts. deposited in a bank at Valparaiso 80,000 pesos in plffs.' name, an amount which defts. alleged was more than sufficient to cover the whole claim with interest at 6 per cent. On plffs.' application for a day to be fixed for the hearing of the reference, defts., on the ground that the claim had been paid in full, moved to have the action dismissed & the bail discharged. LANGTON, J., held that so far as the payment related to the claim in pesos it was a good discharge, but having regard to the fall in the exchange it was not necessarily a good discharge for the items of the claim in other currencies, & that so far as they were concerned there must be a reference to the registrar to report whether the amount deposited in pesos was in fact sufficient to cover these items with interest. Both parties filed notice of appeal. Before the appeal was heard, however, plffs. accepted a sum tendered in respect of the small items in currencies other than the Chilean pesos, & the appeal was confined to the question whether the payment in Chile of the 80,000 pesos in respect of repairs & demurrage was a good discharge:—Held: on the evidence there was no final decision by the Chilean cts. that the payment in depreciated pesos was sufficient, while proceedings were still pending in the English ct.; accordingly the reference must proceed, & the registrar must treat the payment in Chile as a payment on account of the sums expended & lost in pesos in respect of the repairs & demurrage, & ascertain, in accordance with the decision in The Volturno, No. 55, the amount due to plffs. by converting the sums so expended & lost into sterling at the rate of exchange prevailing at the time the pesos were paid or lost.—THE BAARN, [1933] P. 251; 102 L. J. P. 120; 150 L. T. 50; 49 T. L. R. 554; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 434, C. A.

- 61a. Debentures of Australian company—Option for payment in Australia or London—Payment in London.—In Oct. 1920, an Australian co. incorporated in Victoria, & having also a registered office in London, England, issued mtge. debentures secured by a trust deed. By each of the debentures the co. covenanted to pay the principal moneys on Oct. 1, 1940, or such earlier date as they should become payable in accordance with the conditions indorsed thereon, & in the meantime to pay interest thereon at 7 per cent. per annum in accordance with the coupons annexed thereto. Under the conditions both principal & interest were payable in either Australia or London, at the holder's option. In accordance with a supplemental trust deed dated Sept. 1, 1921, an additional register of debentures was established in London, & the co. had power to make provision for (inter alia) transfer of registration from one register to the other. At the date of the last drawing of debentures for redemption before this summons—namely, Oct. 7, 1931, over 6,000 debentures were outstanding, of which 137 were on the London register:—Held: on the true construction of the debentures & of the annexed coupons there was no implied stipulation that, in the event of a debenture holder exercising his option to be paid in London, the co. could be required to pay the principal moneys & interest thereby secured in sterling & not in Australian currency. Therefore, the appeal must be allowed, & there must be a declaration that the sums payable by the co. in London in redemption of, & for interest on, the debentures in question ought in all cases to be paid in Australian currency converted into sterling at the rate of exchange current in London on the due date for payment thereof.—*BROKEN HILL PROPRIETARY CO., LTD. v. The creditor lived for eighteen years after the date of the loan, & during his lifetime no interest was demanded or paid. After his death his executrix claimed repayment of the loan with interest from its date:—Held: although as a general rule interest is due on a loan, the proper inference from the whole circumstances of the case, & in particular from the facts that the parties were brothers, that the creditor had made no demand for interest during his lifetime, & that the acknowledgment bore that the money was "to be repaid later" was that the intention of the parties was that no interest should be paid.—*SMELLIE'S EXECUTRIX v. 353a. Note or memorandum signed by borrower—Contract contemplating security—Whether contract must set out terms of security.—Money-lenders brought an action against a borrower to recover sums of £200, £100, & £100 lent by them to the borrower & alleged to be due upon three promissory notes payable at a specified address, the first in fourteen monthly instalments with interest at 60 per cent. per annum, & the others in three months after their respective dates with interest at 80 per cent. per annum until payment. If default were made the whole unpaid principal & interest thereon became due & was to carry interest in the case of the first sum at 60 per cent. per annum & in the case of the other two sums at 80 per cent. per annum from the date of default until payment. In intended compliance with Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, in each case before the money was lent there was made & signed by the borrower a note or memorandum of the contract stating that the sum referred to therein was advanced on the security of a promissory note, but not stating where repayment of the sum was to be made. Copies of the notes or memoranda were duly delivered to the borrower:—Held: (1) the note or memorandum in each case was sufficient. The ct., without deciding the point, inclined to the view that the terms of a security given for repayment of a loan need not be set out in the note or memorandum of the contract, at any rate where the security does not impose terms more onerous than those stated in the note or memorandum.

(2) Where the interest charged exceeds the rate mentioned, Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 10 (1), imposes on the money-lender the burden of showing that the interest is not excessive & that the transaction of loan is not harsh or unconscionable; & in the circumstances pltf's. had in each case discharged themselves of this burden.—*READING TRUST, LTD. v. keepers requesting them to supply goods to a certain amount to the customer. The customer signed a memorandum stating that in consideration of the co. making a certain advance at his request he undertook to pay to the co. a sum larger than the price of goods supplied by a deposit & instalments:—Held: the business so carried on was not that of money-lending, & resp. co. was not under an obligation to register under the Money-lenders Act, 1924.—*ALLCHURCH v. A contract by a moneylender to lend money was secured by a promissory note, which was not signed by either the principal or the surety, nor was any note or memorandum of the contract made, until after the major portion of the sum of money contracted to be lent had been lent:—Held: by reason of the provisions of Moneylenders Act, 1933, s. 11 (1), the moneylender's claim for the repayment of the money was unenforceable; also, Moneylenders Act, 1933, only applies to the transactions of a moneylender made in the course of his business, & a moneylender is not precluded by the Act from lending small sums to his friends without complying with all the formalities of the Act.—*HANDELMAN v. 353b. ——— Substituted contract in settlement of action to recover loan.—The male deft. borrowed, by promissory note, money from pltf., a firm of money-lenders, & agreed to repay the same by monthly instalments. In this transaction the requirements of Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, were duly complied with. The borrower made default in paying the instalments, whereupon pltf. issued a writ to recover the amount. Negotiations then took place, & in the result an arrangement was made by which the male deft. & the second deft., his wife, gave pltf. a joint & several promissory note in respect of the amount unpaid on the first promissory note, an amount for interest, & certain agreed costs. A memorandum of this contract was signed by both defts., but no copy was sent to them within seven days, as required by sect. 6. The amount of the promissory note not having been repaid on the due date, pltf. sued defts. to recover the same :—Held : (1) although the contract sued on was a substituted agreement for, or a variation of, the original contract entered into by the male deft., it was nevertheless a contract "for the repayment by a borrower of money lent to him" within sect. 6; (2) as a copy of the contract had not been sent as required by that sect., the contract was unenforceable against the male deft.; (3) it was likewise unenforceable against the female deft., inasmuch as it appeared that she signed the promissory note solely as a surety, & the male deft. not being liable she also was discharged from liability.—*ELDRIDGE & MORRIS v. The interest secured by the notes was 81.23 per cent., & the money-lender knew the borrower was a lady of some means but made no further inquiry on the matter :—Held : (1) the handing over of the cheques formed a term of the contract & must be mentioned in the memorandum of the contract of loan given in accordance with the provisions of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6. As they were not referred to therein, the loan was unenforceable by the money-lender; (2) the transaction was harsh & unconscionable within sect. 10 of the Act & the interest must be reduced to 25 per cent.—*COLLINGS v. In the memorandum of the contract dated May 25, 1933, the loan was stated to be payable with interest at the rate of £240 per cent. per annum & to be made upon the terms of a promissory note of the same date, a copy of which was attached. The promissory note contained a promise to pay £500 together with interest at the rate of £240 per cent. per annum "such sum of £500 to be paid together with interest then due by consecutive monthly instalments of £325 each" on June 25 & July 25, 1933 :—Held : the rate of interest was incorrectly stated in the memorandum & therefore the contract was unenforceable. Having regard to the form of the memorandum the rate of interest could not be treated as having been calculated in accordance with the provisions in Sched. I. to Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), & in order that the instalments should include interest at £240 per cent. per annum the second instalment must have been £330 & not £325.

—[.]—A borrower, who had had several loan transactions with a firm of registered money-lenders, was adjudicated bkpt. in July, 1933, & the money-lenders proved in that bkpcy. for £257 in respect of principal & interest but received no dividend in respect thereof. In May, 1934, the borrower applied to the money-lenders for a loan of £100, & on the money-lenders refusing to make the loan, offered that £50 out of the £100 advance should be retained by the money-lenders to compensate them in part for the loss they sustained in his bkpcy. The money-lenders thereupon made the loan, two cheques for £50 each being made out by the money-lenders, one of which was endorsed by the borrower & returned to the money-lenders. The memorandum & promissory note, which were signed by the borrower, stated that an advance of £100 had been made with interest at the rate of £64 per cent. per annum to be repaid by fourteen consecutive monthly instalments of £10 each. In the default clause in the memorandum the principal sum was stated to be £140, but the typist who typed the document said in an affidavit that she typed £140 by mistake & that the sum ought to have been £100. The money-lenders brought an action on the promissory note on a failure by the borrower to pay more than one monthly instalment:—Held: the memorandum did not contain all the terms of the contract, inasmuch as the amount actually lent was only £50, & therefore the amount of the principal of the loan was not correctly stated according to the definition of “principal” in Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 15; the sum of £50, given by the borrower or retained by the money-lenders, was an amount in excess of the principal, paid to the money-lender in consideration of the loan, & was therefore “interest” within the definition of “interest” in sect. 15, & accordingly that the interest charged on the loan was not truly stated in the memorandum, & therefore the contract for the repayment of the money lent to the borrower by the money-lenders was, under sect. 6 (1) of the Act of 1927, unenforceable.

Per SLESSER & ROCHE, L.JJ., the insertion in the default clause of the memorandum of £140 instead of £100 was a material error which would invalidate the transaction.—DUNN TRUST, LTD. v. FEETHAM, [1936] 1 K. B. 22; 105 L. J. K. B. 52; 154 L. T. 53, C. A.

—[.]—In each of two money-lending transactions secured by a promissory note for payment of £70 by fourteen monthly instalments the memorandum of the contract stated that “the amount of principal being advanced in respect of the said promissory note for £70 is £50, & the interest charged of £20 is equivalent to interest at the rate of £64 per cent. per annum.” The rate of interest was in fact calculated in accordance with the provisions of Sched. I. to Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21). After default had been made in payment of instalments the assignees for value of the promissory notes, who were also money-lenders, brought proceedings to recover the balance of principal & interest:—Held: the contracts & promissory notes were unenforceable having regard to sect. 6 (2) of the Act, because the memorandum failed to state that the rate of interest was calculated in accordance with the provisions of Sched. I. to the Act.—MASON & WOOD, LTD. v. GREENE, [1936] 2 K. B. 370; [1936] 2 All E. R. 509; 105 L. J. K. B. 774; 155 L. T. 11; 52 T. L. R. 636; 80 Sol. Jo. 510, C. A.

Although the borrower does not appear to the writ, or does not further defend the action, the onus is still on pltf. money-lender to satisfy the ct. on these two points. He must therefore prove a transaction which comes within Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, & consequently he must prove a note or memorandum of the contract made in accordance with that sect.

353u. — Renewal—Must appear on second memorandum.—When the time for payment of an original loan granted by a money-lender has expired without complete repayment, there is no objection to extending the time for repayment on altered terms by treating the old loan as paid off by means of a new loan on the altered terms, provided that the fact that this is being done is shown on the face of the second memorandum signed by the borrower before the new security is given. Such a memorandum is signed by the borrower before the money is lent within the meaning of sect. 6 (1) of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (1).

At the time when the second memorandum is signed neither a cheque nor cash need be handed over by the money-lender to the borrower & then returned. Where a transaction is the renewal of an old loan, the fact that it is such ought to be set out in the memorandum in order to comply with sect. 6.

(2) If the transaction between a money-lender & a borrower is unenforceable against the borrower by reason of non-compliance by the money-lender with the requirements of sect. 6, for example, by the omission from the memorandum of the date on which the loan was made, it is equally unenforceable against a person who has guaranteed the payment of the debt.

353w. — Real transaction must be stated.]—

Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: The memorandum of the transaction of Aug. 5, 1931, was void because it did not state the real transaction. It contained an admission by the mother that £575 was then due & owing by her, whereas at that date nothing was due, & if it were assumed that the principal & pro rata interest were then to be paid, the amount payable would only be £535, & there would be a bonus to the money-lenders of about £40 for accepting payment before it was due, which ought to have been stated on the face of the memorandum, but was not. In effect the money-lender was obtaining interest on interest, which was prohibited under Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 7.—LANCASHIRE LOANS, LTD. v. BLACK, [1934] 1 K. B. 380; 103 L. J. K. B. 129; 150 L. T. 304, C. A.

Loan on security of bill of sale
Number of instalments payable not stated in memorandum.]—A loan was made by registered money-lenders on the security of a bill of sale given by the borrower on his furniture. The transaction was a money-lending transaction within the meaning of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21). The memorandum of the transaction stated the date of the loan, the amount of the principal advanced & the rate of interest charged. The bill of sale, which was in the form required by Sched. to Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882 (c. 43), was also set out verbatim in the memorandum. Under the bill of sale the borrower agreed to pay to the lenders the principal sum advanced together with the interest then due by equal monthly payments of £3 to be paid on a specified date of each month until the whole amount including principal & interest was repaid. Neither the bill of sale nor the memorandum stated the number of instalments that had to be paid. Objection was taken that the contract was unenforceable, as the memorandum did not contain all the terms of the contract because the number of instalments payable had not been stated therein:—Held: the contract was enforceable, as the memorandum set out the particulars specifically required by Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (2), & also set out verbatim the bill of sale, which was in the statutory form, & accordingly contained all the terms of the contract. What had not been set out was the effect of those terms according to the decisions of the cts. in various cases, but the statute did not require that to be set out in the memorandum.—*SIMMONS v. The statutory form of such a bill of sale sets out that personal chattels thereby assigned shall not be liable to seizure for any other than five specified causes:—Held: the memorandum did not contain all the terms of the contract in that it did not specify upon which of the above grounds the goods could be seized, & therefore the contract was unenforceable.—*MITCHENER v. It was contended that the memorandum was insufficient, since it did not state the power of seizure & sale contained in the bill of sale. It was further contended that, although in the bill of sale the consideration was not truly stated, pltf. was estopped from raising that point, because he knew the true facts at the time of execution:—Held: (1) it is not necessary that the power of seizure & sale under the bill of sale should be specifically set out in the memorandum of loan where the borrower receives a copy of the bill of sale; (2) pltf. was not estopped from alleging that the consideration was not truly stated in the bill of sale; (3) similarly, a borrower would not be estopped from asserting the inaccuracy of statements in the memorandum of loan under Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, although he knew the true facts.—HOARE v. ADAM SMITH (LONDON), LTD., [1938] 4 All E. R. 283.

353aa. — Loan to company—Signature.—A co. which had from time to time borrowed large sums from moneylenders, on Dec. 1, 1936, entered into a contract with the lenders by which the lenders agreed to advance £4,950, the sum then owed for principal & arrears of interest, on the security of a promissory note for £4,950 with interest at the rate of 27½ per cent. per annum, repayable as to £1,970 by specified instalments, the balance of £2,980 with accrued interest to be paid off on Feb. 1, 1937. In default of the payment of any instalment the whole amount was to become due & payable. The memorandum of the contract & the accompanying promissory note were both signed by a director & the secretary of the co. "for & on behalf of the co.," & the co.'s seal was not affixed to the contract. The new loan in fact consolidated previous loans & the interest thereon, & the memorandum authorised & requested the lenders to retain the sum of £4,950 in repayment of outstanding balances of accounts owing. The co. defaulted in payment of the instalments, & the lenders, having sued them, obtained leave to sign judgment for £4,695 10s., but did not actually sign it. The co. having passed a resolution for voluntary winding-up, the lenders lodged with the liquidators a proof for £4,804 19s. 8d., balance of principal & interest then due. The liquidator rejected the proof as not being in accordance with the provisions of Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (1), (2), & sect. 9 (2):—Held: (1) the contract having been duly executed in accordance with Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 29, the memorandum was "signed personally by the borrower" in accordance with Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (1), there being nothing in Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), prescribing that a moneylending transaction with a co. must be perfected by a memorandum under seal; (2) the document showed on its face that the loan of £4,950 was a consolidating loan, & therefore the memorandum contained all the particulars required to satisfy Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (2), notwithstanding that part of the loan might have been or was attributable to interest accrued due on previous loans; (3) the statement accompanying the affidavit verifying appts. proof contained all the particulars necessary to satisfy sect. 9 (2) of the same Act.—Re BRITISH GAMES, LTD., [1938] Ch. 240; [1938] 1 All E. previous loan—Necessity for disclosure.—Where a borrower obtains a loan from a registered moneylender, & it is a term or condition of the contract between him & the moneylender that the outstanding balance of a former loan shall be repaid by the borrower out of the new loan, failure to include that term or condition in the note or memorandum required by Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, renders the contract & the security (in this case a bill of sale) unenforceable.—*EGAN v. 353cc. — Statement of one promissory note—Loan secured by two notes.—A moneylender lent to a borrower £100 as one loan, taking as security two promissory notes for £50 each, exactly alike in date & wording. The memorandum of the transaction signed by the borrower described the security as "a promissory note." The moneylender obtained judgment against the borrower, on whose non-compliance with a bkpcy. notice he presented a petition in the county ct. The registrar made a receiving order, against which the borrower appealed:—Held: by the Div. Ct. in Bkpcy., allowing the appeal, the misdescription of the security as "a promissory note" instead of "two promissory notes" was an error which prevented the memorandum from complying with Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21).—Re DEBTOR (No. 18 of 1937), [1938] Ch. 645; [1938] 2 All E. 353hh. — Appropriation of payments to—After default—Whether compound interest.—A borrower was in debt to a money-lender in the sum of £301 19s. 10d. On June 14, 1935, he received a further sum that made his total indebtedness £500. The memorandum stated that the principal sum was to be applied in discharge of the previous advance. It also stated that the interest upon the sum of £500 was to be £200, & was at the rate of 34.65 per cent. per annum. The repayment was to be made in equal instalments, which were appropriated to principal & interest in proportions other than that of the principal to the total interest. If an instalment was more than seven days overdue, the whole balance of the principal was then to become due with interest to date. The memorandum then stated: "the principal sum outstanding in the schedule of repayments shall become immediately repayable, together with the instalment of interest due as shown in the schedule aforesaid, together with simple interest at the rate per cent. per annum aforesaid on the sum payable (whether for principal or interest) until payment, & such interest shall not be reckoned as part of the interest charged in respect of the loan." In accordance with this clause pltf. took the amount of principal & interest due at the date of default, namely £451 2s. 10d., & charged interest thereon until the date of the first payment on account. Such interest amounted to £173 0s. 5d. The payment then made of £169 9s. 7d. was appropriated to interest, leaving the principal sum of £451 2s. 10d. still due & a balance of £3 10s. 10d. of interest still due. Further interest was afterwards charged on the principal sum of £451 2s. 10d.:—Held: (1) the loan was one at an actual rate of interest, & the provisions of Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 15 (2), which required instalments to be allocated to principal & interest in the proportion of the principal to the total interest, did not apply; (2) the memorandum sufficiently showed that nature of the transaction in respect of the past loan; (3) the appropriation of payments after default to interest did not amount to a charge of interest upon interest contrary to the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 7.—MUTUAL LOAN FUND ASSOCN., LTD. v. SANDERSON, [1937] 1 All E. R. 380.

353jj. Insufficient memorandum—Right of plaintiff to return of security—Without being put on terms.—Upon a loan by moneylenders, the borrower deposited with the lenders jewellery alleged to be worth £200. It was admitted that the memorandum of the contract did not comply with the terms of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, & that the contract was therefore unenforceable. The claim was therefore restricted to a claim for the return of the jewellery, & it was contended that pltf. was not entitled to such return without paying all sums due under the contract of loan, as he was asking for the exercise of the equitable jurisdiction of the ct.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the return of the jewellery without being put upon terms, as in seeking to enforce such terms deft. was seeking to enforce the loan contract, which, by reason of the statute, was unenforceable.—*COHEN v. 377a. Before proceedings taken by money-lender for recovery of money lent.—(1) A county ct. has jurisdiction under Money-lenders Act, 1900 (c. 51), s. 1 (2), to entertain an application by a borrower from a registered money-lender to reopen a money-lending transaction, only when the amount of the money lent, whether repayable by instalments or otherwise, without the addition of any claims arising under any agreement to pay interest or an amount charged for "expenses, inquiries, fines, bonus, premium, renewals, or any other charges," is within the jurisdiction of the county ct.

(2) If this condition is fulfilled, the ct. may entertain the application, although the money-lender has not taken any proceedings to recover the money lent, & although the time has not come for taking such proceedings.—CROSSINGHAM v. PARK, [1928] 1 K. B. 330; 96 L. J. K. B. 1036; 137 L. T. 651; 43 T. L. R. 647, D. C.

381a. — — —.—(1) Held: in Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 5 (3), the words "no person shall act as such agent or canvasser" must be construed as meaning "no person shall act as an agent or canvasser employed by a money-lender or any person on his behalf for the purpose of inviting any person to borrow money or to enter into any transaction involving the borrowing of money from a money-lender." The Act does not, therefore, prohibit canvassing or touting for this purpose, where the canvasser acts without the authority or mandate of the money-lender to whom he is introducing a customer.

(2) Although a rate of interest on a loan not exceeding 48 per cent. does not carry the legal presumption introduced by sect. 10 of the Act that the transaction is harsh & unconscionable; yet, where in addition to his contract for repayment of the loan the borrower gives a bill of sale over his furniture of ample security for such repayment, a rate of 48 per cent. is, in such circumstances, sl. Although security unenforceable.—By a mtge. bond resp. mtged. certain property therein specified as security for the repayment of sums of money lent to him by applts. upon certain promissory notes. The promissory notes admittedly did not comply with the provisions of sect. 10 (1) of the Ceylon Money-lending Ordinance, 1918, inasmuch as they did not state the "interest, premium, or charges" deducted or paid in advance, & they were consequently unenforceable under sub-sect. (2) of sect. 10 of the Ordinance. It was further admitted that the default was not due to inadvertence, & that the promissory notes must be taken to be fictitious to the knowledge of the lender within the meaning of sect. 14 of the Ordinance. On a claim by applts. to recover the sums lent on the security of the bond & upon the promissory notes:—Held: although the promissory notes were notes in which the amounts stated as due were to the knowledge of the lender fictitious within the meaning of sect. 14 of the Ordinance, & could not be enforced by reason of the provisions of sect. 10, the trial judge had jurisdiction under sect. 2 of the Ordinance to re-open the transactions & to take an account between the lender & the person sued. The provisions of sect. 13 of the Ordinance, which make the taker of a fictitious promissory note liable to a penalty, do not prevent the ct. from re-opening the transaction & taking the account under the provisions of sect. 2. Where, however, the trial judge exercises his discretion & re-opens the transaction & takes the account, the unenforceable promissory notes must not be admitted in evidence to prove the loans.—*SOCKALINGHAM CHETTIAR v. - 20a. Distinguishes mortgage for sale.—In a transaction of sale the vendor is not entitled to get back the subject-matter of the sale by returning to the purchaser the money that has passed between them. In the case of a mtge. or charge, the mtgor. is entitled, until he has been foreclosed, to get back the subject-matter of the mtge. or charge by returning to the mtgee. the money that has passed between them. The second essential difference is that if the mtgee. realises the subject-matter of the mtge. for a sum more than sufficient to repay him, with interest & the costs, the money that has passed between him & the mtgor. he has to account to the mtgor. for the surplus. If the purchaser sells the subject-matter of the purchase, & realises a profit, of course he has not got to account to the vendor for the profit. Thirdly, if the mtgee. realises the mtge. property for a sum that is insufficient to repay him the money that he has paid to the mtgor., together with interest & costs, then the mtgee. is entitled to recover from the mtgor. the balance of the money, either because there is a covenant by the mtgor. to repay the money advanced by the mtgee., or because of the existence of the simple contract debt which is created by the mere fact of the advance having been made. If the purchaser were to resell the purchased property at a price which was insufficient to recoup him the money that he paid to the vendor, of course he would not be entitled to recover the balance from the vendor (ROMER, L.J.).—Re GEORGE INGLEFIELD, LTD., [1933] Ch. 1, 27; 101 L. 196a. Further advances—What are.]—By two memoranda of charge the testator charged in favour of his two sisters his share in an estate in Dominica to secure certain stated sums & such further sums as should be advanced to him by them or either of them. The two sisters at various times deposited securities belonging to them respectively with the testator's bank by way of collateral security for the testator's loan account. After testator's death the bank realised these securities & applied the moneys in discharge of testator's loan account:—Held: the moneys so applied by the bank were in the nature of further sums advanced to testator by his two sisters within the meaning of the two memoranda of charge.—Re SMITH, LAWRENCE

The order was not registered until Oct. 8, 1923, & meanwhile, on May 23, 1923, a mechanics' lien was registered. When the title issued, in pursuance of the vesting order, in G.'s name, the mechanics' lien was left off. On Oct. 12, 1923, a bank registered a mtge. dated July 26, 1923, which was given & taken to replace a previous security by way of assignment by G. to the bank of the moneys owing under his mtge. & as a condition of the bank extending time to G. for payment of his then existing debt. The bank had no notice of the lien as a registered interest or of the error made with respect to it:—Held: on a reference under sect. 159 of Land Titles Act, R.S.A., 1922, as to priority between the bank's mtge. & the mechanics' lien (no question as to priority under the Mechanics' Lien Act being raised) the mtge. had priority, sect. 175 of Land Titles Act concluding the matter, in the absence of fraud or express notice.—Re RICHIE CO., LTD., [1935] 1 W. o i. ———.]—Under Act Respecting Homesteads, s. 2, the registrar cannot register a mtge. of homestead land if the same is not signed by mtgor.'s wife, although in a paper attached to the mtge. she purports to have relinquished her homestead rights in favour of mtgee.—Re LAND TITLES ACT, [1919] 1 W. W. R. 711.—CAN.

o ii. ——— & acknowledgment.]—A mtge. by a husband of his homestead was in fact consented to by his wife of her own free will & knowing what it was. To it was attached her written consent & a certificate by a comr. of her acknowledgment of execution of it of her own free will, etc. Being on its face in compliance with the Dower Act, 1917, it was registered. The facts, however, were that the wife had not made before the comr. the acknowledgment to which he certified. The husband had participated in this breach of the statute in order, apparently, to save his wife, who was in ill-health, the inconvenience of going from the farm to the comr.'s office:—Held: since the wife's consent was not evidenced in the manner prescribed by the statute, the mtge. was, in this sense, not made with her consent & was null & void as against her dower right; there were no grounds for holding her estopped. But since the husband by his conduct had induced the mtgee. to believe that his wife's consent had been properly & regularly given & the mtgee. had on the strength of this belief parted with the property for the payment of which the mtge. was security, the husband was estopped from setting up her lack of effective consent as a defence to an action on the mtge. The mtgor., after the date of the mtge., moved on to the land two wooden granaries which were built on skids & were moved about the land as the farming operations required. The mtgor. defaulted & gave the mtgee. a quit-claim deed & the latter sold the land to deflt., who took possession of the granaries & moved them on to other lands. The mtgor. sued for their value, & his action was dismissed. On appeal:—Held: even if the granaries retained their character of chattels, they had become part of the mtge. security by virtue of the word "buildings" in the clause above quoted, & since it was the intention of the quit-claim deed that the mtgee. should have all its security the deed divested the mtgor. of any interest he had in the granaries.—HERRIOTT v. CRONIN, [1935] 1 W. W. R. 571; 2 D. L. R. 637; 43 Man. L. R. 71.—CAN.

The trust deed also contained a capitalisation clause, the effect of which was that if any interest should be in arrear for a period of six months, it should be added to the principal sum due under the debenture, & treated as principal money for all purposes. The debentures were expressed to become payable on Jan. 11, 1938. The mtgor. claimed that stamp duty was payable not on a limited sum, but as on an amount "uncertain or without limit":—Held: the amount which the trust deed was intended to secure was a sum readily ascertainable by arithmetical calculation, & therefore, was not "without any limit" within Sched. 1 of Stamp Duties Act, 1882, & that duty should be paid in respect of £100,000.—*CASCADE BREWERY CO., LTD. v. 732a. Service of notice to quit—Whether Small Tenements Recovery Act, 1838 (c. 74), applicable.—A mtge. deed contained a clause by which the mtgor. attorned tenant from year to year to the mtgees. at a nominal rent. It was also provided that, if the mtgor. made default in payments under the deed, the mtgees. might give to the mtgor. seven days' notice in writing to determine the tenancy created by the deed. The mtgor. defaulted & the mtgees. served on him a notice to quit. The mtgor. refused to give up possession:—Held: the term or interest of the mtgor. in the mortgaged property had been "duly determined by a legal notice to quit or otherwise" within sect. 1 of above Act, & therefore, justices had power to issue a warrant to give possession of the property to the mtgees.—*DUDLEY & DISTRICT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY v. By a tenancy agreement dated Oct. 8, 1935, defts. granted a lease of part of certain premises included in the legal charge, from Sept. 29, 1935, upon a yearly tenancy. Pltfs. were not asked for & did not give their consent to the execution by defts. of the tenancy agreement & no counterpart thereof had at any time been delivered to pltfs. in accordance with the requirements of sect. 99 (11) of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20):—Held: defts., in granting the lease of Oct. 8, were not exercising their statutory power, & consequently they did not commit any breach of the covenant contained in the legal charge of Oct. 1.—*IRON TRADES EMPLOYERS INSURANCE ASSOCN., LTD. v. The mtgor. effected great improvements on the mtgd. premises which might increase the rateable value of the premises. The mtgee. claimed that the improvements & the covenant had rendered the rent under the lease not the best rent reasonably obtainable in the circumstances, & the lease was void under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 99:—Held: in the absence of any covenant by the landlord to effect improvements which might increase the rateable value of the property or of any actual increase of the rateable value the covenant to pay the rates, though unusual in the case of a lease for a long term, was not sufficient to render the rent reserved not the best rent reasonably obtainable, & upon the evidence the rent reserved was, having regard to the condition of the property at the time when the lease was granted, the best rent reasonably obtainable, & the action by the mtgee. failed.—*COUTTS & CO. v. 772 i. What leases within powers—Lease with no condition of re-entry—Void.—A mtgor. in possession made an agreement in writing whereby he let to a tenant a public-house & dwelling together with certain lands "as a yearly tenancy at a yearly rent of £35 payable quarterly in advance." The agreement provided that the tenancy should commence from a certain date, & that the tenant should pay the first quarter's rent on that date, & that he would "punctually pay the rent thereafter according to the terms of this agreement." The agreement also provided that the tenancy might be determined by either party giving to the other three months' notice in writing. There was no condition of re-entry on the rent not being paid:—Held: although the undertaking to pay the rent contained in the agreement might be a sufficient compliance with Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 13 (7), as to payment of the rent, since the agreement, not being under seal, there could be no covenant therein, yet the omission of a condition of re-entry on the rent not being paid invalidated the agreement as against an incumbrancer, the provision in the agreement entitling the landlord to determine the tenancy by a three months' notice to quit not being sufficient to satisfy the condition.—*MURPHY & CO. v. 784 vii. ———.]—Where a lease made by a mtgor. is subsequent to the mtg., the mtgee. has not the right at common law to require the tenant to pay the rent to him & to sue for its recovery unless the relationship of the landlord & tenant has been created between them by mutual agreement; & the mere fact of the tenant remaining in possession after notice from the mtgee. to pay the rent to him is not evidence of such an agreement. The provision in Real Property Act, R. S. M., 1913, s. 114, that a mtgee. upon default by the mtgor. "may enter into possession of the mortgaged or encumbered land by receiving the rents & profits thereof," does not give the mtgee. a right of action for rent against a tenant holding under a lease made by the mtgor. after the mtg.—*AIKENHEAD v. 946 iv. ———.]—Roman-Dutch law as applied in Ceylon recognises a principle which bears a close resemblance to the principle of English law embodied in the maxim "once a mtg. always a mtg."

A syndicate purchased forest land in Ceylon & conveyed it by deed to resp., who had provided the greater part of the purchase-price. A second deed of the same date recited the facts, & provided that resp. should hold as absolute owner with power to manage & to sell the lands for the best available price, approval to be obtained if the price was less than Rs. 100 per acre, & to apply all moneys realised in payment of sums due to him for purchase-price or management expenses, & that he should pay over the balance pro rata, according to their interests, among the syndicate. A year later, before the lands had been sold, members of the syndicate sued claiming to redeem. Resp. had settled with all plifs. except two, who were represented by applt.:—Held: upon the true construction of the two deeds they created a security for money advanced, there being imposed upon resp. duties & obligations of the nature of trusts, & that applt. was entitled to redeem the shares of the two plifs. on payment of their rateable proportion of the amount due, which was to be ascertained on taking accounts as directed.—*SAMINATHAN CHETTY v. 948 v. ———.]—M., the registered proprietor & licensee of hotel property, obtained a loan from a brewery co., & as security gave a mtg. of the freehold & a lease for a term of fifteen years. The co. then gave M. a sub-lease for the same term less one day & M. mtgd. the sub-lease to the co. The sub-lease contained a brewer's tie that the sub-lessee would deal exclusively with the sub-lessor for all liquors & would not during the term of the lease purchase or obtain any liquors from any other person. B. subsequently purchased from M. the unencumbered fee simple & the unexpired term of the sub-lease. B. obtained an advance from a bank & repayment was guaranteed by the brewery co. The mtges. over the freehold & sub-lease were released & M. transferred to B. the sub-lease & the freehold free of mtg. B. then gave a mtg. over the sub-lease to the brewery co. to secure the moneys owing to the bank. B. paid off the loan from the bank & asserted that he held the property free of the brewer's tie. In an action by the brewery co. claiming that the lease & sub-lease were binding on B.:—Held: the lease & sub-lease were not binding on B.—QUEENSLAND BREWERY, LTD. v. BAKER, [1936] Q. S. sn. Agreement for future advances.—Where a mtg. is for a definite amount & also covers future advance but the amount outstanding & secured by the mtg. may be ascertained at any time, & on payment thereof there is nothing to prevent the mtgor. from getting back the mortgaged property & enjoying it just as he did before making the mtg., it cannot be said that the mtg. constitutes a clog on the equity of redemption.—*STEPHEN & STEPHEN v. 995a. Mortgage including policies—Redemption postponed to date later than maturity of policies.—A mtge. of land together with an endowment policy on the life of the mtgor., made in 1926, contained mutual covenants between mtgor. & mtgee. that the principal sum should be allowed to remain on the security for a period of twenty years, or until the earlier death of the mtgor., & so long as interest was punctually paid, & there was no breach of covenant, should not be called in by the mtgee. during the same period. The covenants in the mtge. were made applicable to a further charge given in 1926, by which another endowment policy was mortgaged. This policy would mature in 1942, & the further charge provided that if the mtgor. survived the date of maturity, the policy moneys with profits should be paid to the mtgee. in reduction of the mtge. debt. The other policy also would mature before the date for redemption:—Held: the postponement of redemption for twenty years, together with the other provisions which made the policies in effect irredeemable, was a clog on the equity, & the mtgor. was entitled to judgment in an action for redemption.—DAVIS v. SYMONS, [1934] Ch. 442; 103 L. J. Ch. 311; 151 L. T. 96; 78 Sol. Jo. 297.

995b. Forty years.—A co. owning a considerable area of freehold land in the county of London mortgaged it by deed in 1931 to a friendly society to secure a loan of £310,000. By the deed the co. (plffs. in the action) by clause 1 covenanted (inter alia) with the friendly society (defts.) to repay to them the principal moneys so borrowed with interest by eighty half-yearly instalments of principal & interest combined on the two half-yearly days therein mentioned. There was the usual proviso in case of default. By clause 2 plffs. demised the mortgaged land to defts. for a long term of years with the usual proviso for cesser. There was a further covenant by pltf. co. with defts. that if pltf. co. should (inter alia) pay defts. the sum so borrowed with the appropriate interest by the instalments & on the half-yearly days mentioned in the deed, & should not have committed any breach of any covenant in the deed or any breach of any obligation, statutory or otherwise, binding on plffs., then defts. would accept payment of the sum so lent on mtge.

by the instalments & in the manner specified in the deed & would not require payment of such principal moneys otherwise than by such instalments. Plffs. being desirous of redeeming the property so mortgaged by the repayment of the principal moneys borrowed, notwithstanding the stipulation contained in the deed as to the repayment by eighty half-yearly instalments, sought by action a declaration that they were so entitled to redeem at any time on giving the usual notice. Several questions arose for the decision of the ct.—namely: (1) whether, on the true construction of the deed, plffs. were entitled to redeem the property mortgaged on giving the usual six months' notice; (2) if the answer should be in the negative, whether the provision in the mtge. deed postponing the right of redemption for a period of forty years was void as infringing the rule against perpetuities; (3) if the answer to this question should be in the negative, were the provisions of the mtge. deed so unreasonable as to constitute a clog on the equity of redemption, & (4) whether the mtge. deed was a debenture within Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 380, & therefore whether sect. 74 of that Act applied:—Held: (1) on the true construction of the mtge. deed pltf. co. was not entitled to pay off the mtge. money on giving the usual six months' notice; (2) the condition in defeasance of the term of years created by the mtge. deed did not infringe the perpetuity rule, the rule against perpetuities not being applicable to mtges.; (3) having regard to the unusual provisions of the mtge. deed, they were, from the point of view of the mtgor., onerous & unreasonable & constituted a clog on the equity; (4) sect. 74 of Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), does not apply to an ordinary mtge., & the sect. therefore did not prevent the application of the equitable doctrine regarding unreasonable postponement of the period for redemption to the mtge. deed of 1931. Pltf. co. was therefore entitled to the declaration sought.—KNIGHTSBRIDGE ESTATES TRUST, LTD. v. BYRNE, [1938] Ch. 741; [1938] 2 All E. R. 414; 159 L. T. 55; 54 T. L. R. 749; 82 Sol. & in 1913, the trustees having called in the mtge., the co. made default & the trustees appointed a receiver. In 1916 the co. was dissolved, the income of the property being at that time insufficient to meet the mtge. interest, & nothing was done in respect of the equity of redemption as the liquidator considered it to be of no value. The value of the property having since largely increased, the surviving trustee claimed to be entitled to the property absolutely, & the Crown claimed the equity of redemption as bona vacantia.—Held: (1) Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 296, did not apply, as that section was not retrospective; (2) after the disappearance of the legal entity which had had the right of redemption the Crown was entitled to the property as bona vacantia.

(3) The equity of redemption, then, was a right of property which could be disposed of by the mtgor. In a general sense the mtgee. was not a trustee for the mtgor.; their interests were antagonistic, though the mtgee. might be trustee in a limited sense—that was, in respect of surplus purchase-moneys after his own claims had been satisfied (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—*Re WELLS, SWINBURNE-HANHAM v. On Aug. 11, 1932, the co., in consideration of £24,000 executed in favour of the same lenders & in respect of different property, a mtge. containing a like clause, in which the lenders agreed not to enforce repayment before Sept. 29, 1937, the principal sum being deemed to be due for the purposes of the exercise of the statutory powers on Dec. 25, 1932. In the course of correspondence the lenders, in answer to the co., wrote that they would be prepared to accept repayment of both sums "on reasonable notice." On Jan. 23, 1933, they wrote that they would be prepared to accept three months' notice, & on Jan. 24 the co. wrote giving notice of intention to pay off the mtges. on Apr. 25. On Apr. 20, during a telephone conversation between clerks of the co.'s solrs. & the lenders' solrs., it was made clear that completion would not take place on Apr. 25, & the lenders' solrs.' clerk acquiesced & asked to be informed when it would take place as soon as the co.'s solrs. knew. It did not take place on Apr. 25, & on that date the lenders' solrs. wrote informing the co.'s solrs. that as the mtges. had not been redeemed in accordance with the notice interest in lieu of notice would have to be paid on completion; & on Apr. 27 they wrote that the lenders would accept interest up to the actual date of repayment, plus three months' interest in lieu of notice, if redemption took place "not later than Thursday of next week." On May 10 the lenders' solrs. refused the co.'s solrs.' tender of a sum representing principal & interest to date on both mtges.:—Held: (1) nothing in the mtges. freed the co. from the rule of equity that six months' notice must be given of intention to pay off a mtge., or six months' interest in lieu thereof be paid; (2) when failure to pay off on the date fixed in the notice is unexplained, a new notice must be given or interest in lieu thereof be paid, but the new notice need not in every case be six months' notice; (3) in the present case only a "reasonable notice" was required after Apr. 25, 1933, & three months was a "reasonable notice."—*CROMWELL PROPERTY INVESTMENT CO., LTD. v.
